Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee Announces Release of Video Designed to Encourage Hunters to Carry Bear Spray

The Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee (IGBC) and the Wildlife Management Institute (WMI) teamed up with renowned hunting journalist Craig Boddington to produce a 1-minute demonstration video and 30-second public service announcement (PSA) to promote the use of bear spray by hunters. The demonstration video is posted on the IGBC website (igbconline.org) and on outdoor-oriented Facebook pages and websites that have hundreds of thousands of fans. The PSA will be submitted to The Outdoor Channel, The Sportsman Channel, and WILD TV. Producer Conrad Everts of Boddington Communications says the message could reach as many as 30 million households through these outlets.

In the video, the camera follows Craig, bear spray in holster and gun in hand, as he hikes through mountains and stream bottoms on the Boone and Crockett Club's Theodore Roosevelt Ranch on the Rocky Mountain Front west of Dupuyer, Montana. Craig uses a can of inert spray to demonstrate how to deploy spray while carrying a rifle. Craig addresses viewers with this important message:

"Hi, I'm Craig Boddington. For forty years I've made my living hunting, much of that in bear country. I trust my life to bear spray because the research is clear: bear spray stopped grizzly bears 92% of the time and prevented injury 98% of the time. Firing under stress changes everything. Bear spray requires less accuracy and won't harm your companions. Carry bear spray in bear country. Keep it accessible and practice."

Grizzly bear numbers and range are expanding in both the Northern Continental Divide and Yellowstone ecosystems in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming. Conflicts between hunters and grizzlies have increased in these areas, resulting in human injuries and bear mortalities that could delay recovery and delisting of the species.

Increasing hunters' use of bear spray is a high priority in the strategic plan for information and education for the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee. To achieve that goal, WMI reached out to Craig Boddington, whose ethical reputation and credibility with the hunting community is beyond question. Craig's demonstration and endorsement of bear spray will encourage hunters to adopt bear spray as part of their standard equipment when they're hunting in bear country.

Additional financial support for production of the video was provided by bear spray manufacturers Universal Defense Applications Products (UDAP) and Counter Assault, as well as the Montana Outfitters and Guides Association, Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, Boone and Crockett Club, Idaho Department of Fish and Game, Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks, Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife and Wyoming Game and Fish Department.

WARDENS INVESTIGATE MOOSE POACHING IN TOWNSEND AREA

A young bull moose was shot and left to waste this week at the Yorks Islands Fishing Access Site south of Townsend.

The dead moose was reported to FWP Wednesday. Warden Sergeant Dave Loewen responded to the scene and found the moose (guided by a bird hunter) in heavy brush about 100 yards north of one of the campsites.

"To see it laying in the brush rotting because someone decided to shoot it and leave it is appalling," said Loewen. "Everyone who cares about Montana's wildlife should be outraged."

The moose appeared to have been healthy at the time it was shot.

Anyone with information pertaining to this case, or other cases in which fish and wildlife resources are being stolen from Montanans, is urged to call (800) TIP-MONT and may be eligible for a reward.

The NFL Sees Green in Pink

By Rick Jensen

Most of us expect about 90 percent of our charitable contributions to go toward funding any charitable cause to which we give.

How do you feel about the NFL donating only 8 percent of Pink gear sales toward cancer research?

This is one of those big stories that got lost in the giant news vacuum of the failed Obamacare website and subsequent "800" number crash.

It's also a big story that could reverse favorable American opinions of the NFL and commissioner Roger Goodall.

Business Insider reports only about 8 percent of sales from the popular pink NFL merchandise goes toward cancer research. They break down distribution of the money from sales this way: 50 percent goes to the retailer, 37.5 percent to the manufacturer, 8.1 percent to the American Cancer Society for research, 3.24 percent to the administration at the Society and 1.25 percent to the NFL.

Here's something else to consider: the "retailer" who gets 50 percent is most often the NFL itself and NFL teams.

ESPN's Darren Rovell jumped all over this, writing that the league "takes a 25 percent royalty from the wholesale price (1/2 retail), donates 90 percent of royalty to American Cancer Society."

Business Insider does quote the NFL website that states any money the league makes that is not donated to the American Cancer Society goes directly toward covering the costs of the Breast Cancer Awareness program.

That sounds good, but it doesn't explain some more troubling aspects of the way money is shifted around and how little actually goes to cancer research.

Most of the pink NFL merchandise is reportedly sold through the league's online store, individual teams and at the stadiums. That makes the NFL and individual teams the retailer. As noted by Business Insider, retailers get 50 percent.

If the league is giving all that money to Breast Cancer Awareness, that sounds great.

However, consider these numbers from Darren Rovell: "On pink gear, the NFL says it takes a 25 percent royalty from the wholesale price (1/2 retail), donates 90 percent of royalty to American Cancer Society."

"In other words," writes Business Insider's Cork Gaines, "for every $100 in pink merchandise sold, $12.50 goes to the NFL. Of that, $11.25 goes to the American Cancer Society (ACS) and the NFL keeps the rest."

"The remaining money is then divided up by the company that makes the merchandise (37.5 percent) and the company that sells the merchandise (50.0%), which is often the NFL and the individual teams."

Considering only 71 percent of ACS money goes to research and cancer programs, that's how they get to the 8 percent number of your purchases actually going to cancer research and programs.

The real outrage is the big profits for the NFL and small amount that goes to their broken promise of fighting breast cancer.

How many women in pink NFL gear are now regretting their purchase when they learn only 8 percent of the money they or their generous gift-giver spent goes to cancer research?

From a purely business marketing perspective, the NFL used the emotional attraction of pretending to care about cancer survivors and victims to attract and maintain female fans and got caught profiting from the pain of millions of Americans.

From a human perspective, there's something especially sleazy about pimping such a heart-wrenching pain as Mom's cancer for financial gain.

There is sure to be a lot of buyers' remorse around the flat screens this weekend.

NFL Commissioner Roger Goodall needs to do what too few so-called "leaders" do anymore. He needs to publicly apologize to the fans, breast cancer survivors and the families of those who have lost Moms, Daughters, Sisters, Aunts, Grandmothers and Wives to cancer.

Then he needs to dig in and donate 100 percent of every penny used to purchase pink NFL gear during the month of October to cancer research.

Only then can you and I trust the NFL to be honorable with any other charitable venture.

To the Dillonite Daily to Mr. Chuck Dishno
From: LaVon D. Brillhart

Dear Mr. Dishno:

I read what you copied from the internet and had published on this page 10/3013.

There are some things that have puzzled me! You mention "socialism". Since when is helping someone in pain, helping someone not to die called socialism?

Since when is helping someone to live a better life called socialism?

Since when is helping hard working Americans who are unemployed and those in need called socialism?

Why don't you want to help your fellow Americans?

You also stated we need to "take back our nation." Does this mean we are going to give our country back to the "Native Americans"?

Or does it mean we are going to give it back to the group that got us into this trouble?

This is the group that call themselves conservatives but dislike the middle class and the working poor? This is the group that gave huge, big tax breaks to the super rich but forgot the middle class.

This is the group that gave big corporations big tax breaks, in fact many billion dollar corporations pay no taxes at all. The middle class got no tax breaks from this group.

This is the group that started illegal wars. Wars that killed thousands of innocent children, women and men. Wars that killed and wounded thousands of young American men and women.

This is the group that helped their rich friends get richer from illegal wars. And you want to go back to these days?

Just this last month we found out how much this group thought of America. They thought so much of America they shut the government down. Put thousands out of jobs. closed parks, monuments, battlefields, and national parks. Because of the government shut down, businesses lost millions of dollars.

This is the same group that call themselves conservatives but cost the tax payers some $24 billion dollars extra because of the government shut down. And you still want this for America? Why?

Mr. Dishno you act so pompous like you are the only one who loves this country! You think you are the only one who says the Pledge of Allegiance, the only one who puts their hand over their heart. Well you are wrong! You are just an angry man who listens to the gossip of those who produced the worst president this country has ever seen. This is the group that failed and don't want anyone else to succeed.

If interested please contact FFA Chapter Adviser Caleb Igo @ 683-4401 and leave a message. The money the FFA kids earn after expenses goes to help defer the cost for the FFA Student Travel. The Chapter travels several times throughout the school year to attend various competitions and trainings. FFA is a service and education organization which is intended to promote agricultural education the FFA also highly values community service, encouraging members to work in and around their communities to improve the general standards of life. Please support our local FFA kids by purchasing a load of wood. Contact Caleb Igo @683-4401.
