Kenneth James Nettles

Kenneth James Nettles, PHD, 91 of Dillon, Montana passed away at Parkview Acres Care and Rehabilitation Center on March 11, 2014. He was born in Charleston, South Carolina to Louis A. Nettles and Teresa (Johnson) Nettles on July 3, 1922.

He was married to Ruth Bethea Nettles and they had two children Kenneth Charles who is deceased and James Langley Nettles of Phoenix, Arizona. Ken is a retired Chaplain Major from the United States Air Force in 1973 after 20 years of service to our country. He asked that the following inscription be put on his headstone "a patriot who hates unnecessary war". He and Ruth had traveled all over the world and chose Dillon, Montana as their favorite place to live. He enjoyed fishing, bird watching and baseball. He was a Christian who held a Doctorate of Theology from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky. He wrote and published a book in 1957, "The Supernatural Origin of the Bible."

Ken is preceded in death by his wife; Ruth and son; Kenneth, brother, Louis A. Nettles, Jr. of Tallulah, LA and sister, Teresa N. Shames of Rogersville, MO. He is survived by son; James (Sandra) Nettles of Phoenix, Arizona, daughter-in-law; Patricia of Rantoul, Illinois, 5 grandchildren, nieces and nephews, and niece; Donna Ervin of Tallulah, Louisiana who is assisting with arrangements. Graveside services will be held on Thursday, March 20th at Mountain View Cemetery at 11 AM.

Jeanne Hartman

After a courageous battle with cancer, Jeanne Hartman, 66, of Ennis, passed away on Thursday, March 13, 2014.

She was born to the late Leonard and Edna Horsfall, Dec. 2, 1947, in Anaconda. Jeanne graduated from Anaconda High School in 1966 and received a bachelor of science degree in elementary education from Western Montana College, Dillon, in 1970. She married Art Hartman in 1969, and they lived together in Dillon, before relocating to Ennis in 1974.

Jeanne was a grade school teacher until she retired in 2005 and was passionate about making a difference in the lives of her students. She found many fun and creative ways to pass on her joy of learning to her students — including her love of reading. Over the years she enjoyed bowling, playing softball, gardening, playing cards, and watching her children and grandchildren in all of their activities.

She was a loving wife, mother, grandmother, a dear sister and friend — she was very loved and will be dearly missed.

She was preceded in death by parents, Leonard and Edna Horsfall; sister, Linda May; and son, Tony Hartman.

Survivors include her husband of 44 years, Art Hartman; daughter, Becki and Mike Meehan and their children, Nolan and Teagan of Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; son, Andrew Hartman and Patrick Mangan of Portland, Ore.; sisters, Sheri Horsfall

Toilet Installation Proposed for Chief Joseph Parking Area

The Wisdom Ranger District of the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest is considering a proposal from the Bitterroot Cross-Country
Ski Club to install an additional accessible vault toilet at the Chief Joseph Trailhead parking area. The trailhead is located approximately 23 miles west of Wisdom, adjacent to Montana Highway 43.

The current capacity of the existing toilet has been exceeded at the popular trailhead and trail system to adequately serve the needs of visitors. The club is pursuing a grant to purchase a new double-vault toilet which the Forest Service would install near the single-vault unit already on site.

Comments to this proposal should be submitted by April 18, 2014.
Comments should include: name; postal and email address; and phone number. All comments will be considered part of the public record, and available for public review.

Share your comments, concerns, or ideas with Russ Riebe, Wisdom District Ranger, 300 Forest Service Road, Wisdom, MT 59761.
Email comments may be sent to comments-northern-beaverheaddeerlodge@fs.fed.us, type Chief Joseph SST in the subject line or send them by fax to (406) 689-3245. Information about this and other Forest projects are available on the web at [www.fs.usda.gov/

Sage Grouse Rebellion Will Obama use to small birds to limit oil drilling in the West?

Almost half the land west of the Mississippi belongs to the federal government, including 48% of California, 62% of Idaho and 81% of Nevada. No surprise that the Obama Administration wants to control more. But the result could be to suppress the country's booming oil and gas development.

In partnership with green activists, the Department of Interior may attempt one of the largest federal land grabs in modern times, using a familiar vehicle—the Endangered Species Act (ESA). A record 757 new species could be added to the protected list by 2018. The two species with the greatest impact on private development are range birds—the greater sage grouse and the lesser prairie chicken, both about the size of a barnyard chicken. The economic stakes are high because of the birds' vast habitat.

Interior is expected to decide sometime this month whether to list the lesser prairie chicken, which inhabits five western prairie states, as "threatened" under the Endangered Species Act. Meantime, the Bureau of Land Management and U.S. Forest Service are considering land-use amendments to protect the greater sage grouse, which would lay the groundwork for an ESA listing next year.

The sage grouse is found in 11 western states—California, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Utah, Washington, and Wyoming. Most of the areas affected are federal lands routinely used for farming, ranching, mining, road building, water projects and oil and gas drilling.

However, much of the prairie chicken population and some sage grouse are on private property that could become subject to some of the most invasive private land-use rules and property acquisitions in the history of the protected-species law. The birds' habitat includes an estimated 50 million to 100 million acres of federal and private land, according to the federal Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Environmental groups have won victories by using a strategy called "sue and settle" under which groups propose species for protected status and then sue the federal government, which settles the lawsuit on terms favorable to the greens rather than fight. These settlements typically bypass a thorough review of the scientific evidence and exclude affected parties, such as industry and local communities.

According to Kent Holsinger, a natural resources attorney in Denver heavily involved in these cases, "Wildlife Guardians and Center for Biological Diversity have been party to more than 1,000 lawsuits between 1990 and the present." The Center for Biological Diversity has made no secret of wanting to end fossil-fuel production in the U.S.

Interior's proposed "land use" amendments are draconian. They require a four-mile "buffer zone" whenever a sage-grouse mating ground is discovered on federal land. The American Petroleum Institute calls the proposed rules a "de facto ban on drilling." It fears that compliance could cost tens of millions of dollars in legal fees and cause years of drilling delays.

Huge swaths of land that would go off limits to development are some of the nation's most productive oil and gas fields. The prairie chicken sits atop Texas's Permian Basin oil bonanza, and the sage grouse is near the Bakken Shale in North Dakota. An Interior Department report describes the impact on the sage grouse of oil and gas operations as "universally negative and typically severe," even though modern horizontal drilling leaves a much smaller footprint than in the past.

Most western states have conservation efforts underway to head off federal listings. No less a liberal than Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said in December that an ESA listing for the grouse "will have major ramifications on rural life and the economies in Nevada and throughout the west." Mr. Reid has proposed alternative grouse restoration measures in Nevada with fellow Senator Dean Heller.

In November, Colorado Governor John Hickenlooper asked the Obama Administration not to list the greater sage grouse because of the potential economic harm. The Democrat earlier this year also sent a letter to the Bureau of Land Management challenging its proposed protections as unscientific and offering a more flexible approach. West Texas energy developers and farmers have contributed $15 million to a prairie chicken protection fund. However, green groups say anything short of an ESA listing is insufficient.

Colorado Senator Mark Udall has been pushing Interior to delay the sage grouse decision, perhaps with his difficult re-election campaign in mind. The Administration may oblige to keep the Senate, but Democrats ought to declare themselves on the larger green strategy of using lawsuits and regulation to kill jobs and economic development.

It was probably inevitable that the Obama Administration's alliance with greens would come into direct conflict with the economic boon the West is enjoying from shale gas and oil development. The Interior Department may say the ESA requires protection for the sage grouse and prairie chicken, but the damage to human beings would be enormous.
