Welborn's Weekly Legislative Review

One of the major pieces of legislation, still working it's way through the process, is SB 175, Sen. Llew Jones' education funding proposal, I have touched on in this column several times during this legislative session. I will start by saying K-12 education funding is a necessary function of the Legislature as stated in our constitution. It is also important that it is responsibly funded in a way that is accountable to the tax paying public, but it's equally as important to make sure funding ends up in the class room, where is has a positive impact on children. It is also imperative that we move toward a model that incentivizes teachers to deliver a better quality education by rewarding them with a salary based on the job they are doing in the class room. With that said, let's look further into what SB stands to accomplish, the stakeholder groups that have had a hand in creating this proposal, and where the funding source to pay for this comes from.

I share the feelings of many other legislators, of both political parties, that SB175 as the unified vision for K-12 in Montana, has much to offer students, certainly more than the quick & easy piece-meal solutions of limited benefit that are so often proposed. It is also my hope that most Legislators are willing to invest in programs that are carefully crafted to enhance student success, empower local control, reduce burden on local tax payers, and set high accountable standards, therefore I remain hopeful that the 2013 Legislature will follow the schools example and come together behind a powerful "student centric" bipartisan effort.

One of my favorite Ronald Reagan quotes that links to student education is, "Well I've said it before and I'll say it again — America's best days are yet to come. Our proudest moments are yet to be. Our most glorious achievements are just ahead." As long as our state and country remains committed to student achievement, committed to the concept that merit, not privilege remain the base for success, then the American dream is alive and well for the next generation, and Reagan's quote of the "best days yet to come" is indeed valid and speaks well to what this measure seeks to accomplish.

In the words of Lance Melton, Executive Director of the Montana School Boards Association. "This is the first time the education community has joined together in support of one comprehensive bill. We have been working on this for two years to address issues across schools of all sizes."

Despite vast differences in size (2 student schools to 16,250 student schools), in economic base, in physical location, and in political persuasion, Montana schools worked for 18-20 months to unite behind a unified vision for improving student achievement, successfully putting aside their differences in their pursuit of what was best for the students. This diverse group of individual interest, size, economy, and ideology from the Northwestern corner of Montana to the Southeastern set an example of how to avoid the partisan bickering that so often kills real progress. The focus, and willingness by so many caring professionals to put student achievement first, adopt ever higher standards, increased accountability, and embrace technology added up to clarified for me what this bill actually seeks to accomplish.

The bill targets natural resource development dollars to fund schools and freezes local property taxes. Additional bonuses generated by natural resources will be targeted to fix the aging facilities issues faced by many schools across the state.

For anyone wanting to learn more about this proposal, there is a Facebook page been set up under search heading: SB175 Student Achievement Bill with much more detailed explanations on all aspects of the bill.

I will close by saying, I remain committed to public education, as long as its done in a way that meets the criteria I've already mentioned. Does this bill cost more money to implement,? yes it does. But the return on investment also stands to be better, that coupled with the local property tax relief, and the increased production of natural resources to offset the additional expense, sets up a winning combination for educating our children.

Twenty-one House Republicans joined all 39 of the chamber's Democrats to endorse SB175, which faces a final vote late this week. I'm hopeful it will clear it's final hurdle on 3rd reading in the House as it works it's way toward the Governor for his signature.

MEDICAID PROPOSAL

The Senate Democrats and some Republicans endorsed a measure to get a final vote tomorrow in the House on a Medicaid proposal that was changed from what the Republican leadership wanted. A series of close votes was the way the fight went down over whether to substantially expand Medicaid, the state-federal program that pays medical bills for the poor.

The bill has 19 pages of amendments, one that proposes to use state money to help poor Montanans get healh insurance if they make less then about $15,400 of the federal proverty level.
