WASHINGTON DEVOURS SHINY NEW RAISES FOR MINIMUM-WAGE WORKERS

By Dustin Hurst | Watchdog.org

Some 22,000 Montanans were likely delighted New Year's Day, realizing they'd just received an overnight raise in the form of a cost-of-living hike in the minimum wage.

Unfortunately for the state's lowest-paid workers, the raises won't mean all the much: the payroll-tax expiration okayed by Congress will eat up all the new money.

I'll TAKE THAT: Montana's minimum wage workers will hand their shiny new raises straight to Uncle Sam.

The state government giveth and the federal government taketh away.

In fact, thanks to the payroll-tax hike, minimum wage workers will make less this year than they did in 2012, raise included.

On New Year's Day, the state's minimum wage jumped from $7.65 an hour to $7.80, a 15-cent increase. But just as the sparkly ball fell from high above Times Square, the federal payroll tax increased from 4.2 percent to 6.2 percent.

It might not sound like much, but the hike, expected to generate more than $125 billion this year, will affect paychecks nationwide. For example, a worker making around $50,000 this year will see about $1,000 less in take-home pay, or about $83 less each month.

The impact on lower-income workers is far more dramatic. Consider that at $7.65 an hour and the previous 4.2 percent payroll-tax rate, workers would bring home $15,244 before state income taxes and other federal levies. The new 6.2 percent rate will eat up all of the cost-of-living increase and then some: those same workers will bring home $15,219, or $25 less than if 2012's policies remained in effect.

That might surprise these 22,000 workers, some of whom apparently had big plans for their newfound fortunes.

Kaylee Freight, a 21-year-old from Hawaii, works at the Helena Quizno's. She celebrated the slight raise to the Associated Press this week, telling the news outlet that something is better than nothing.

"I'm going to pay off my car faster," she explained.

But for workers like Freight and others, the payroll tax, a Social Security funding mechanism, raises will pay for benefits later in life. (The Wall Street Journal offers this fun calculator to project how much more you'll pay in taxes this year.)

Myriad groups across the political spectrum detest the return of the higher payroll tax, originally passed in late 2010. The Economic Policy Institute, a liberal Washington, D.C. think tank, says the tax's re-implementation will lessen economic growth by about 1 percent and kill about 1 million jobs.

SILENCE: Hatzius burned Congress for ignoring the $126 billion payroll tax hike.

Goldman Sachs economist Jan Hatzius expressed his fear over the tax hike in October.

"We are surprised that neither party has seriously challenged the case for near-term fiscal retrenchment," he told Business Insider. "In particular, the expiration of the $126 billion payroll tax cut (1 percent of disposable income) is almost universally accepted."

Hatzius figured the return of the higher tax rate will shave about half a percent from the country's economic growth this year alone.

Matthew Iglesias, a liberal blogger over at Slate, urged Congress to re-deploy the tax cut as a form of economic stimulus for the working class.

"Low payroll taxes boost the economy in several ways," he wrote. "For starters, the holiday puts more money into the pockets of virtually all Americans. For many of us, that means slightly higher purchases of domestically produced goods and services than we'd otherwise be making. For households constrained by excessive borrowing in the bubble years, it means speedier repayment of debts and a faster return to normalcy. For employers considering expansion, it also means slightly higher real wages for workers at no higher cost to the employer. That means at the margin it makes more sense to hire. So you've got more demand, faster deleveraging, and more hiring capacity. What's not to like?"

The conservative Heritage Foundation, on the other hand, bucks the trend, believing the payroll tax holiday did nothing to create jobs or kick-start the slumping economy. The group says the focus should rest on reducing labor costs for employers.

"There are tax policies the federal government could pursue to increase private-sector job creation," Heritage analyst J.D. Foster wrote. "The key is to reduce the costs and uncertainties that employers face, not the taxes that employees pay."

Despite their distaste for the payroll-tax cut as a job creator, Heritage as a whole believes lawmakers should have renewed it, if only to give workers and businesses more tax certainty this year.

There's a silver lining for Freight and other Montana workers. Without the 15-cent cost-of-living raise to partially offset the tax hike, minimum-wage earners would've pulled down about $923 less than they should bring home in 2013 before other taxes and levies.

DILLON BEAVERS ROUND BALL

The champion Dillon Beavers shot past the Butte Central Maroons last week for a 44-36 victory.

The Beavers scoring started out strong by taking a 12-5 lead and was led by Ben Folsom with 11 points and Troy Scott 10. Caleb Gillis grabbed a rebound and put it back in as the first half came to a close to see the Beavers lead by 21-12. But the highlight was the way the 1-3-1 defense took control of the game and kept it.

The Lady Beavers had their first loss of the conference season to the Butte Central Maroons 39-27. They are now 4-1 overall. The game was close until the fourth quarter that was controlled by the Maroons, until then the Beavers were only trailing by two points 27-25.

The Beavers started the second half by shooting threes. Courtney Linder and Audrey Schurg made two of the three attempts to tie the score at 21. The teams scoring was led by Linder with 11, Cierra Lamey put in 7, Schurg had her 3, Kayla Meine, Rachel Nye and Shay Parke each had a couple to round out the score.

The Beavers boys basketball played Stevensville Saturday at home and came out with the first season loss 52-46. They could not come back enough after getting off to a slow start and falling behind 20-7 in the first quarter. They gained on the deficit in each of the next three quarters but could only come within 4 points at one time.

The Beavers efforts were led by Boyd Jenne with 16 points. He put in four of the Beavers five 3 point shots. Ben Folsom knocked down another 13 points, Austin Carver put in 6, J.D. Ferris had 2, Troy Scott had 5 and Caleb Gillis added 4 to finish off the scoring.

SPEECH, DEBATE AND DRAMA

The Beaverhead County High School Speech, Debate and Drama team got back underway after the Christmas break on Saturday, January 5th by traveling to Manhattan, to compete in the West Valley Invitational meet. The meet was well attended with 24 schools and over 300 competitors.

Elizabeth Griffin came out on top placing first in serious oral interpretation out of 24 entries in this event. "It was wonderful to have Elizabeth do so well this weekend, she has worked very hard and it shows" stated coach Hansen.

Casey Bauer was the top finisher in Expository this weekend, there were 19 entries in this event, and it was very competitive. David Griffin also qualified for finals and placed 8th this weekend. "I am very excited for the divisional tournament, I think these two will challenge each other all weekend and it will be fun to see who comes out on top." continued coach Hansen.

Freshman Sienna Mark had an outstanding meet, qualifying for finals and finishing sixth place out of 15 in the original oratory event. Sienna had very strong preliminary scores, placing first in two of her rounds.

The Drama team also had an excellent weekend, Tea Gibson and Jade D'Esposito finished second in classical theatre, they have just gotten stronger and stronger each weekend.

Josey Creger placed second in the serious solo acting event in which there were 18 entries, Elizabeth Ostler also had an excellent showing placing sixth in this event as well. Samantha Sloan did well but lost a tie breaker to advance her to the final round, and she finished the day in ninth place.

Curen Feliciani and Jennifer Womack competed in Humorous Duo and placed fourth for their effort, there were 13 duos at this meet, Adam Waldorf and Cameron Wentz also qualified for the final round and placed 7th.

"The Drama in the class B and C ranks is very good, we saw quite a bit of competition that we had not seen before this weekend. It was a good tune up for divisional." stated Hansen.

Corey Renfree competed in Humorous Solo for the first time this weekend and did well, Zhawn Kepp competed in Impromptu and

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dillonite Daily
Letter to the Editor

"Rules, Suggestion and Nonsense for the New Year."

1. Always start what you finish.
2. Always put off today what you can do tomorrow.
3. If at first you don't succeed give up-it's not worth the trouble.
4. If it rains on your parade you can always go bowling.
5. Remember, a penny saved is a penny earned but you will still broke.
6. If early to bed and early to rise make you healthy, wealthy and wise, why are you still tired, broke and have a headache.
7. Remember the golden rule, which says, "don't eat the fat meat and keep away from fried foods."
8. Remember the tarnished rule, which says, "eat what you want, drink what you want, your going to die anyway."
9. Remember if the phone rings, there probably is someone on the other end.
10. Sticks and stones may break your bones but words last forever.
11. He/She who controls the remote rules the world.
12. Eat, drink, but don't me merry, let her live her own life.
13. Remember, bad breath isn't good, but it's better than no breath at all.
14. Always forget what you can't remember, it makes for a better day.
15. If you have a bad hair day at least you have hair, a bald day is forever.
16. Don't lick the self adhesive stamps, it's bad for your tongue.
17. Remember, half of the population in the United States is made up of 50 per cent of the people.
18. Have a Happy New Year.
