"LOCAL PHARMACIST MATT BOWMAN EARNS PRESTIGIOUS NATIONAL AWARD"

Matt Bowman, pharmacist and Pharmacy Manager for Barrett Hospital & HealthCare, recently received the NASPA Excellence in Innovation Award. This award recognizes and honors a qualified pharmacist who has demonstrated significant innovation in his or her respective practice, method, or service directly or indirectly resulting in improved patient care and/or advancement of the profession of pharmacy. The award is presented annually by participating state pharmacist associations, including those in the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico.

"Upsher-Smith Laboratories is proud to sponsor the National Alliance of State Pharmacy Association's™ Excellence in Innovation Award that recognizes the vital role played by pharmacists in advancing patient care," said Mark Evenstad, President and CEO, Upsher-Smith Laboratories. "We are pleased to honor the leaders and innovators in the pharmacy profession today, and look forward to a future working together to continue to help improve the lives of the people we serve."

Matt was nominated for the award for helping to institute bar coding of medicines to help nurses ensure that the right medicine is always given to the right patient, helping to set up computerized medication order entry to avoid mistakes that can occur with handwriting legibility or transcription, overseeing the setup of the Coumadin and Chronic Disease Management Clinic, and ensuring that the design plans for the pharmacy in the new hospital would accommodate future service expansion, such as appropriate ventilation for chemotherapy/oncology services. Matt was able to accomplish this all while planning for and implementing the pharmacy move to the new hospital.

According to Ken Westman, Barrett Hospital's CEO, "We are really fortunate to have an individual like Matt working here at Barrett Hospital & HealthCare. Matt and his staff demonstrate excellence in their field every day as they work toward the highest quality patient care and safety."

For more information about Barrett Hospital & HealthCare's Pharmacy services, please call (406) 683-3000.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

I am writing this in regard to the Paupers Field at Mountain View Cemetery that was left bare....this Memorial Day. What a heart wrenching sight to see this. In the first place that piece of property had never been mowed in its lifetime.

The Scout groups that took the time to put flowers on the graves gave them a sense of caring by being able to do this. Respect for the ones that had died with no families or friends...what a sense of pride I felt to drive up there and see the decorations that these young people took the time to do.

Well for whatever reason they are not up there now I would like to know. That is what is wrong with us as a Nation all of our caring has been lost. I am ashamed that we cannot do something to remember someone who had nothing..There are so many who have much, I am sorry for those that have nothing. There is a lot more in giving than receiving.

Joanne Johnson

Editors note:

Decorating those graves started in 1998 with the Riverside Wranglers 4-H group headed by Deb Pierce with 22 kids when it started. The field was mowed TWICE a year at that time. The last few years there has only been 5 kids in that club. Most of them graduated last year and the club was disbanded. With dry conditions the site was only mowed once a year the last few years.

The kids had earned money or got those 120 flowers donated.

About 2003, the club approached the City Council about putting water up there to water the site. It was approved, and the materials were purchased by the City, however, to date (10 years later) it is still not installed. The club, at that time, said they would water a few times a week during the summer months to keep it green. They don't know why it is not maintained like the rest of the City Cemetery.

Deb still has the used flowers if there is someone like yourself that would like to take on the task of putting up flowers, taking down flowers, mowing and weed eating that site.

The Children's Writing Corner with Jeannie James

This is the first installment of a story I wrote about traveling to Montana from Minnesota in a Covered Wagon. My characters travel with the Fisk Expedition of 1866 just like my Great Great Grandparents, Orlando B and Samantha Gates Barber did. It is being printed in serial form in the tradition of the first book published in Montana, Vigilantes of Montana, written by Thomas Dimsdale, and printed by my Great Grandfather, Daniel Webster Tilton, in the "Montana Post", the first newspaper in the state.

Mazy's Traveling Teapot

By Jean Tilton James

The sun was shining brightly on the door of Mazy's house when the wagon loaded with all of the family furnishings headed down the street leaving Redwood Falls, Minnesota, forever. Mazy tried not to cry as she waved to her best friend, Jane, for as long as she could see her. Then the wagon went around the bend, and they were headed West.

Benjamin, Mazy's little brother, was all excited and couldn't seem to sit still. Uncle Charlie was driving the wagon and mother sat up front with him. Father was riding his big horse, Blaze, beside the wagon.

"Benjamin Rydle, will you please quit crawling on me," Mazy said in her mean voice. She wanted to shove Benjamin out of the wagon right then and there, especially when he stuck out his tongue at her. She took her new hanky out of her pocket, the one Grandma Jenny had given her last night, and wiped away the tears she didn't want her mother to see. Everyone had cried last night when they said goodbye, well, except for Father. He was busy talking to the neighbors about all the opportunities out West, just for the taking. Father built mills for taking gold out of rocks and he said they needed mills out in the new gold country.

Mazy held the soft hanky to her cheek and thought about Grandma Jenny. She was Mazy's special friend besides being her grandmother. Grandma Jenny was the first one to see that Mazy had a gift for drawing and it had been Grandma Jenny who gave her a sketchbook for Christmas last year. It was tucked away in the big roll-top trunk in the front of the wagon, and Mazy had filled up almost every page. Last night, Grandma Jenny had given Mazy a new sketchbook that could be filled with pictures and stories of the long trip West to Montana Territory. She had even put a little message in the front of the book, "To my beloved Mazy for her journey to the West, June, 1866. Remember our little tea parties and always be a good girl. God be with you."

"Mazy, how are you doing back there?" called Mother.

"I'm okay," she sighed. Then because she didn't want Mother to think she wasn't brave, she said, "I'm trying to think about what it will be like to sleep in this wagon tonight." Benjamin "accidentally" kicked Mazy on his way to ask Mother, "Are we there yet?"

The wagon had looked very big when Father had brought it home, but now it was full of everything they could take with them to Montana Territory. When the wagon hit a bump, Mother's pots and pans made a little clanking tune as they banged together. The cooking utensils were tied down the center of the wagon on a pole. Arranged on the sides of the wagon were barrels of flour, sugar, bacon and other food. Father's tools, crates of other supplies including garden seeds and Mother's dishes were stacked neatly together. On top of everything, Mother had spread her quilts making little beds where Mazy and Benjamin could sleep. Benjamin said he was going to sleep outside with Father under the wagon, but Mazy knew he would probably have a bad dream and end up back in the wagon. But then, what could you expect from a five year old brother?

Mazy hadn't slept very well the night before because of all the excitement. It wasn't long before the creaking noise of the wagon and the warm sun on the canvas roof put her to sleep. Benjamin curled up beside her and fell asleep too.
