Beaverhead-Deerlodge NF Offers Abundance of July 4 Recreation Opportunities

As the July 4th holiday approaches, the Forest Service would like to remind those who are planning for the holiday weekend that there are great places throughout the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest to visit. The forest has over 3,200 miles of trails, 76 campgrounds, picnic and recreation areas, as well as being home to the Anaconda Pintler Wilderness and the Lee Metcalf Wilderness.

Among the traditional camping, hiking and fishing activities, visitors are known to also enjoy wildflower viewing, photography, exploring the back country and a multitude of family activities. Additionally, there are 25 rustic cabins available throughout the forest for rent during the summer and fall hunting season. Go to www.recreation.gov to find out more and to reserve a cabin.

Before you plan your trip, check for current road, trail and campground conditions online at www.fs.usda.gov/bdnf and always check to see what the current weather conditions are and go prepared for changing conditions. Visitors are cautioned to stay on the road to avoid getting stuck or starting wildland fires and to pay attention to road closed signs; Also, before setting up your camp look up, down and around for trees and large branches that may fall.

Access to high-mountain lakes and trails may still be blocked by late-season snow. Hiking to high peaks and hiking high-elevation trails may not be feasible until mid to end of July.

Many trails may not be open at higher elevations or muddy. Please stay on the trail and do not create new trails to get around hazards. Trail users should expect many trails to be impassable from fallen trees. The Forest Service will have minimal ability to clear trees this year due to decreased budgets and the lack of seasonal trail crews.

Visitors are also asked to be careful when recreating in the forest due to the potential for trees to fall. Here are a couple of handy tips: Be aware of your surroundings and avoid dense patches of dead trees. Trees can fall without warning; place tents and park vehicles in areas where they will not be hit if a tree falls; Stay out of the forest when there are strong winds that could blow down trees. If you are already in the forest when winds kick up, head to a clearing out of reach of any potential falling trees.

Bears, both black bears and grizzlies, are out and about. Keep your camp clean and store food out of reach of all animals.

Visitors are cautioned to be extremely careful with fire, fuels such as grass, shrubs and trees are drying out fast this year.

Fireworks are prohibited in National Forests. Fireworks

Road Access and Safety

With the Rainbow Family Gathering and RATPOD, traffic will increase greatly over the weekend on the main access roads to the Saginaw Creek area. The Forest Service wants to remind forest visitors that dust and wash boarding could occur on Forest Service dirt roads as they dry out. As promised yesterday, we are featuring the start of a novel by Rachel Towery. Fantasy literature has received a great deal of attention in recent years with such books as the Harry Potter and Twilight series. Rotters will be of interest to older children. Thank you Rachel for sharing with us.

PRELUDE

Julia

I ran through the spares trees like a wild woman, and I didn't care. I could still hear it behind me, gurgling and spitting, its torn flesh flapping on its face like a raw steak. I didn't even know where I was heading and all I knew was I was getting farther away from my camp. A clearing emerged in front of me and I leaped over the dense hedge at the edge of the clearing like a doe.

A beautiful lake sparkled just ahead of me, the surface so calm it looked like a mirror. I imagined diving into the sparkling water, my sun burnt skin soothed by the cold water. But I was awakened from the daydream by the sickening grunt of the freak I was running from. Can Rotter's swim? I thought. Or will it just drown? Either way it was the only hope I had left. I counted down the seconds, my salvaged army boots making a dry thud as I ran. To make a perfect jump, I was going to aim for the place just past the shallow bank. 5..4..3.. 2.. GO! I flew through the air, legs kicking. A wall of bubbles exploded around me. My skin felt as though it was sizzling, hot meeting cool.

Being under the water wasn't like the lake that I had seen from above. The water was a strange murky green yet clear at the same time. It took me a minute to adjust my eyes and to gather my surroundings. All I could see was a strange plant that resembled seaweed. But it wasn't. I swam quickly down to try and examine the strange plant but the sun was suddenly blocked out by a dark figure above me. He must have seen me, or something. He started to swim, well more like sinking, while flapping his still attached limbs he moved towards me. And of course, now in the water, I had nothing to defend myself from his infected mouth. Time was ticking, and he kept coming closer, and for what was for the first time in my life, I felt like I didn't know what to do. I started to swim, as an instant instinct. I stopped when I thought I made a full circle. He had took a short cut across the circle of bubbles and was coming straight at me, death in his eyes, and I wondered how he could even see. I turned around and faced a muddy wall. I was trapped. My throat was choked with fear.

He was closing in on me and I couldn't do a thing. There was no hope of him choking on the water since he was already dead, and that thought made me realize for the first time that my lungs were on fire. I guess that worrying about a rotter catching me and ripping the flesh and blood off of my body distracted me for a while. In a last attempt to keep myself alive, I came up with a seemingly impossible plan. I yanked a handful of the unfamiliar plant from the muddy wall next to me and waited. When he finally came close enough, I kicked off from the wall and shot towards him. When it seemed like I was going to collide with him I wove myself around him to his backside. I grabbed his flailing body with my legs and gagged him with the plant. When it successfully registered in his mouth I tied a firm knot behind his head. That's when the strange thing happened. He went completely still. He was like a rag doll in my hands. I turned him around to face me and I saw that his eyes had rolled back in his head. The skin around his mouth that the plant had touched looked like it was healed. Almost normal.

Freaked out, I dropped his arm and his body softly floated down to the muddy bottom, resting among the plant that healed him. I kicked as hard as I could to the surface, finally listening to my lungs pleading cries. The moment that my head hit the surface I hungrily gulped in the fresh air. It was now night and I had spent my day being chased by that ugly monstrous rotter. Crickets chirped their night songs, and it was a wonder that the rotters hadn't already devoured the cricket population like they had the humans.

As far as I knew I was one of the last survivors, if not the only survivor. I took a few more shaky breaths and slowly swam to the bank. I needed to clear my head and figure what had happened at the bottom of that lake.

Upon reaching the bank, I pulled my body out of the water, clothing soaked. I pulled my drenched legs up to my chest and rocked myself. It was a compulsive habit, one that my collage roommate truly disliked. It was a hate-love relationship between us. She had a personality that seemed like tough love was the only love she contained in her heart, that is if she had one. But after everything that has happened, I think that I am entitled to a little wimpiness. The night was particularly humid for North Carolina. Instead of shivering, my soaked clothing clung annoyingly to my skin. I got up, hands weak and shaking, and searched the bank for a weapon. The sun was peaking up and I hadn't gotten a bit of sleep all night.

I found a particularly heavy tree branch that had a bunch of knots in it, promising to smash Rotters brains in, if need be. It was the size of a baseball bat and I guessed it would do the job so I went found a good, strong, tree and hoisted myself and my new best friend up into and get some shut eye. A weird random thought came to mind, muscles. Man, I had great muscles. Never before would I have been able to scale a tree so quickly. I guess that was certainly one perk of this living nightmare, a "beautiful beach" body, sadly I had only gained it from running from Rotters every day. That was my last conscious thought and I feel into an exhausted and restless sleep.
