50 YEARS AGO THE ADVENTURE CONTINUES By George F. Fryett, Jr.

PRISONER OF WAR IN SOUTH VIETNAM.

What a hell of a way to die! For the next six months I was led from one area to another, sometimes being only minutes ahead of rescue teams that were looking for me. The months passed and the artillery shelled the area I was in. The helicopters came so close above that I could have thrown stones at them, but they were unable to see me. After my first attempt to escape they, never allowed me an opportunity to try it again. It was Christmas morning 25 December 1961.

For six months I was marched and questioned. I walked approximately five hundred miles and was picked up by our helicopters ninety miles northwest of Saigon. I slept on the ground and later was given a hammock to swing under the trees like one of the Vietcong soldiers. I was forced to live in a world of sickness, heartbreak, substandard food, blisters, scars, lies, more lies, and not knowing if the dawn of the next day was to be my last.

On 24 June 1962, I was placed on a bus going to Saigon and Freedom! It was without explanation. I could not believe that I was free at last. About three miles down the road the bus stopped at a Vietnamese military check point. I was told to get off the bus. My heart began to beat very fast; was this end of my freedom? I was escorted to a jeep and driven to a Vietnamese Ranger Company. The driver of the jeep turned out to be the Captain of the Ranger Company. I was fed, clothed, and the military authorities in Saigon were radioed. Later in the day I was told that I would have to wait until the middle of the week before I could go back to Saigon. My hopes sank.

Unknown to me, the National Liberation Front in Hanoi, the capital of North Vietnam had given instructions to my captors to release me in order to show their good will and leniency towards American prisoners of war. For two weeks prior to my release there had been radio broadcasts by Radio Hanoi announcing my pending release (also unknown to me).

I did not know until after my release that there had been two other Americans captured and were released after only 42 days. I worried that the people I was presently with might send me back to the Viet Cong. This close to freedom, now what? Approximately 5 o'clock in the afternoon, I heard a message come over the radio. The military authorities in Saigon were saying that a helicopter was on its way and would arrive in an hour. The sky began to look dark. I began to get concerned once again; maybe they would not be able to lift off from Saigon for another day. Fifteen minutes before the helicopters arrived, an American Captain assigned to the local village came to stay with me until our helicopters set down to pick me up. It was so wonderful to once again see a friendly face. When the helicopter was six feet off the ground I began to at last feel safe and knew that I was going home.

I now feel that this six months of survival training should have qualified me for Special Forces and my Commission. In every war there must be a street that is without joy. Today, that street is in the middle of Southeast Asia. Tomorrow, where will it be? Must the American be so ugly to the rest of the world? Must we go off into the jungle to find out that we are not really wanted?

Rainbow Gathering op-ed

by Jeff Welborn

In regards to the upcoming Rainbow Family Gathering in SW Montana, I respectfully ask the question, why isn't The Forest Service, or any other agency that serves to protect the public trust simply not following the same requirement guidelines for permitting and NEPA review on the impact of this gathering on Saganaw Creek?

We all know what the implications would be if one my constituents parked a herd of cattle on these same public lands. We also know the rigors of permitting a mine or gravel pit, not to mention a population equal to a small city popping up almost overnight, and it begs the question of what makes this group any different?

The reality here is, The US Forest Service is allowing a few thousand people to trample on sensitive plants, degrade water quality, convene with inadequate sanitary facilities, cut large quantities of firewood without proper permits, and jeopardize the environment without doing a thorough NEPA document or hold public hearings.

Perhaps it's that The Forest Service doesn't want confrontation with these people so they just turn a blind eye to the issue at hand. I ask you to consider if a bunch of loggers decided to go harvest a hundred acres of dead and dying timber and announced they would be showing up with some equipment. If history is any indication, environmental groups would put enough pressure on the agencies, that roads would be barricaded with armed guards.

So why does the Forest Service just let these folks violate environmental laws? Why doesn't the agency require a full-blown EIS? and at a very minimum require the Rainbow Family to follow the same processes all others must follow when any public land is impacted?

Could it be that The Forest Service knows this is a no-win in the public relations arena? and will try to find a common denominator that results in the least amount of scrutiny and criticism possible? My fear is that avoiding conflict and negative media coverage will be their primary goal—rather than protecting the forest.

The bigger question is where are the conservation groups? Potential watershed damage, dust control, and many other impacts that other industry and recreational users must address, are being ignored here.

It's a matter of fairness, so it makes one wonder if these groups will remain silent? Or will they simply ask the Forest Service that this group be treated the same as any other entity that impacts these lands? Or is the bigger question here is that these professional fundraising groups cannot file a law suit or make a single dime off of this type of "resource destruction" so they will also choose to ignore it?

In closing, it's Beaverhead County and her citizens who will ultimately pay for the impacts of this gathering, both social and environmental, long after the Rainbow Family leaves the area.

2013 Rainbow Family Gathering Daily Update

The number of people arriving to the National Rainbow Family Gathering doubled over the weekend with over 1,000 people now at the gathering site. Activity is constant as members set up camp, kitchens, and other functional areas. Vehicle numbers are relatively light but they will increase considerably as it gets closer to the Fourth of July. There are currently 156 cars, 72 vans, and 36 buses in the designated parking areas.

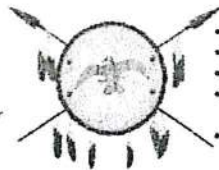

Be aware that Montana is an open range state so watch for cattle on the highway and other roads. Law enforcement reports cattle are outside fences along Hwy 278 between mile markers 38-40. These are Black Angus and difficult to see at night so drive with caution.

Expect a marked increase in traffic flow on main access roads to the Saginaw Creek area in the upcoming week. The Saginaw Creek Road leading to the gathering site is a rough two-lane dirt road. Utilize defensive driving techniques and obey all traffic signs and laws. Refer to the map provided in the 2013-D3-017 Special Order for closed roads within the Rainbow Family Gathering area.

Public Meetings There are two public information meetings scheduled this week: Tuesday, June 25 from 6-7 PM: Dillon Elementary School Gym, 22 N. Cotton, Dillon. Wednesday, June 26 from 6-7 PM: Wisdom Community Center, Wisdom.

Dillon Farmers' Market Bee Local

"Bee Local" is the mascot of the Dillon Farmers' Market. This image of a bee gathering flowers in a shopping basket reflects the fact that like the bee, those who shop at the farmers' markets are seeking local products and dealing in "sticky" dollars.

"Sticky" dollars "stick" to the local economy, being re-spent locally rather than being siphoned away to distant parent companies or other stakeholders, and a farmers' markets brings "sticky" dollars to its area, says Mary Shepard, writing in The Economic Impact of Farmers' Markets, published on the web site of Farmers' Markets Today at: <http://www.farmersmarkettoday.com/fmt/index.php/article/140-the-economic-impact-of-farmers-markets>.

A study of the economic impact of nine farmers' markets from Baltimore, Cleveland, and Los Angeles, showed their economic significance during 2011-2012. According to Richard McCarthy, Executive Director of Market Umbrella, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit think tank, a farmers' market's tents and umbrellas may give the impression of a temporary and informal organization with insignificant economy activity, but, McCarthy says that impression is far from reality. "In fact, it is highly efficient, enterprising, and democratic."

The data make a strong case for farmers' markets as engines of economic growth, as they incubate entrepreneurs and small businesses and transform economic activity within communities. From the tiny fledgling West Baltimore Farmers' Market contributing $72,000 to its local economy, to the burgeoning Hollywood Farmers' Market that contributes over $56 million, the numbers are significant. The annual economic impact reflected the following (expressed as a range across all nine markets): Vendors ($52,000 - $40,594,700 per market); nearby businesses ($19,900 - $15,765,700 per market); community ($72,000 - $56,360,000 per market). The full report is available at www.marketumbrella.org: The Economic Impact of Farmers Markets: A Study of 9 Markets in 3 Major U.S. Cities.

The Dillon Farmers' Market will open on Saturday June 29, from 9 am to 1 pm at the Wells Fargo Bank parking lot, and continue each Saturday through September 28. For information, call market president Catherine Cain at 406-498-6198 or secretary Katie Bump at 406-683-6735, or visit the web site dillonfarmersmarket.blogspot.com.

Annual Wildflower Tour of Gravelly Range Set for July 2 (CORRECTED)

The Forest Service will sponsor its 16th annual wildflower tour of the Gravelly Range on Tuesday, July 2, starting at 9 a.m.

The free tour winds through the Gravelly Range in Madison County which is noted for a spectacular, high-elevation display of wildflowers. Forest Service employees on the tour will help identify plants seen along the way. Officials note that each year brings a varied show of wildflowers. The warmer winter and dry spring brings its own set of growing conditions, producing an always plentiful array of wildflowers to view.

The tour will begin at the Forest Service office in Ennis and proceed toward the Gravelly Range. Participants generally drive their own high-clearance vehicles, but can catch a ride with others if they don't want to take their own vehicle. Attendees are advised to dress for inclement weather and bring their lunch and water.

For more information, contact the Forest Service in Ennis at (406) 682-4253.
