Wasting Wild Game Meat Is Illegal

Hunters Reminded Wasting Wild Game Meat Is Illegal
With many hunters looking back on a successful big game hunting season, it's a good time to remind hunters about the responsibility to ensure that their wild game is properly cared for and processed.

Under Montana law, it is illegal to waste any part of a game animal that is defined as "suitable for food." For big game animals, all four quarters above the hock, including loin and backstrap, fall into that category.

Hunters who can't use the wild game meat can donate it to a neighbor or friend who would appreciate it, or to a local food bank. There are many food distribution programs in Montana eager to accept big game meat.

Anyone with information about the wanton waste of wild game should call FWP's toll-free TIP-MONT hotline, 1-800-TIP-MONT. Callers who report violations of wildlife, fish or park regulations can remain anonymous and may be eligible for cash rewards.

The Mayonnaise Jar and Two Cups of Coffee

When things in our lives seem almost too much to handle When 24 hours in a day are not enough, we remember the Mayonnaise jar and the 2 cups of coffee.

A Teacher stood before his class and had some items in front of him. When the class began, he picked up a very large and empty Mayonnaise jar and proceeded to fill it with golf balls…

He then asked the students if the jar was full…They agreed that it was.

The Teacher then picked up a box of pebbles and poured them into the jar… He shook the jar lightly. The pebbles rolled into the open areas between the golf balls. He then asked the students again if the jar was full. They agreed it was.

The Teacher then picked up a box of sand and poured it into the jar. Of course the sand filled up everything else. He asked once more if the jar was full the students responded with a unanimous "yes."

The Teacher then produced two cups of coffee from under the table and poured the entire contents into the jar, effectively filling the empty space between the sand. The students laughed.

"Now," said the Teacher as the laughter subsided, "I want you to recognize that this jar represents our lives.

The golf balls are the important things — our Lord, our Spouse, our Children, our Family, and our Friends –and if everything else was lost and only they remained, our lives would still be full.

The pebbles are the other things that matter like our health, our job, our house, our car and our favorite passions. The sand is everything else — things that can wait.

If we put the sand into the jar first," he continued, "there is no room for the pebbles or the golf balls.

The same goes for life. If we spend all our time and energy on the things that can wait, we will never have room for the things that are important."

One of the students raised her hand and inquired what the coffee represented…The Teacher smiled. "I'm glad you asked."

It just goes to show you that no matter how full your life may seem, there's always room for a cup of coffee with a friend…

Brenda Marchessault Weber
1970 - 2011

Brenda will always be remembered by her very giving spirit, editing abilities, free lance writing and worldly travels. This article was one she did while in high school at BCHS.

Oh, Christmas tree

By Brenda Marchesseault

"It's ugly. It has two tops and no bottom."

"Well, I like it. Besides, it's the only one around here. You can decorate it."

Now tell me, does this conversation sound familiar to you? It's the saga of the Christmas tree. Many go through this tree turmoil every year, my family being no exception.

Annually, we trudge out with axe in hand, well actually, chain saw, as well as three layers of clothing, a few well-used sleds, a thermos of coffee, and the truck — equipped with chains, of course. To the hills we head, finally piling out after Dad manages to get unstuck for the third time.

Snowball fight! Now we all look like snowmen with rosy cheeks. Dad wants the scrubby pine next to the road; Mom intends to find the perfect tree. The rest of the family? Let's go sledding!

Ten minutes pass...

"I'm cold."

"When are we gonna go home?"

"Can I have my own tree?"

"What's Santa gonna bring me?"

"Where's the candy?"

Meanwhile, Mom's gone down to the creek, scoping out trees. Dad sits down to have a cup of coffee, disgusted.

Eventually, we find the ultimate tree or, as Dad says, "It'll do." On the way home, we manage to get stuck, lose the tree once or twice, and see a "better" tree than the one we got.

After thawing out, we attempt to put our tree up — it's too tall.

Should we cut a hole in the ceilng or decapitate the tree? Which end is better looking — the top or the bottom?

Then we operate on our evergreen, putting pine needles and sawdust everywhere. Now let's try it.

Dad says, "Hold it up while I see how it looks." The tree falls...on Dad's head. Dad is furious. "Why do we have to have a tree anyway? Santa isn't going to stop here this year — you've all been bad."

Nevertheless, our tree gets up, a piece of wire and a nail holding it in place.

"It's crooked."

"The branch on the top fell off when Dad cut the bottom off."

"The star won't say on."

So we give the spruce a facelift. We drill a couple holes in the tree and pop in some branches. Perfect...

Let's dig out the ornaments from behind the cedar chest, which is in front of the old TV, on top of Grandma's patchwork quilts, under which are found comic books and, last but not least, the Christmas decor.

Remember this one? I made it in second grade. Oh...and how about that angel? We've had it for 20 years. And these are the ornaments I brought back from Germany.

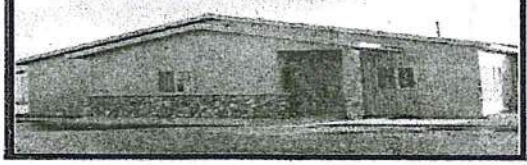

Now there's popcorn and cranberries everywhere. But the tree is beautiful. It sure looks different from the one we picked out of the patch of snow on top of the hill.

To me, the evergreen puts spruce into Christmas. It symbolizes giving and receiving, happiness and fun.

The tree hunt is a good part of the Yuletide season as is arguing over which one to get, where to put it, and the like.

Christmas just wouldn't be Christmas without the tree. Time to put presents under it. Just think, in two weeks we have to take the darn thing down!

REGION 3 CITIZENS' ADVISORY COMMITTEE TO MEET THURSDAY

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks' Region 3 Citizens' Advisory Committee (CAC) will meet in Bozeman on Thursday, Dec. 5 at the FWP Regional Office (1400 S. 19th Ave.) from 12:30 p.m. - 5:30 p.m. The public is welcome and encouraged to attend.

The CAC meets quarterly to provide input and guidance on the many natural resource and management issues addressed by FWP in southwest Montana. All meetings are open to the public. This meeting's agenda includes recognition of long standing departing members of the CAC (Cyndy Andrus, Rick Arnold, Barb Cestero, Joe Cohenour and Leroy Mehring). Several Region 3 managers will also present the major issues they will be discussing with regional county commissioners next week at the annual regional review meeting.

For more information about the Region 3 Citizens' Advisory Committee, visit the FWP Web site at http://fwp.mt.gov/regions/r3/cac/.

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks ensures its meetings are fully accessible to persons with disabilities.

Congregate Meal

Prayers for Military Peace Keepers at St. James Episcopal Church:

There will be a service honoring military personnel who have provided a peaceful nation for all of us. They may be active or veterans, at home or abroad. The service will be held at 12 noon on the first Wednesday of every month at St James Episcopal Church (203 E. Glendale). All are welcome; families, friends, military personnel and anyone who would like to thank and pray for all of the Armed Forces of the United States. The service is fairly brief and can fit into most lunch hours. The next service will be held this Wednesday, 12/4/2013. Any questions, call 683-2735. Please join us.

A Christmas Surprise

"I absolutely do not want to go to that awful rest home. I don't want to see Oma in there. I am not going, end of story," stormed Lacey.

"Well fine!!" replied her mother. "And after everything she has done for you. I am ashamed of you, Lacey Harper." Her mother had blotchy red spots on her face and was chewing on her bottom lip. "You can just stay home then, but you may not watch TV or leave the yard. We'll talk about this later."

At ten years old, Lacey was able to stay alone for short periods of time. Somehow, the house seemed more quiet than usual today. Lacey was reading a book from the "Warrior Cats" series, but even that couldn't seem to keep her attention. Finally she went into the kitchen to get a snack. Opening the blue and white cookie jar, her eyes fell on the matching blue and white teapot sitting on the shelf above the cookie jar. Lacey felt tears sting her eyes and pressure build between her shoulders. Not hungry anymore, she ran upstairs to her room. Wrapping her arms around her old tattered Tigger, she had a good hard cry. After the worst of her sobs were used up, Lacey laid on her back remembering.

Oma was Lacey's grandmother and her little house had always been Lacey's safe place, her haven. It wasn't that she didn't love her parents and her little sister, Ellie. It was that Oma was her grandmother and her friend. Oma used to laugh and tell people they were "hip attached". It was true they had a special bond. Maybe it was because they shared so many interests. She and Oma had made a fairy garden in Oma's back yard out by the big trees on the edge of Oma's fence. Each spring since she was four years old, they put the fairies out for the summer. The fairies were a collection of handmade and manufactured statues, all different sizes and shapes. Now the fairies were all packed away in boxes in the garage. Lacey had a back yard, but it was boring, not magical like Oma's had been. It didn't even have a grown up tree in it.

"There are going to be so many things that will change now," sighed Lacey to herself. At supper that night, Lacey apologized for refusing to go see Oma after school. Her mom was quick to hug her.

"Sweetheart, maybe it was for the best you didn't go. At first, Oma didn't seem to recognize me, her own daughter, and then when she did, she thought it was the year I left for college. She kept asking me if I was sure that I had packed enough underwear. I just don't know, Lacey, if this move was such a great idea. Oma just seems more confused than ever," Mom looked down at the floor and then got up quickly to take her plate to the dishwasher. Lacey couldn't think of anything to say that wouldn't be, "I told you so." She took a big gulp of milk to keep from crying again.

Moving day had been one of the worst days in Lacey's life. The doctor had told Mom and Dad that Alzheimer patients do better and were safer in a place where they got special care. Lacey knew that Oma forgot to turn off her stove burners sometimes and once, Lacey had found her out in the snow without her coat. As far back as last year, Lacey had become so worried about her grandmother that she started checking up on her every day. She didn't know if her Mom and Dad had noticed, but she had thought maybe she could make sure Oma was all right. If nothing bad happened, then maybe Oma wouldn't have to move to the Memory Care Center. She wondered how on earth Oma could possibly be less confused surrounded by strangers and white walls. No matter how hard Lacey had tried, Oma had been moved to the rest home in the end.
