Arbor Day

Arbor Day: More than just a day to plant trees

As spring emerges in Big Sky Country, with it comes the anticipation of summer vacations, farmers markets, gardening and enjoying the majesty of the great Montana outdoors.

For the Montana Urban and Community Forestry Program, spring is for planting trees – specifically in celebration of Arbor Day -- the official observation of which in Montana is always the last Friday in April. Across the state, cities and towns will prepare Arbor Day proclamations, organize tree planting events, and encourage Montanans to think about the importance trees in parks, lining city streets and in backyards. Indeed, planting trees has innumerable benefits, from providing shade to improving air quality and beautifying the community.

There's a deeper connection that should be made as we plant trees for Arbor Day. It is the connection between the natural world and that of buildings, streets, schools and businesses. These two environs are not mutually exclusive; rather, their coexistence brings many benefits. Just as we recognize the importance of having well-maintained sidewalks, buildings and other hard infrastructure; so should we also value creating and maintaining street trees, greenbelts and green infrastructure. It is the melding of the two that makes our communities beautiful, environmentally functional places to live, work and play.

Cities and towns across Montana are making investments in their community forest: they allocate resources to planting new trees, pruning existing ones and, when necessary, removing those which are diseased, damaged or otherwise present a hazard. They take inventory of the trees, develop management plans, and enlist the help of volunteers, schools and service organizations with the goal of creating vibrant landscapes within municipal boundaries.

We love to plant trees; there's something hopeful about this rite of spring. Just remember, planting trees on Arbor Day is but one activity in support of healthy urban and community forests. Managing the forest in your community is a year-round job that requires money and work. Support these efforts by donating your time or other resources and be an outspoken advocate for tree-lined boulevards, shaded parks, clean air and water, and the value of a walk in the woods right in town.

Jamie Kirby is Montana DNRC's state coordinator for the Montana Urban and Community Forestry Program, which is delivered in partnership with the USDA Forest Service. Information about the program is available online at the Montana DNRC website: www.dnrc.mt.gov

PLANTING OF THE TREES

The local Arbor Day event here in Dillon will take place at the Parkview Elementary School beginning at 8:40 a.m. The students will plant 15 new trees on the campus grounds and another 4 will be planted at a later date when those trees arrive at the local nursery. Mayor Malesich will read the Arbor Day Proclamation at 11:00 a.m. near the new entrance to the school.

The Montana DNRC will present the Mayor with an updated Tree City USA Certification materials for 2013. This will be the third year that the city of Dillon has achieved Tree City USA status. Mayor Malesich and Director of Operations, J.S. Turner have been active and enthusiastic supporters of the program and have given full support to the Dillon Tree board.

The Dillon Tree Board, MT DNRC fire crew, USDA Forest Service fire crew and BLM employees will provide help in the planting of the trees and teach the 1st-5th grade students interesting facts about trees and how they enhance our lives.

CLEVERLEY PLEADS GUILTY

Kendle Cleverley, 26 was charged with sexual intercourse without consent in three separate cases involving girls 13 and 14. He plead guilty in district court and the prosecutors dropped one of the cases in a plea agreement. He also plead guilty to felony burglary as well as partner or family member assault.

Cleverley will have to register as a sexual offender and undergo sex-offender treatment. He remains free on bond until sentencing. The state recommended 20 years with five years suspended on each of the three felony charges to run concurrently.

SURCHARGES BY MERCHANTS

What is a Surcharge: A payment card (credit card) surcharge is a fee that a retailer adds to the cost of a purchase when a customer uses a credit card.

As of January 27, 2013, retailers in the US and US Territories were permitted to impose a surcharge on customers when they used a credit card. The surcharge is supposed to equal the actual cost of processing the credit card transaction, which is typically 1.5% to 3.0%. The fee is capped at 4.0%. The surcharge fee does not apply to debit cards.

Retailers can encourage customers to use other forms of payment, such as cash and checks, and can discount the PIN debit as well as for cash and/or check. This does not affect Visa or MasterCard debit cards. American Express still prohibits a surcharge on any of its cards.

Retailers are not permitted to impose this surcharge when using a debit or prepaid card. Retailers that assess the surcharges must follow certain disclosure requirements. These include posting a sign at their storefront announcing the extra fee, disclosing the fee at the checkout counter and on the receipt. Merchants are not required to disclose the specific amount of the fee. If the purchase is being made online you must be notified on the first page that references credit cards brands. These surcharge fees must also be disclosed on every credit card receipt, whether made in store or online.

This means that you as the customer could pay an additional fee when using your credit card at participating retailers.

Ten states prohibit the credit card surcharges from being imposed: California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, New York, Oklahoma and Texas. More states are looking at laws to prohibit retailers from assessing this surcharge.

ning at 11 a.m. Special guests at the ceremony will include Governor Steve Bullock, Superintendent of Public Instruction Denise Juneau, Helena Mayor Jim Smith and students from Central and Hawthorne elementary schools.

Bullock and Juneau will each announce new new initiatives aimed at raising awareness about urban and community forestry in cities and towns and also in Montana's classrooms.

"There are about 50 different Arbor Day-related events happening around the state," said DNRC Director John Tubbs, who noted that Arbor Day offers a chance to remember the many social, environmental and economic benefits of urban forests

"Each year, 100 mature trees will remove eight tons of carbon dioxide and 146 pounds of other air pollutants from the atmosphere," said Tubbs. "Trees increase home property values up to 10 percent, and tree-filled neighborhoods report lower levels of domestic violence, lower crime rates, and higher sociability among residents."

The Montana DNRC's Urban and Community Forestry Program helps cities and towns meet the challenges of building and maintaining their urban forests. Between 2008 and 2012, the program provided 359 grants worth more than $780,000. Tubbs said communities used the grants to leverage an additional $1 million for urban forestry efforts.

DNRC also administers the Tree City USA program, which provides technical assistance and consultation for communities that want to develop an urban forestry program.

"More than half of Montana's population - over 500,000 people - lives in a Tree City USA community," said Tubbs. "Tree City towns cover the entire state, from Glendive to Libby. Last year, volunteers in Montana contributed more than 12,000 hours toward urban forestry efforts in their communities."

Arbor Day was first observed in Nebraska in 1872. Today, Arbor Day is celebrated in every state and in many countries around the world.

To learn about urban forestry, the Tree City USA program and the benefits of planting trees, visit the Montana DNRC's Urban & Community Forestry web pages at <http://dnrc.mt.gov/forestry/assistance/urban/default.asp>, or contact Jamie Kirby at (406) 542-4288.

LADIES BATHING SUITS

Submitted by MJ

A few years ago a bathing suit for the mature figure was-boned, trussed and reinforced. They made you feel and look good by holding back and uplifting all body parts that were a tad lose or out of shape.

Modern bathing suits have no bra cups leaving body parts spread across the chest like a speed bump.

Unfortunately today, it can be hard to find a bathing suit that beautifies and fits all parts of one's body. There are no trusses or reinforcement that might help keep any extra from oozing out.

Then it happens. As you are standing in the dressing room, telling yourself this is the lesser of all evils, a thin petite sales gal peaks in to tell you how good you look in the suit. She never mentions the battle of the bulge that is going on. She does her job well expressing warm, feel good and comforting words.

Finally you find a suit that fits; it is a two-piece affair with a shorts-style bottom and a loose blouse-type top. You can't change the past, but you can ruin the present by worrying over the future.

Be thankful and grateful for each day of your life. On the challenging days search a little harder and you will find the joy.

Calling All Ladies Interested in Golfing

The Beaverhead Ladies Golf League Kickoff Dinner will be Tuesday, May 7, 2012, 6 p.m. at the Beaverhead Golf Course. A steak & shrimp dinner with all the trimmings will be served. Cost of the dinner is $15 and those planning to attend must RSVP by May 3, 2012. Ladies can also pay the $10 league membership that evening. For more information regarding golf league or to RSVP for the dinner, please call Lyndee Fogel at 925-1718 or Carly Anderson at 925-1207.

Upcoming ladies league events and dates to remember include: Wine and Nine on June 7, Ladies League Golf Invitational Tournament on July 27, and the Golf Ball Drop Fundraiser conclusion during the Club Championship on August 3.
