BANNACK DAYS TO BE HELD JULY 20 and 21

Each year during the third weekend in July the old ghost town of Bannack comes alive in a celebration of pioneer life. This year, the annual Bannack Days Festival will be held on July 20 and 21. Activities will begin 9 a.m. Saturday and run until 5 p.m., then from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Sunday. Some of those activities include: horse and wagon rides, shootouts, gold panning, candle making, and black powder shooting. Plus, guests can enjoy cowboy poetry and old time music. Visitors can also check out a mountain men camp, Doc Hall's Medicine show, the Great Debate on women's suffrage, and a 1800s U. S. Cavalry camp. There is something for everyone, along with plenty of food and drink.

The stagecoach from Virginia City will be arriving at 1 p.m. on Sunday. Rumor has it that Governor Edgerton and other dignitaries will be aboard along with a big gold shipment. Road Agent activity has been noted recently along the Bannack to Virginia City road. The Vigilantes have issued notice that anyone caught engaging in criminal activity will be the guest of honor at a necktie party! Sunday is a great day to visit as the crowds are smaller and we offer old time church services, blacksmithing and the stage holdup on Sunday only.

Bring the family out to Bannack State Park for a fun-filled weekend. Many visitors like to dress in period costumes to get into the spirit of things. Come see what the old west was really like!

Please carpool if possible, as parking is limited. There is a special event fee of $5 per car load to help cover the cost of this event. This fee will apply to resident and non-resident vehicles. Please share a ride to help with our parking and to conserve fuel. Bannack State Park asks that you PLEASE DO NOT BRING PETS TO THIS BUSY EVENT.

AWARD WINNING FOLK DUO TO HEADLINE NEXT DINNER IN THE PARK

The Southwest Montana Arts Council (SMAC) presents the award winning folk duo Otter Creek for Dinner in the Park, Thursday, July 18 at 6 p.m. at Dillon's J.C. Park.

You are invited to bring your own dinner or purchase a meal from the night's selected civic organization. Admission to the concert, art exhibits and children's activities is free.

The husband-wife duo of Peter and Mary Danzig use 10 instruments to produce a unique and refreshing sound combining folk music with old time, Celtic and western roots that is both unique and refreshing. One critic describes them as "a duo that is both a technical marvel and tastefully perfect."

Another says "their songs appeal to the heart and mind as well as the ear and a work of superb musicianship underpinned by stunning technique."

Otter Creek has won multiple awards for their virtuosic instrumentals, adept songwriting, and visionary arrangements of traditional and original tunes.

Letter to the Editor.....Dillonite Daily
LaVon D. Brillhart July 15, 2013

In regards to the Rainbow People who visited this community. It's too bad we judge all by the actions of just a few!

Do you remember when you were in grade school and the entire class had to stay in from recess because just one person got into trouble? It just wasn't fair to punish the entire class for the actions of just one person.

Do we punish and dislike all clergy, pastors, priests, rabbi because just a few were pedophiles and just a few of the millions molested boys and girls? Do we put them all in the same category? I think not.

Do we put all politicians in the same category because just a few cheated or stole from the public while the others were good citizens? I think not.

Do we dislike and judge all policemen because one was not kind, not understanding and rude to you? I should hope not.

When I was a kid, walking home from Boy Scouts, in the winter, one of the boys threw a snow ball and hit the side of a car. The car stopped and the man said, "who threw that snowball and hit my car." The four of us replied, "one of those boys running across the field." The man said to me, "you are the tallest boy here and threw me on the ground and kicked me." I did nothing wrong so I did not run but got beaten. The man was a white man, driving a blue car. I don't dislike white men who drive blue cars.

I was in the grocery store the other day. A woman ran into me with her cart because she was talking on her cell phone and not paying attention. It hurt. Should I dislike women, shopping carts, cell phones or all three? You already know the answer.

It is easy to put everyone in the same box. I met and talked with a lot of friendly, courteous Rainbow People. They did not judge me because I am older and my hair was combed.

BIG HOLE RIVER FOUNDATION SIGNS GRAYLING CONSERVATION AGREEMENT

The Big Hole River Foundation recently signed an agreement with the Arctic Grayling Recovery Group. This agreement makes it easier for the Foundation to help fund Arctic grayling conservation projects in the upper Big Hole. Michael Bias, Executive Director for the Big Hole River Foundation, explains that "contrary to what you might think, the state and federal agency's efficiency and ability to put great grayling projects on the ground is very effective." Under the Foundation's newly-adopted Native Fisheries Conservation Program, grayling conservation projects will be more easily identified, funded, and delivered in the Big Hole through this agreement.

The Montana Arctic Grayling Recovery Program (AGRP) is a non-profit organization that helps fund conservation of Arctic grayling in the Upper Missouri River basin in Montana. Since 1990, AGRP has helped complete a multitude of grayling conservation projects in the Big Hole, Ruby, Sun, and Missouri Rivers.

Bias explains that "far and away the best group conserving grayling in the upper Big Hole are the private landowners and the state and federal agencies involved in the Candidate Conservation Agreement with Assurances (CCAA) Program. AGRP has a funding mechanism established to easily get monies to Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks and the US Fish and Wildlife Service's Partners for Wildlife Program - a couple of the agencies responsible for delivering the grayling conservation projects through this program."

The Big Hole is one of the last watersheds free of major development and home to a self-sustaining wild population fluvial Arctic grayling, a federal Candidate Species and Montana Species of Special Concern. Through improving the river corridor to help sustain grayling, all aquatic and riparian species will benefit. The overall goal of the Foundation's science-based conservation strategy is to increase the abundance and distribution of grayling within the upper Big Hole and enhance the world-renowned trout fishery.

Under the newly-signed funding agreement with the Arctic Grayling Recovery Program, the Board of Directors approved contributing $2,500 towards the Swamp Creek Siphon Project. This project will install a 150-foot siphon that will transfer irrigation flow under Swamp Creek, an important Arctic grayling tributary. Currently the Spokane irrigation canal in the upper Big Hole basin captures Swamp Creek and impedes fish movement, and fish access to upper or lower portions of Swamp Creek is interrupted by the canal. The project will also require installing an irrigation diversion structure on Swamp Creek so adjacent landowners can utilize their water right from Swamp Creek. This project is part of landowner's CCAA site-specific conservation plan developed to improve limiting habitats for Arctic grayling in the upper Big Hole. Specifically, this project will provide fish passage in Swamp Creek over the Spokane irrigation system and improve the ability to manage flows diverted from Swamp Creek for irrigation.

The Foundation is holding its 25th Anniversary Big Hole River Day event in Melrose on July 20th. For more information visit the Foundation's website at www.bhrf.org or contact them at 866-533-BHRF.

New Xeriscaping Guide Available for Landowners

The Sustainable Operations Subcommittee of the Greater Yellowstone Coordinating Committee (GYCC), in partnership with Montana State University (MSU) is releasing a guide to xeriscaping for those interested in landscaping their property in ways to conserve water.

The GYCC asked the Sustainable Operations Subcommittee to develop practical and achievable actions to reduce greenhouse gas emissions, as well as ways to conserve water. One of the actions identified to accomplish both was xeriscaping. Two subcommittee members partnered with the MSU Department of Plant Sciences and Plant Pathology to create a handbook tailored specifically to the Greater Yellowstone Area (GYA) that can be used by landowners, nurseries, garden shops, realtors or anyone who wants to landscape in a way that will use less water. The guide includes methods of landscaping to conserve water, along with some suggested low water-use plants that do well in the GYA. Photos of beautifully designed xeriscaping in the GYA may help to inspire landowners to successfully convert some or all of their landscaping to xeriscaping.

"Across the West, including the GYA, water is regarded as an incredibly valuable resource that we all share and have the responsibility to use wisely," said Jane Ruchman, project leader for the xeriscaping guide and landscape architect for the Gallatin National Forest. "About half of the water that is used during the summer, especially in urban areas, goes toward maintaining our landscaping. There is a common misconception that xeriscaping means using only cactus and rocks, however it is possible to save water and still have attractive and functional landscaping," she said.

The free guide is available online at <http://www.fedgycc.org/documents/GYA.XeriscapeGuide.pdf>.

The 62 MB brochure may be printed out double sided for easy reference and use. Also at 12 p.m. on Wed. July 17, there will be an informal public presentation and discussion of the guide at the MSU Bozeman Area Research and Teaching Farm, accessed from Garfield Street on the west side of the Bozeman campus. Some of the landscapers who contributed photographs for the guide may be present and attendees will be able to see the MSU test plots with various low water-use turf grasses and perennials.

"Ultimately this guide promotes the wise use of our water resources and that benefits all of us in the long run," said Ruchman. For more information about the guide, contact Ruchman at (406) 587-6966.
