BARRETT
HOSPITAL & HEALTHCARE

BARRETT HOSPITAL OCCUPATIONAL THERAPIST OFFERS LYMPHEDEMA THERAPY

Barrett Hospital & HealthCare Rehab Services is pleased to announce that Dorothy DeHart, MOTR/L, CLT, LANA, is offering lymphedema treatment, or specialized treatment for chronic swelling.

Chronic swelling caused by lymphedema can have two different causes: 1) trauma, radiation or surgery that involves damage to or removal of the lymph nodes or lymphatic vessels in a particular area of the body that can present as long-standing swelling and sores, especially on the legs, and 2) a congenital defect of the lymphatic system that can cause lymphedema or risk of lymphedema.

This chronic edema or swelling should not be ignored and allowed to take its course—it will almost inevitably become steadily worse. The sooner our patients begin a suitable program of therapy, the better their prospects of preventing the progression of the disease and of improving their condition. Management of lymphedema is a two-phase process, with the first involving reduction of the swelling and the second involving maintaining and improving the results of phase one.

A physician's referral is required to treat lymphedema. The first appointment includes a comprehensive evaluation and education. Loose, comfortable clothing is recommended for ease in treatment. Treatments are scheduled 3-5 times/week for 60-90 minutes at a time. Usually patients are seen at least 10-15 times depending on the severity of the swelling. Several self-massage techniques are taught that can be done independently at home. The home program helps to maintain progress between therapy sessions. At the conclusion of formal therapy sessions, the patient will be fitted with a compression garment to help maintain the progress made during therapy.

If you think you may benefit from lymphedema therapy, please contact your physician or the Rehabilitation Department at 683-3098 to learn more!

2016 Crystal Ball
By Peter Funt
 It says here that Jeb Bush has the best shot at the Republican presidential nomination in 2016, while Hillary Clinton might not be the Democrats' candidate — and if she is, she's no sure thing. Picking a president has become a tedious and expensive non-stop exercise. Those of us who dwell on it, especially years before the voting, are probably doing ourselves and the process no service. Funny thing: a phrase heard frequently on Capitol Hill nowadays is, "We shouldn't be a nation that picks winners and losers." Yet that's what we do. As far as the public is concerned, picking an American president seems at times little different than picking an American Idol.

Barring full-scale war, economic collapse or other catastrophes in the next few years, Americans are likely to look for a candidate in 2016 who seems the most "normal."

Richard Nixon was outside the norm, and was replaced by the supremely normal Gerald Ford, by process, and Jimmy Carter, by vote. Then we had Ronald Reagan, who was as far removed from DC politics as geography and philosophy would allow, followed by the straight arrow George H. W. Bush. Next came the maverick Bill Clinton, leading us to the plain vanilla terms of George W. Bush, positioned as, "the guy you'd most like to have a beer with."

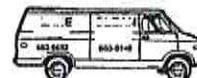

Some explain this as a swinging of the pendulum, a course correction. But it's also a pattern in which daring choices are followed by a collective deep breath.

Electing Barack Obama was the boldest move American voters have made in decades. Regardless of what you think of his presidency — and I believe history will view it far more favorably than current opinion polls do — America is ready for another time out.

That's probably the biggest thing Hillary Clinton has going against her. The nation is not likely to elect its first woman president immediately after selecting its first African American president — even if doing so would be a fine idea. Americans also don't like seemingly preordained candidates and, in the minds of many Democrats, Clinton might just as well skip the election and go straight to taking the oath.

Among Republicans, New Jersey's Chris Christie is damaged, and probably wasn't going to score nationally even before his bridge scandal. Wisconsin's Scott Walker is too extreme, and Kentucky's Rand Paul too toxic. Florida's Marco Rubio and Louisiana's Bobby Jindal are not ready for prime time. Texas' Rick Perry had his chance in 2012 and self-destructed.

They will all be heard from as the campaign takes shape, but none provides the comfort level that GOP voters — except, perhaps, those at the Tea Party fringes — need this time around. Ohio's John Kasich and Indiana's Mike Pence are real possibilities. As governors, they're properly positioned away from the stench in Washington that has left voters holding their noses, but neither has much national recognition.

Enter Jeb Bush, the former Florida governor who, according to CNN, has quietly started talking to fundraisers and is taking a "very serious look" at running in 2016.

A third Bush in the White House? Even some center-right Republicans might blanch at that after what, to put it kindly, was the less than glorious presidency of George W.

Then again, Jeb was always a smart administrator and a savvy politician. Although his mother, Barbara Bush, has come out publicly against it, the Florida Bush might be the candidate best suited to repair serious splits in GOP ranks.

Don't be surprised if, come 2016, the nation decides that a Bush in the hand is worth two in the polls.

Letter to the EditorSTRANGE HAPPENINGS

By Charles L. Kissling

A lumber company over by Ennis reports a sale of just under a dozen rails. Rails??

Another chicken rancher sold 2 very large bags of feathers.

Local lumber is having a run on 5 gal pails of tar. Now why would anyone try to spread tar at this time of year. Strange, very strange.

DON'T LET PETS CHASE WILDLIFE!

On Friday, Region 3 Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks (FWP) game wardens responded to reports of a dog chasing a cow elk in a subdivision southeast of Bozeman. The dog's owner could not get the unleashed pet to come when called. In fairly deep snow, the dog chased the elk for 2 1/2 hours.

While eventually the chase came to an end, incidents like this put wildlife in great danger. Dogs in particular can cause serious injury or kill animals much larger than themselves. The stress of a chase alone can eventually lead to the death of an animal. FWP reminds pet owners to secure their animals – especially in areas where wildlife might be present.

This is a make-or-break time of year for deer and elk. Often they can be found in large groups close to urban areas. This makes it more likely that these animals might come into contact with domestic pets. Dogs will instinctually be curious and, if left unchecked, run after groups of deer and elk. Of course, pets can also be injured or killed while attempting to take down an animal big or small. Therefore, it is best to keep pets close and keep dogs leashed.

In the case last week, the dog's owner was cited for permitting a dog to harass animals and may be fined up to $1000.
