Great Harvest Inc. and Employees Complete Pledge to Barrett Hospital Foundation

When Barrett Hospital Foundation embarked on the capital campaign to raise money towards the construction of a new hospital, Mike and Eadie Ferretti and the employees of Great Harvest were among the very first supporters. Together, they pledged $25,000 over five years towards the cardiopulmonary department and the employee break room.

There were 11 employees who made regular contributions through a payroll deduction process, and the company matched employee contributions on a 1:1 basis.

The company is widely recognized as a tremendous supporter of non-profits, both in Montana and across the nation. As devotees of health and fitness, the company sponsors triathlons, bike events, marathons, and fundraising events that support a range of health-related causes. Residents of southwestern Montana are well acquainted with "bake days" that are held at Great Harvest franchising offices in Dillon. All of the bread sold benefits a particular charity, and those groups participate in the marketing and sale of the bread on their particular day.

According to Jim Gleason, Barrett Hospital Foundation Executive Director, "Great Harvest really sets the bar high with their dedication and involvement with the hospital and the many groups they support. They are a great group to work with. It's obvious their employees enjoy their work, they have fun and they make a fantastic product. We're grateful for their support."

For more information, please contact Barrett Hospital Foundation at (406)683-6737.

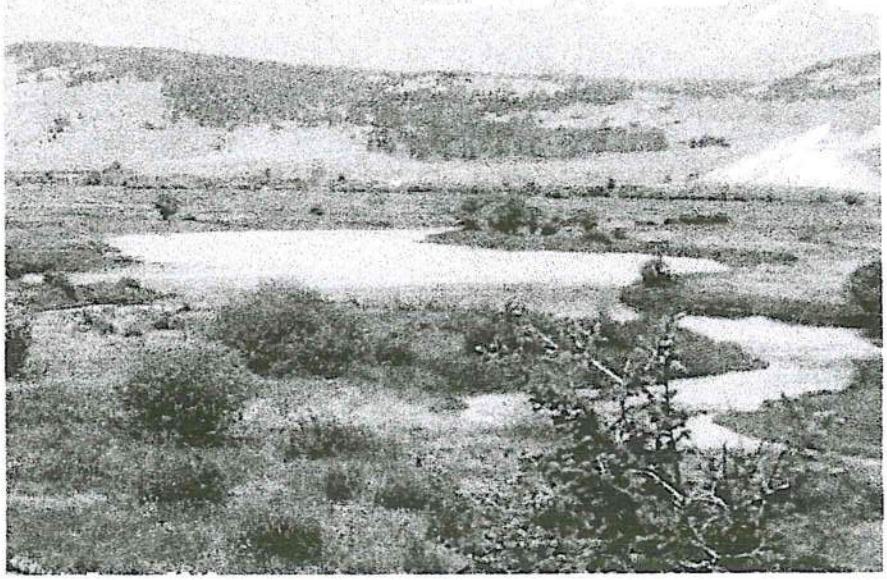
Big Hole Watershed Sourcebook: A guide for residents and visitors

BIG HOLE RIVER FOUNDATION



The Big Hole River Foundation

The Big Hole River Foundation has announced the availability of the Big Hole Watershed Sourcebook: A guide for residents and visitors.

The sourcebook is a resource for property owners, recreationists, real estate agents, and others that visit, recreate, or reside in the Big Hole Valley.

The sourcebook was produced through the Education Initiative of the Foundation with the help of counties, state, and federal agencies and other non-government organizations, and landowners. It is intended as an introduction – or compendium – of the information and resources available throughout the Big Hole.

The sourcebook contains pertinent information regarding land-use planning, drought management, county-specific permitting and regulation, information and care of wetlands and riparian areas, waste management and groundwater protection, weeds, wildlife-friendly fences, general recreational regulations, as well as community services available along the Big Hole.

The production and printing of the sourcebook was made possible with generous funding from all four Big Hole counties, Anaconda-Deer Lodge, Beaverhead, Butte-Silver Bow, and Madison, as well as the Cinnabar Foundation, Cooperman Foundation, and Foothills Foundation.

Copies of the sourcebook are free to the public and have been distributed to the county planning offices, chambers of commerce, extension offices, fly shops, and other outlets in all four counties of the Big Hole River as well as real estate offices specializing in property for sale in the area. A digital version is available on the Foundation website at www.bhrf.org under Publications. For a small shipping and handling fee, people wishing to have a copy mailed to them may contact the Foundation at (866)533-2473.

The Big Hole River Foundation was founded in 1988 by George F. Grant and is a non-profit 501 (c) 3 organization based in Butte. The mission of the Foundation is to conserve, enhance and protect the free-flowing character of the Big Hole River, its unique culture, fish and wildlife.

The Sleep-Weight Loss Connection

Discover how more quality sleep can equal more sucess at losing!

Article By: Amanda Genge

If you ask most people what behaviors encourage weight-loss and a healthy lifestyle — mindful eating and moving more — are usually the first changes that come to mind. But researchers are finding more and more links between getting too few ZZZs and carrying too many lbs. And although the reasons are not fully understood, there seems to be a connection between sleep loss and hormonal changes that affect appetite and satiety.

A good night's sleep can impact how we feel, how we think, and our ability to make healthy food choices. Practicing this month's Routine: get 7 to 8 hours of quality sleep each night will help you recharge physically, mentally and emotionally —setting you up for weight-loss success. You'll be less stressed, more aware and better able to cope with all of life's curveballs including temptations like sweets and junk food. Studies have even shown that too little sleep can trigger cravings for high-fat, high-calorie foods. And when you're exhausted, you're less likely to resist those urges. Isn't it amazing to think that something as simple as some extra quality shuteye each night could help you stay in control?

Correcting the Wrongs

By: MJ

Cities are going broke; thousands of people are being laid off, employees work hours are being cut back, health insurance benefits are being cancelled... One could say that heavy hand of new government laws, rules, regulations are causing hardships and the employees are getting the brunt of it. One of the first things a business does in order to stay in business is cut expenses.

I hear many people say I don't make enough hourly wages. Often employees forget to calculate how much the company is paying for their health insurance, paid vacations, sick leave... It is all part of the hourly wages. Don't forget your paycheck probably looked pretty good until the taxes were taken out.

In the coffee shops and on the streets I keep hearing people say; "I don't like what the government is doing however I can't do anything about it." You can do something and unless you get involved with your elected officials, whom work for you, nothing will change. Unless they hear from you, they can't know what you are thinking. Unless you talk to them how would you know what they are doing and why? Would you know the mayor or commissioners if you seen them on the street? Would you stop and talk to them? They are no better or no less then you are.

Write a letter, e-mail, make a phone call, and let the politicians know what you are thinking. Just because you aren't some big corporation or have millions of dollars does not mean that they will not listen to you. Old saying: "squeaky wheel gets the grease".

It is time the government resolves the spending problems. Do you know that on your phone bill has a hidden tax of $2.00± that generates million± dollars that the government gives to phone companies in order for them to pass out free cell phones? All I am saying is do you really know how much money you are paying in taxes?

Are Pigs Smarter Than Dogs? And Should We Care?

Tyrades! By Danny Tyree

My son Gideon, age nine, is hog wild about the classic CBS sitcom "Green Acres," which counts the super-intelligent pig Arnold Ziffel among its characters.

So I couldn't resist the recent Associated Press headline "Pigs Smart As Dogs? Activists Pose The Question."

The article is about The Someone Project, which is coordinated by Farm Sanctuary, an animal-protection and vegan-advocacy organization. The Someone Project wants us to realize that farm animals are more intelligent and emotionally complex than we thought, develop more empathy for those animals and ponder questions such as "Why do I casually eat beef, pork, poultry and mutton when I wouldn't dream of eating cats, dogs, horses or primates such as apes?"

Confession time. Yes, the distinctions that cultures make about which species are appropriate for food and which are appropriate for pets are arbitrary, illogical, inconsistent and unfair. But look at the bigger picture. If society didn't have things that were arbitrary, illogical, inconsistent and unfair, we would have an excess of observational humorists roaming around with nothing to do.

I understand the agenda of The Someone Project, but I don't know if I would be stressing how "intellectual" and "sensitive" farm critters are.

I'm glad the Someone Project folks are taking a realistic approach of incremental attitude change instead of expecting a nationwide epiphany. Most of us come from a background in which our forefathers, our heroes and our sacred texts accepted exploitation of animals for sacrifice, food, clothing and transportation. You can't undo that conditioning overnight with observations such as, "But they look so cuuuute when they buddy up figuring out a maze."

Activists stress that they want to foster a general awareness of the cognitive abilities of animals, rather than getting bogged down in ranking them by I.Q.

So, basically, they want to give EVERYONE a gold star and a ribbon that says "Plays well with others." Well, everyone except the chickens, who will peck another chicken to death if they see blood.

The Someone Project would do well to stay focused on the animals that exhibit the most human-like qualities. They must resist the calls from the fringe elements to advocate policies such as "a living-nine-days wage" for fruit flies and a "hang over your ground" gun rights bill for tree sloths.

Let's hear from all sides. Then each person must decide with his own conscience whether to continue "full steam ahead" as a carnivore, insist on humane conditions for the animals he does consume or go completely vegan.

I look forward to the ongoing debate. Th-th-th-that's NOT all, folks.
