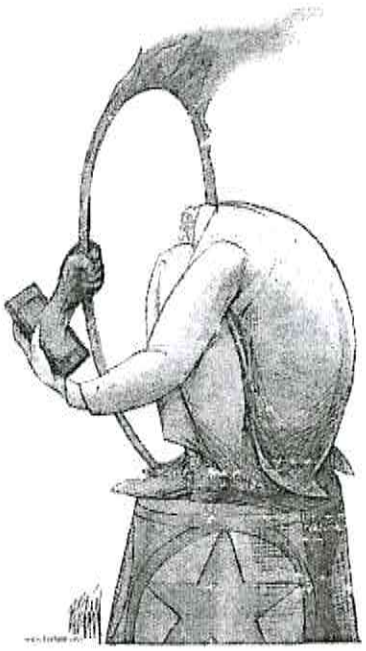
Phone Addiction Not So Smart

By Tom Purcell

Get this: People are becoming addicted to their smartphones.

According to a report from Flurry Analytics, says The Washington Post's Style Blog, the average mobile consumer checks his phone 150 times a day. A "mobile addict" is defined as someone who launches apps more than 60 times a day — 10 times as often as the average smartphone user.

The number of addicts is growing rapidly. Flurry Analytics said there were 79 million mobile addicts in March 2013. By March 2014, the number had soared to 176 million. Mobile addicts are growing at a rate five times that of regular users.



And that is causing many people a bit of grief.

A smartphone, for those of you over 55, is a cellphone that is also a mini-computer. It allows people to search the web, run a variety of applications and text (the act of pressing both thumbs against a miniature keypad to bastardize the English language).

According to Psychology Today, "Many suffer from anxiety if they lose their phone, even if only for a few minutes. We rely on it to do everything from saying 'I love you' to breaking up, from checking bank balances to investing, from sharing photos of the grandchild to sexting. We can carry out a plethora of daily tasks, right from the palm of our hand."

So important have smartphones become, psychologists have coined a name for the fear of being without them: nomophobia.

Psychology Today cites a list of symptoms: You are anxious whenever your phone is not in your possession. You constantly check your phone for texts and feel compelled to respond immediately. You are halfway to the store, realize you forgot your phone and turn around to go get it.

Some people are suffering from phantom cellphone vibration. This is when they think their phone is vibrating and it turns out to be a false alarm.

Haven't we all encountered a person who is sitting right across from us, but is so focused on checking Facebook or texting friends, he or she doesn't hear a word you say?

Don't get me wrong — technology has brought about awesome improvements to my life. I have quick and easy access to tremendous amounts of information. Thanks to my computer and smartphone, I'm able to make a good living from my home.

But as we continue to gain mastery over our physical world, maybe we need to refocus on our emotional and spiritual worlds.

I think about the way my grandfather lived in the 1920s and '30s. Houses were close together then. Large porches were built on the front, and people sat out at night and talked. On Saturdays, my grandfather and his sisters strolled over to their mother's house. They played cards, sang and told stories.

But today, we shut ourselves inside air-conditioned homes. Our garages are in the front and our porches are hidden in the back. Heck, many neighbors in transient neighborhoods don't know each other or even say "hello."

And thanks to our smartphones, we further isolate ourselves in the vacuum of cyberspace — communicating electronically with cyberfriends far more often than we do in person.

The Style Blog summarized the problems of smartphone addiction with a quote from Nicholas Carr, author of "The Shallows."

"The smartphone, more than any other gadget, steals from us the opportunity to maintain our attention, to engage in contemplation and reflection, or even to be alone with our thoughts."

Technological innovation is a wonderful thing, but we just need to keep an eye on it before it allows us to become dull, detached and less able to enjoy genuine interaction with our fellow human beings.

Letter to the Editor

To The Voters of Beaverhead County:

In the weeks ahead, voters of Beaverhead County will elect a new member to the Board of Trustees of Barrett Hospital and HealthCare. I urge you to support Lawrence Morrisroe in this election.

Lawrence has served for the past three years as a member of the Board of the Barrett Hospital Foundation. He has proven his commitment to the hospital and ensuring healthcare excellence for future generations. He has demonstrated tremendous enthusiasm, knowledge and skill in his role as a volunteer for the Hospital Foundation and these attributes will serve the Board of Trustees well.

I have known Lawrence for 18 years, spanning his days as a Gonzaga College student to becoming a husband, father and resident of our community. He will be a great addition to the Hospital Board and I urge you to vote for Lawrence.

Life & Shoestrings

By: MJ

Have you ever thought of your life looking like a ball of shoe strings tied in a knot? Notice that each shoe string is a different color representing the different parts in your life such as personal demons, families, friends, jobs, finances... Humans are survivors and during a lifetime will be required to tie knots for survival. One might look at a knot as a way that was found to cope with circumstances like; being spoiled rotten with riches, addiction to problems, death, abuse, illness... Many times the knots we tie are only needed for a period of time during our lifetime, yet over time the knot becomes our protector, part of who we are and to untie the knot would take time, thought, energy and work. Humans are prone to take the easy road so they just keep putting new knots on top of old ones creating something that resembles a ball of twisted rotting broken rubber bands.

Untying a knot is letting go of the reason the knot was tied in first place. The reason you don't let go of the past knot that is no longer needed in your life today might be; anger you carry because someone questioned your reasoning, anger over abuse that is no longer part of your life, anger because people do not do what you wanted, anger over the death of loved one...

Today's society has taught us that things come quick and easy and it's difficult to have patience to stick with a problem until we see a breakthrough.

Knots go with us where ever we go in our life and have a profound effect on every part of our life, from how we make decisions, how we interact with other people, pride we take with jobs, our personal life... We carry our pile of knots to our work, to family relationships, to committees we serve on, positions we hold in the local communities, to relationships with friends...

BCHS BITTERROOT INVITATIONAL TENNIS

The boy's 1 and 2 singles and doubles was played at the Stevensville courts April 26. Singles format was a 16 player draw. Players were guaranteed at least two matches, so first round losers went into the backdraw. In the main draw, second round losers had no more play if they lost at that point. This format was used due to the number of schools participating in a one day event. The boy's 1 and 2 doubles format was a round robin. Boys 3 and 4 singles and doubles played their matches at Corvallis along with the girl's 3 and 4 singles and doubles. There was a main draw format with consolation matches for some if time allowed.

Girl's 1 and 2 singles and doubles were played at Hamilton courts with a main draw and consolation matches.

In boys singles, Mark Waldrup lost a heartbreaker match to Loyola's #2 in a 10 pt third set tiebreaker 12-10 while John Bodnar played 4 rounds and made it to the consolation finals losing 7-6, 6-4 to Butte Central's #1 singles player. Other fine play was girl's doubles #1 Taryn Judge and Holly Hansen who lost in the finals of the main draw to Corvallis #1's. The #2 doubles team of Rachael Nye and Kodi Ferris lost in the finals of the consolation to Whitefish #2's. The scores show strong play by #3 doubles Jennifer Womack and Nicole Thompson as well as a solid performance by #1 singles player and freshman, Adrianne Southam and #4 singles and freshman, Tessa Sawyer.

Tomorrow we will have the scores from this tournament along with the scores from the Dillon Tri Meet from Tuesday matches played at home.
