TWIN BRIDGES MEETING TO BE HELD ON MT FWP 2013 GRIZZLY BEAR PLAN

Citizens opposed to MT FWP Dept. plans to fill the mountains and valleys of several southern counties in Montana with grizzly bears are holding a meeting in Twin Bridges September 23. It will start at 7:00 PM at the pavilion in the Madison County Fairgrounds. Everyone is urged to bring their concerns and participate in the meeting. There will be people present very familiar with grizzly bears and the draft plan including the FWP Bear Conflict Specialist. People with more than 120 years of combined grizzly bear experience will point out problems and answer questions. There will be discussion on how the draft MT FWP Grizzly Bear Management Plan for Southwestern Montana 2013 can be improved to limit grizzly bear distribution and the many bad conflicts caused by grizzlies.

Meeting organizers said FWP advertising of their 2013 draft plan has been poor and has attracted comments mostly from environmental groups in Montana and from outside the state. FWP held open houses in late August in Bozeman, Helena and Billings on the plan. A total of 13 members of the public attended those open houses. Hopefully attendance at the Twin Bridges meeting will be much better. Hard copies of the 74 page plan can be obtained from FWP in Helena (444-2535) or it can be read on the FWP website. They are only taking written comments until 5:00 PM Sept. 30.

In this plan FWP said, "They expect grizzly bears expanding into areas with a lot more people and livestock will cause increased conflicts". They also claim they cannot proactively manage grizzly distribution and conflicts even though Montana state law requires that, and Wyoming has been doing it successfully for years. The 716 Yellowstone area grizzly bears are highly predaceous and aggressive and have mauled 20 people in Montana since 2007, and 11 grizzlies have been reported shot in self- defense in that period. In Madison County 6 people have been mauled since fall 2010.

In the three states of Wyoming, southeast Idaho and southwest Montana over 100 people have been mauled with four fatalities since 1992. Also over 100 grizzly bears have been shot in self- defense since 1998. Those numbers are much higher than for the 1,000 grizzly bears found in northwest Montana which eat about 95 per cent plant materials except in dry areas. Among the Yellowstone bears adult males eat 80 per cent animal matter and 85 percent if livestock are present. Females and sub-adults eat about 40 per cent animal matter. Grizzlies have killed hundreds of livestock in Wyoming and those kills have been increasing in southern Montana. The grizzlies have also had very adverse impacts on some elk and moose herds. People need to become informed on the grizzly bear management plan and comment. Otherwise environmental groups may dictate how we must live, work and recreate with dangerous grizzly bears

PUBLIC COMMENT SOUGHT ON BIGHORN SHEEP RELEASE PROPOSAL

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is seeking public comment on an environmental assessment for the proposed reintroduction of bighorn sheep to Indian or Wolf Creek in the Madison mountain range.

Specifically, FWP proposes to trap up to 50 bighorn sheep – preferably from another Madison range herd in the Quake Lake area – and release them into one of the aforementioned locations in the winter of 2013 – 2014. The goal of the proposed action is to establish a viable and huntable long-term population of bighorn sheep.

FWP Area Biologist Julie Cunningham identified the release areas as potentially ideal for sheep reintroduction. "There is evidence showing bighorn sheep once occupied these areas decades ago," Cunningham said. "Our models show this will make a great wintering habitat."

The draft environmental assessment is available in print in Bozeman at the FWP Region 3 office or FWP's headquarters in Helena. The digital version can be downloaded from FWP's website at fwp.mt.gov under Recent Public Notices.

Comments on the environmental assessment will be accepted until 5 p.m. on October 16, 2013, and may be emailed to juliecunningham@mt.gov or mailed to Julie Cunningham, Bozeman Area Biologist, 1400 S. 19th Ave., Bozeman, MT 59718.

CITY HAPPENINGS

By: Lynn Westad

The City Council meeting started at 7:00 pm only council member absent was Dan Nye. The first agenda item was Aaron Orme and Craig Fitzgerald who presented plans to develop the City Ray Lynch Park into a baseball field. They have designed the field and water is available for the field to be maintained. Also sewer is available so in the future bathrooms and a concession stand could be built. They have gained support of many individuals and local businesses for the labor needed and are working on funds for the materials. They want to start some of the prep work this fall and arrangements with the City will be done to allow this. An Ad Hoc Committee of volunteers David Spehar, Bob Cottom and Lynn Westad will work with the group from this time forward. It is great when the City and local individuals can work and achieve a project of this merit. There were 2 street closings requested for the Business Builders Octoberfest on Oct. 5 mark your calendars for a fun time downtown. Also approved was a request from UMW for Sept 27th. After a motion to table failed approval of the McVeigh-Sorrels Minor Subdivision was approved. A resolution approving the Street Maintenance District of $1.60 was approved. There was no increase this year.

Attorney Gilbert said the Warner vs. City of Dillon is scheduled on Nov. 5th in Missoula. Four hours is scheduled and all issues can be presented in this time. It is hoped a decision is made quickly and this matter can Lynn Westad of the Planning Board stated that a modular was placed on the corner of Vine & Franklin and the front faces Vine St so the address of 315 Franklin St should be discontinued and an address on Vine St created so emergency vehicles can locate the residence. J.S. Turner report was that the repairs on the Bannack crossing are in the process and should be completed soon. Also the sprinkler system on the upper area of the cemetery has been started.

The Council had been given the budget tonight and the Treasurer gave brief explanations of the new format and now the formal process of adoption shall start. There were no reports from any committee except the Water and Sewer report.

And with all that the meeting adjourned at 8:14. It was an interesting evening some points on target and then again some important points missed.

TALK TO THE VEGETABLES

by: Joe Barnhart

Been talking to vegetables lately? In Dillon, Montana this time of year, you wouldn't give it a second thought -- just like spitting after brushing your teeth. As I walk past my rumpus room-sized garden there's a cacophony of demented squeals and rants plying for my attention. It's crescendo time; impending frigid doom lurks in the shadows every night.

The voices are subtle, just a whisper at first. You might hear them inspecting your lettuces for aphids. "Hey you, the big guy, hear anything about a freeze yet?" At first I just passed it off as the rustle of our Aspen trees. Later, I knew better.

Gardening in this high country bliss is humbling; what with nutritionally ravaged soil, "no-measurable-precip" rain, and a growing season as unpredictable as my wife at 4:35 a.m. That's not to say there's nothing you could raise. Puppies and children come to mind. Tempting at first, but they have to be potty trained.

I ostensibly chuckle at seed catalogs pitching "jumbo, fast-starters, fast-growers, and mafia-style bug resistant" garden plants with pictures taken in horticultural paradises like Pine Bluff, Arkansas. Big, bountiful harvests, the kind you'd tell grandkids about, "Yes Bobby, Gramps really did raise a rutabaga the size of your head." As if Bobby would ever marvel at a food item that, for all intents and purposes, was inedible.

You're thinking, "This guy's a gardening loser!" Not so. I'm an organic conscious, humus-hugging, compost-clinging, chemical-skimping, and cow-manure- slinging fool. My flailing scoop shovel can be found every spring in a buddy's corral loading tootsie-pop manure -- hard on the outside, soft on the inside. I whip it up in my garden like a soda-jerk concocting a chocolate malt.

For all my green thumb dedication, I get voices. Yep, voices that, for reasons my therapist can't explain, sound a lot like people.

My corn stalled at 5' a few weeks ago; those lazy carbohydrates. It's a pompous, bordering on pretentious, vegetable. Not Iowa corn, it's quiet and polite, but my corn was verbally abusive about my late planting. "Ahem my good man, we've come to expect a more punctual planting schedule, say what! Now look at us, a mere shadow of a stalk with less than a month of life left. Dash it all, your cowardly procrastination was a mortal blow!"

Corn's obnoxious, but yellow squash and zucchini are the worst. The incessant whining starts early as a mild frost could send them to the Farmer's Market in the sky. I'll be pulling weeds and hear, "Psssst, hey, over here, Buddy! Any chance we could get some covers tonight? You know, maybe a light flannel sheet?" I ignore the pleading. Otherwise, it'd rob me of my inner soul.

Beets are very stoic; nary a peep from them. Planted early and harvested late, it was a full life. Bill confided in me the other day, "Just take your time, we've no regrets." At least I think it was Bill – all those beets look the same. It just kills me to whack off their green tops and throw them in the five-gallon bucket.

Of course, clingy tomatoes just can't say, "Goodbye." They look at me with those pathetic puffy-crimson faces and sniffle, "If you'd please, sir, may we have another drink of water? Would you mind tucking us in tonight, we feel a chill coming on?" They've become so attached, it'd be a shame to say goodbye too soon. Vine-ripening is the only humane alternative.

As for growing food that I'd actually like, forget it. The short growing season results in produce carnage more repulsive than Charlie Sheen. Cantaloupe, honeydew melon, and a light pilsner beer are all out of the question. Dash it all, that's the frustration of gardening in Dillon. Why, from what I hear, in America's heartland, even an amber lager beer is possible.
