Margaret "Tootsie" Foster

Margaret "Tootsie" Foster passed away Sunday, Dec. 22.

We will have an obituary as soon as available.

Born: July 25, 1927

Died: Sunday, Dec. 22, 2013

Lois Marie (Dougherty) Lynch

Lois Marie Lynch passed away on December 20, 2013 in Barrett Memorial Hospital. Lois died as she lived, on her terms and surrounded by her loving family. Lois was born in Butte, Montana on September 9, 1925 and spent her youth there. Lois met her future husband, Ray Lynch, in Butte when they were in the 8th grade. Ray and Lois were married at St. Rose Catholic Church in Dillon, Montana on June 1, 1946, in a double ceremony with her brother Lloyd Dougherty and Annabelle George.

Lois and Ray built their life and home in Dillon, Montana. Together they operated the Beaverhead Laundry and Dry Cleaners with Lloyd and Annabelle until the late 1970s. Ray and Lois were true public servants. While Ray was involved in various elected positions in Dillon, Lois was active in serving her church, her community, and raising a loving family. When Ray died in 1996, Lois filled her days serving others through volunteering. She was very active with the Beaverhead County Museum, Dillon Food Pantry, and St. Rose Parish. Lois was instrumental in growing the Barrett Hospital Auxiliary's Gift Shop into the success that it is today. The Lynch's offered their love and hospitality to everyone. Labor Day get-togethers at their home were highly anticipated every year by friends and family from near and far.

Lois was preceded in death by her husband, Raymond M. Lynch; parents, J.T. and Josephine Dougherty; brother and sister-in-law, Lloyd and Annabelle Dougherty; sister and brother-in-law Virginia and Evan Martinsen; son-in-law, Jack Eason; daughter-in-law, Bobbie Lynch; and grandson T.J.

A guestbook is available on-line at www.brundagefuneralhome.com.

UMW FOOTBALL ANNOUNCES FIRST SIGNEE OF 2014

The University of Montana Western football program has received their first signee of the 2014 recruiting year. Bulldog head coach BJ Robertson announced the signing of Dillon, Mont., senior M.J. Simkins to a Frontier Conference/NAIA Letter of intent. With UMW competing in the Frontier Conference they have to play and recruit against high quality national programs. The addition of the athletic M.J. Simkins shows that the program will keep local talent in town and should please the Bulldog coaching staff with the initial signing of 2014.

Simkins has participated in both football and American Legion baseball the past four years while attending Beaverhead County High School. He is a 5' 11" 165 pound athlete who has received second team offensive All-Conference

Mazy's Traveling Teapot by Jean Tilton James

(This story will be continued)

It's A Teapot's Life

One day, during the early monsoon season when cold winds had begun to rattle my window, a new customer swept into the shop. Dressed in a padded silk coat to keep out the relentless wind, I thought the stranger most interesting. I had come to know, "the regulars" – those customers for which my maker served tea. This person was different. He had a thin, waxed mustache that curved to his coat pockets and the air of someone who was familiar with making decisions.

"I'm looking for a present for my son," his voice was a bit loud in the little shop. "He will reach his tenth birthday soon, and I want something special."

"A boy," I thought with some concern and I hoped my maker would not look my way. Perhaps it is bad luck to think bad thoughts," I remember pondering, as my maker came straight to the window and pulled me out for the stranger to see.

"At ten years old, it may be time for the young man to learn to appreciate fine things," he bowed and placed my case in front of the customer. I am sure my top rattled as the stranger picked me up and turned me around in his very large hands. They began to barter my sale price and before I could even hear the final cost, I was placed back in my box, with the box clasp fastened. I heard the muffled conversation continue and the sound of paper wrapping. My next life had begun.

Jiang Tian nu, my first owner, lived up to his Chinese name. In Chinese the last name is listed first, so Tian nu was how his family called him. Tian means sky, heaven, and celestial. Make no mistake, the young master truly fancied himself the God of his household. Nu means to exert, strive, or make an effort. Tian nu did not often live up to that part of his name, unless he was striving to make his nanny chase after him. On the day Tian nu's father brought me home to be a birthday present for the young master, I was lucky to survive being opened.

"Son, it is time you learned to contain yourself and to recognize beauty when you see it. Therefore, I am presenting you with your first porcelain piece," his father pronounced grandly. Tian nu, who was hoping for sweetmeats, was not greatly impressed when he saw a bird-shaped teapot in the box; however, he knew his father was expecting a grownup response from him.

"Thank you my dearest father," he bowed and then asked, "Can it be used for the drinking of tea? Perhaps it is only for looking at," he added in a somewhat disappointed voice. The boy's father explained that I was a fully working teapot, but must be shown great respect for my fine craftsmanship.

"We must never give too much importance to possessions," he said wisely. "But we must treasure beauty as a gate to the sublime." Tian nu wasn't at all sure what his father meant, but he nodded politely and then asked permission to go with his nanny to play in the garden before his birthday party. Tian nu's father granted the boy's wish, but looked downhearted as he tucked me back in my box. "Perhaps the boy just isn't quite old enough to enjoy this present," he muttered.

I was placed on a shelf in Tian nu's room and seldom saw the sun or moonlight. Seasons passed and I learned to occupy myself with daydreaming. Although I had experienced the world only briefly and that, through the window in my maker's shop, I had listened and learned all that my young mind could absorb. It was also during this time I learned to amuse myself by using my imagination. At first, I was only able to travel back in my mind to the scenes outside my maker's window. I remembered the old woman who swept the street outside the shop. Her back was bent into a perfect half circle and I thought that she must not have been able to see the sky. I imagined that I was a real bird that could fly down and peck at the bits of dust and rubble she swept ahead of her. Then I made up a story about gently landing on her back and fanning away her hurts with my magic wings. In my story, she threw her broom down, stood tall and smiled up at the dust specks dancing in a shaft of sunshine.

I made up another story about my maker. In my story, he made a gold teapot and gave it to the emperor. The emperor liked the teapot so much that my maker was given a place in the Forbidden City where he made beautiful teapots for all of the emperor's wives and children.

Thus I passed long and boring days, hidden away in my box and entertaining myself with my imagination. Then one day, I felt my box being moved quickly. Tian nu was by now a young man and a student of Chinese medicine. He had been exposed to the world enough to realize that he was indeed not a celestial being, but an ordinary man. His father would have been surprised at the words he uttered upon opening my box.

"Poor father, he thought I would never learn to appreciate beauty. I will take this teapot with me on the journey ahead to remind me of father and all that I am leaving behind. We must hurry now, little bird, because it is dangerous to stay any longer." I was hastily packed in a box among a few carefully selected objects and strapped to Tian nu back.

As we journeyed to our departure port of Shanghai, a fellow student accompanied Tian nu. It was from their conversations that I learned about the terrible unrest in my country. Foreigners were now in control of our larger cities, especially those along the coast where ships delivered foreigners and foreign goods and left with Chinese products to take to European and other world markets. The Manchu dynasty was in control, and very unpopular. Tian nu talked about how excited he had been during Emperor Guangxu's Hundred Days of Reform. The hated Manchu emperor had at last begun the work of turning China into a modern nation, but then there was a rebellion at court. Emperor Guangxu's aunt overpowered the emperor and no reforms happened. Tian nu was very sad, but also in danger, as he had supported the emperor's attempt at reform.

Tian nu and his friend spent much of our trip to Shanghai talking about all the things that they must do to get past the port authorities and to buy passage on a ship bound for America. They hoped to do all of this by making up new names and by bribing the officials. That was the way things were done in China in the year 1900. I was frightened for my young owner. I couldn't hear all that was being said through the layers covering my carrying box, but I understood that if something went wrong, my owner could be hurt or even killed.
