WELBORN'S WEEKLY LEGISLATIVE REVIEW

HELENA — In an earlier column, I made a commitment to give updates to the State Worker's pay plan as it works its way through the process. On Saturday, the House Appropriations Committee approved a revised state pay plan, which stripped out the 5 percent raises in base pay for state workers in each of the next two years that Gov. Bullock and unions had sought.

The amended version of House Bill 13, which is headed to the House floor for debate, no longer provides for any across-the-board percentage pay hikes for state employees, but rather appropriates a lump sum of $113.7 million for the executive branch to divide up its share in raises. The bill sends specific instructions to the executive branch officials to pay particular attention to the lower pay bands and those who did not receive base pay increase in the biennium beginning July 1, 2011. Or more simply put, it directs the Governor's office to do what I feel is the right, and that's taking care of the State workers that are both in the lowest pay bands, and also have gone the longest with no raise at all. This will help pave the way for the governor to negotiate with the unions to get those people who didn't get (broadband) pay raises and in the lower bands to get higher raises.

Under this proposal, hypothetically, the department could give a worker in a low-payband job an 8 percent raise, and a 1 percent increase to someone making $120,000. Reaction among the different unions varied in tone, with all expressing concern about the 5 percent raises being dropped and the funding reduced.

Many state employees haven't had an across-the-board raise in base pay for four years. However, more than half of the executive branch workers received sizable and separate "broadband" pay hikes in fiscal 2012. This is simply a wrong, it's time to take care of those that have gone the longest without a pay raise.

We saw some people who got a 29 percent raise and a small agency where everyone got 11 percent, I think that frustrates people, I know it frustrates me. The facts are that, many of our public employees — like snowplow drivers, prison guards and nurses have gone five years without a raise.

I'm putting my trust in this administration to do the right thing and give the pay raises to those that haven't received one for a long time and not continue picking winners and losers based on their relationship with the executive branch. We can't change the past, what is done is done, but let's put this behind us by doing the right thing now based on merit and fairness.

Also on the minds of many is HB 14 or better known as the bill to fund the bonding program in Montana for the University System buildings, and other infrastructure projects, which would also include the final phase of Old Main on the Campus of Montana-Western. There are some that want to pair the bonding capacity down and fund certain projects with cash rather than credit. I would support that notion if the money is available, but we have to be reasonable in finding ways to fund infrastructure and building projects in our State. If we continue to do nothing, pretty soon we will be way behind the curve. Investing in our future, and in the future of our children through infrastructure improvements, can and at the same time should be a wise use of our public resources. If it makes sense to fund certain infrastructure projects, I say we should move forward with the reasonable projects. This measure will be debated this week before the Full House.

Montana Western student Harley Fandrich placed seventh in the Division 2 heavyweight class. The finish distinguished Fandrich as a NCWA All American. Originally from Peoria, Ariz., Fandrich is a freshman majoring in education.

University of Montana Western men's basketball standout Jake Owsley helped lead his team to a 24-10 record and the team's best finish in school history with an appearance in the Elite Eight at the (NAIA) national tournament. Since returning home, the junior was honored as an NAIA Second Team All-America pick.

The selections were released on Wednesday, March 20 and are made by the NAIA Men's Basketball Coaches' Association All-America Committee. The picks comprise first, second, third and honorable mention teams. There are 10 members on each of the first three All-America teams. Seven other players from the Frontier Conference were also selected.

Owsley, a 6'8" forward, has been a force for the Bulldogs all season, averaging 11.8 points on 54 percent shooting. He led the conference with 1.55 blocks (seventh in the nation) and Montana Western with 8.3 rebounds (19th in the nation).

In a huge overtime victory at Rocky Mountain College, Owsley set new career-highs with 23 points and 18 rebounds. He averaged 26 minutes for the Bulldogs, started in 27 of the 29 games he played in and had eight double-doubles on the season.

Last season, Owsley was a regular starter for the 25-10 Bulldogs and averaged 19.1 minutes. He put up 151 points, 117 rebounds, 23 blocks, 15 steals and 20 assists. Owsley's leadership was crucial after Montana Western graduated several key seniors last year. The time he put in during the off season was evident in his increase in statistics across the board.

The physical education and health K-12 major hails from Bozeman, Mont. and is the son of Phil and Cris Owsley.
