GRIZZLY RELOCATED TO UPPER GALLATIN AFTER LIVESTOCK KILL

On Wednesday, July 16, Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks relocated an 8-year-old male grizzly bear responsible for killing a young cow in the Red Lodge area Sunday to the Upper Gallatin area north of Yellowstone National Park.

FWP assisted USDA-Wildlife Services in capturing the bear Tuesday in grassland habitat on private land between Red Lodge and Belfry.

After capture, the bear was immobilized to determine age, sex and if the bear had previously been captured or "marked". The bear was identified as having been captured at 3-years-old for research purposes by Wyoming Game & Fish in 2009. It had no known previous conflict history. For that reason, it was decided by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service and FWP to relocate the bear.

The bear was radio-collared and re-tagged to monitor its movements. If the bear gets into other conflicts it will most likely be captured again and removed from the population.

This is the second male grizzly bear captured in southern Montana this year due to livestock depredations. In the first case, a 9-year-old male was captured in May in the upper Paradise Valley. Numerous cattle depredations had occurred on a ranch in that area last fall, and began again as soon as cattle were brought back to the ranch in the spring. Those events were investigated by USDA-Wildlife Services and FWP. The bear in that case was captured and removed from the population.

Similar to bear movements seen on the eastern front of Northern Continental Divide Ecosystem, Yellowstone bears are moving farther away from what was considered suitable occupied habitat as the grizzly population density increases and a recovered population exists.

CITY HAPPENINGS

By: Lynn Westad

It has been awhile since I have reported as I was under the weather for a bit. To accurately report you have to attend all meetings on a regular basis. Especially committee meetings as a subject may have several stages of information gathering before a decision can be made. The reports in the Dillionite of the activities of the City Council and Committees have been inaccurate and sometimes completely wrong. The incorrect reporting and negative comments do not help the Mayor and the Council move forward and get the City work done.

The July 16, City Council meeting was called to order by Mayor Klakken at 7:00 pm. A letter was received from a visitor at the Cemetery on Memorial Day stating how well the cemetery was maintained and all the flags from the entrance to the grave sites were perfect. A NeighborWorks Montana letter for a housing program was referred to the Finance Committee.

There was a request from the Library for a parade on July 31 on Idaho as the Grande Finale for the summer reading program which was approved. The Knotty Pine Tavern requested a street closure on July 19th which was approved. The Finance Committee had met and a recommendation to council was made to approve the City Employee Contract and the Police Contract which the Council did with a unanimous vote. The Cemetery/Parks Committee minutes were next. The Committee recommended approval of a Montana Street closure Friday August 29th of Fair week between Reeder and Sebree streets. Beer will be served from the new Brewery and a Butte distributor along with other activities.

The Cemetery/Parks Committee recommended that the City handle the vendors in the Depot Park Labor Day weekend. The fee for vendors is $200.00 and must be paid to the City before the vendor sets up.

The Committee then went to the Cemetery to discuss security issues due to increasing vandalism and recommended the purchase of four security cameras which was approved by the Council.

The Water/Sewer Committee had met for a tour of the new Wastewater treatment plant. They are pleased to report that the project came in ahead of schedule, under cost and is working perfectly. Approval was given for a building to be built to protect a piece of equipment from winter weather which is part of the system. The last comment was what an improvement over the last sixty years.

There was more openness and better communication from all at this meeting.

We did again have negative comments from the same 3 negative individuals during public comment period. It tends to have you go home discouraged but then I remember it is only 3 people in the community two of which don't reside in the city.

WOLF TRAPPING CERTIFICATION CLASS SET FOR BOZEMAN AUGUST 16

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks will hold a Wolf Trapping Certification class at its regional headquarters in Bozeman on Saturday, August 16 from 8 a.m. to noon. Digital Cheese, and We're the Rats

Raging Moderate by Will Durst

Plenty of people had good reason to be in a foul mood back in 2012. The Detroit Tigers. Members of the Romney family. And, after making the acquaintance of a windy lass named Sandy, most of New England. Now, we can add to that list the thousands of suckers who were manipulated by our good friend at Facebook. Although the word they coined- "unfriend," might fit better here.

Recently it was revealed the social media behemoth filtered the messages of 700,000 users by flooding them with uplifting and/ or depressing posts, then monitoring who got happy and who got sad. "Oh no. Grandma's bicycle got run over by a garbage truck. Awww. But hey! Watch what happens when this pit bull chews on a kiddie pool."

They say we agreed to this kind of BS when we signed on, but-come on. Its doubtful even the employees who write them read those user agreements. Typically, they're longer than the migratory path of the monarch butterfly, more confusing than Cantonese crosswords and displayed in flea font.

Corporate lawyers didn't evolve from mud-sucking, bottom-feeders for nothing. They know how to hide all sorts of stuff in that fine print. Wouldn't be surprised to discover there's a clause stating that in time of war, they own one of my kidneys. And another that gives them the right to call at any time of night demanding help in moving a body.

Google also admits to running 20,000 experiments on its search results every year and you can bet Twitter, Amazon, Pinterest and Crabgrass.com are doing the same. Probably even Yahoo has scientists using tools calibrated back in the 90s. The 1890s.

Some bloggers claim to be outraged, but anybody not expecting to be pushed, filed, stamped, indexed, briefed, debriefed and numbered is probably a big fan of the tooth fairy and still drinking juice out of a sippy cup, wearing footy pajamas. Online privacy is like Taliban science. A fictional concept.

Think of it as Newton's Law 3.1. The price we must pay for having the world at our fingertips, is maintaining an equal and opposite availability to everyone else's fingertips. Some of which are cold and clammy. Especially the Faceless ones with the chromium digits. But we've adapted. You don't hear a lot of noise about folks going back to MySpace. Or Compuserve.

Facebook claims they're simply trying to create the best environment possible for their petri dish of social contact. And we microbes can expect the research to not only continue, but get more sophisticated. Won't be long before they are able to predict which of our family members will pass out before Thanksgiving Dinner. Which could come in handy with menu planning.

Our best bet is to nudge them in consumer friendly directions. Don't they want to know how many people would delete their accounts after all cute cat videos were outlawed? How about a "Bummer" button for deaths, divorces, debacles, disasters and defeats?

The thing is, if Mark Zuckerberg and his ilk are going to use us as lab rats, the least they could do is throw us some minor rewards. When rats finish a maze, aren't they supposed to get cheese? Hey Zuck, where's our digital cheese? Make mine Cheddar. Swiss puts me in a bad mood. Ooops. Shouldn't have said that.
