2013 Rainbow Family of Living Light Gathering

U.S. Forest Service officials have learned that the Rainbow Family of Living Light will hold their national gathering July 1-7 on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest near Jackson, Mont.

The gathering site is located 10 miles south and west of Jackson and Highway 278, where they also held a gathering in the summer of 2000.

The Rainbow Family of Living Light is a self-described loose knit group of people without leadership or organization who participate in a national gathering once a year on national forests during a two-week period around the Fourth of July holiday. The event has drawn anywhere from 7,000-20,000 people, with the population generally peaking during the week of July 4.

An event of this size can have significant impacts on traffic, communities, local resources, natural resources, residents and visitors. To minimize any negative impacts, the Forest Service established a team to provide for employee and public health and safety, and to minimize impacts to natural resources.

The gathering will take place under the conditions and guidelines provided under a Forest Service operating plan. The operating plan will address public health and safety concerns, minimize impacts to natural resources and outline post-event rehabilitation procedures.

For regular updates, alerts and general information go to the Forest Service 2013 National Rainbow Family of Living Light Gathering website at www.fs.usda.gov/goto/r1/rfl or follow us on Twitter @FS_Region1 using the hashtag #usfsrfl.

NO MALIGNANT CATARRHAL FEVER IN BISON FOUND IN RIVER

None of the three bison found in the Yellowstone River died from malignant catarrhal fever. Lab results received today regarding the second and third bison tested echo the results of the first bison tested. In all three cases, the tissues show no sign of disease and the exact cause of death cannot be determined.

However, upon discovery, all three bison showed visible signs of trauma according to FWP Wildlife Veterinarian Jennifer Ramsey. She believes this trauma – including fractured pelvises on two bison and crushed ribs on a third – occurred before death. These injuries could have resulted from the animals being swept into rocks during high water or other blunt force trauma. Every year, animal carcasses wash downstream from Yellowstone National Park into Montana.

The dead bison were spotted in the Yellowstone River in mid May. FWP crews retrieved tissue samples from each bison: the first near Emigrant, and the other two closer to Gardiner.

Given the recent introduction of domestic sheep in the Gardiner area, FWP looked into the possibility of malignant catarrhal fever in these bison. Malignant catarrhal fever is a viral disease which may be carried by domestic sheep without any symptoms, but can cause fatal infections in bison.

Mazy's Traveling Teapot by Jean Tilton James

By the time they reached Fort Abercrombie on June 25th, Mazy was tired of traveling. Benjamin made her ever so angry by pinching her when mother wasn't looking. She missed Grandma Jenny very much. She missed Grandma Jenny's oatmeal cookies and how they would sit under the big tree in the yard at home and have tea. Grandma Jenny always smelled so nice and always told her stories about when she was a little girl.

Mazy hated all the dust on her clothes from traveling and wanted a bath in the big tub behind the kitchen door at home. Even though each family got a turn at being first in the wagon line, it always seemed dusty and made Mazy cough. Mother said they might be able to take a bath at Fort Abercrombie, but Mazy knew it wouldn't be as nice as at home. Mazy felt sad every time she thought about home, and finally, Mother told her, "You need to be a big girl and understand that we are going to a new home." Mazy wasn't at all sure she wanted a new home without Grandma Jenny.

Fort Abercrombie was a busy place. Mazy saw an Indian mother with a baby on her back. A little girl was walking beside the mother and Mazy thought the little girl was about her same age. Mazy was too shy to walk over to her, and just as the little girl turned and smiled at her, Mazy's mother made her come help wash the noontime dishes. Mazy wondered if she would ever see the little girl again. The next day they left for Fort Berthold.

Later that week, Mazy was busy drawing a picture of some flowers she had found near an old stump. She wished she had some way to color them in her sketchbook because they were a lovely pale rose and soft green. Just as she was sketching a leaf, she heard a big commotion back by where the wagons were circled. She looked across the prairie and what she saw made her mouth drop open. Coming toward the camp was a huge herd of bison. They were running in a cloud of dust and they stretched out across the plains on both sides of the circled wagons. They were headed straight for the camp. Mazy jumped up, dropping her sketchbook, and ran toward the wagons. She was out of breath and terrified by the time she got to their wagon. Mother was turning in circles screaming for Benjamin and didn't even scold

Mazy for going away to sketch.

"Benjamin, Benjamin, come here right this minute!" she echoed her mother's cries. The sound of the buffalo stam-pede was so loud now that Mazy knew her brother couldn't possibly hear their voices. By now Mother was frantic and running from wagon to wagon. Just then, several of the men, including Father, rushed by Mazy to the outside of the wagon circle. They formed a line and began firing at the buffalo that were now so close Mazy could see their horns. She scurried under the wagon and grabbed the inside of a wheel. She could see out to the huge animals headed her way, but thought maybe the wagon would protect her. Just as she decided it might not be a good idea to stay there, the men fired some more and several buffalo fell down. Without even stopping, the giant-sized animals turned away from the wagon circle in a big pivot and headed back the way they had come. Mazy breathed a sigh of relief and crawled out from under the wagon in time to see Mother running toward her with Benjamin in her arms.

"You are a very bad boy for not answering when I called," said Mother, but Mazy saw that she held Benjamin very tightly. "And you, young lady, will stay in the wagon for the next two days. We are all lucky to be alive and we will thank the Dear Lord for bringing us through this trouble."

"Can I go get my sketchbook, please, Mother," Mazy pleaded. "Then I promise to even play with Benjamin." Mother relented and Mazy ran to get her sketchbook that was right where she dropped it. That night they had a big feast of buffalo meat and even some of Mother's cornbread with crab apple jelly that she brought from back home.

This is a picture of the Fisk Expedition. It was probably a picture that was part of a stereopticon slide. A stereopticon was a way to view photographs in the 1800s.

Hmmmm!

A guy is walking along a Florida beach when he comes across a lamp partially buried in the sand. He picks up the lamp and gives it a rub. A genie appears and tells him he has been granted one wish.

The guy thinks for a moment and says, "I want to live forever."

"Sorry," said the genie, "I'm not allowed to grant eternal life."

"OK, then, I want to die after the Democrats balance the budget and eliminate the debt."

"You crafty little bugger," said the genie..
