Hal Joseph Dale

Hal Joseph Dale entered the world April 19, 1923, and left it January 17, living 91 exuberant, creative, dream-plotting years.

He was born in Abe (now population 0), a town named by his father to be the first Montana town in the alphabet. It was a town of five ranch families on Ruby Creek of the Madison. He began life there with an older sister and two older brothers on a small ranch. Finally, according to his sister, their dad decided it was time his children were "learning to do something besides chase cows and catch jackrabbits." He wanted them to be "civilized," so the family moved to Virginia City. His dad became undersheriff there and Hal spent his early years of civilization roaming the streets of Virginia City.

Hal joined the Air Force and was in the Asiatic Pacific Theater 1943-1945. He then mined with his brothers in the Tobacco Root and McCarty Mountains, and worked in the Butte mines as a sampler before starting college at Western. He noted that he made so much money he was able to buy a new car and several fine parties. The car, a yellow convertible, was a good investment, for it attracted the attention of Virginia Irvine, a Dillon high school teacher who later became Virginia Dale and the mother of their two daughters, Paulette and Virginia II. Hal graduated from Western and continued on, receiving a master's degree in education from the University of Montana in Missoula.

Hal and Virginia based themselves in Missoula until retirement and then moved back to Dillon, where they lived the past 30 years.

Hal's professional life began as an eighth grade science teacher at Paxson School in Missoula. He became Superintendent of Cold Springs school when it was still it's own district. He spent 25 years as a teacher and elementary school principal, mainly in Missoula. During that time, he said of himself he had a penchant for being president of organizations.

Upon retirement Hal, in partnership with brother Claude Dale and inspired by brother Dick Dale, developed an old gold mining camp in Belle Canyon of the Tobacco Root Mountains.

An avid hiker, Hal patented his own hiking pole design that included hiking, cross-country, downhill and another pole for the disabled. He developed his own exercise program, too. At age 65, he climbed to the top of Mount Whitney in California.

Hal is survived by: his wife, Virginia; daughter Paulette; daughter Virginia; son-in-law Dan Gabig; granddaughter Madison; and numerous nieces, nephews and cousins.

Services will be in Dillon at St. James Episcopal Parish on Saturday at 2 p.m.. Ashes will be scattered at a later date in his beloved Belle Canyon. Memorials are suggested to the University of Montana Foundation or Barrett Hospital Home Health Care in Dillon

THE UNIVERSITY OF MONTANA WESTERN WELCOMES NEW CHANCELLOR

The 22nd chancellor of the University of Montana Western, Beth Weatherby, began her duties this past week.

"It has been a wonderful week," Weatherby said. "This is a highly innovative university, so as you can imagine, the faculty and staff are very creative, intelligent and energetic. I'm thoroughly enjoying meeting them. The students I've met are excited and energized by the block scheduling and experiential curriculum, and all of our student success statistics have reached enviable levels. Students are thriving at Montana Western. I feel very fortunate to be a part of such a vibrant university and the beautiful community of Dillon and look forward to building on the phenomenal success the university has realized over the last 10 years."

University of Montana President Royce Engstrom made the announcement of Weatherby's hiring on Oct. 20, 2014, concluding an extensive search that began last spring. Montana Western is an affiliate campus of UM.

From 2007 to 2014, Weatherby has served as the provost and vice president of academic and student affairs for Southwest Minnesota State University, increasing undergraduate enrollment by 12 percent in one year. In addition she has worked with three presidents and their teams to substantially increase the university's fundraising, led the transformation of the undergraduate curriculum, and worked with faculty to build programs related to food and agriculture, nursing and exercise science.

Weatherby earned a doctorate of arts in English and creative writing from the University of Albany in New York and has a bachelor of science degree in journalism from Northwestern University.

U of M WESTERN HOSTS ALUMNI EVENTS

The University of Montana Western Alumni Association announces two upcoming events.

The first alumni event will take place on Friday, Jan. 30, at 4:45 p.m. at Beaverhead Brewery in Dillon. This is the first installation of the alumni association's monthly after-hours event for alumni and friends. The last Friday of every month will provide an opportunity for alumni and friends of Montana Western to gather for socializing and networking. For this first event, attendees are encouraged to bring an appetizer or snack to share with the group.

The following evening, Jan. 31, the alumni association is hosting "Alumni Night" during the Montana Western versus Montana Tech men's and women's basketball games. Alumni and friends are invited to join the alumni association in the Keltz Arena on the UMW campus from 4:30-9 p.m. for appetizers and a no-host bar.

Alumni who register with the alumni association that evening will receive a complimentary admission ticket to watch the Bulldogs take on the Oregidgers. Recognition will take place during basketball games.

CSKT Compact Protects Water Rights in Beaverhead County

As water users in Beaverhead County, we expect our water rights to have as much protection as any other personal property right. Beaverhead County's main economic driver is agriculture, having a reliable water source for all irrigation and agricultural uses in Beaverhead County and Montana is critical to maintaining our livelihood.

Currently, Montana is in the process of ratifying a compact agreement with the Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes (CSKT) of the Flathead Indian Reservation. This process has taken years and many stakeholders have come to the table to negotiate a reasonable solution for all parties. If a negotiated agreement cannot be reached, the Tribe will file and litigate in the Water Court all water rights provided to the CSKT through treaty in 1855.

If the Tribe files and litigates these rights, it would result in decades of costly litigation to seek the definition of those rights. This may all be avoided by ratifying the current compact agreement that has been made between the State of Montana, the Federal Government, and the Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes.

The Compact ensures that water users can continue to utilize their water rights as they always have and receive the same amount of water as they have historically held. Without the Compact, not only would the water that has historically been used by irrigators be subject to litigation, causing uncertainty in the amount of water they would be able to access and utilize, but it would allow the federal government to exert greater control over in-stream flows. If the federal government can decide to divert water for in-stream flows, Montana irrigators may very well be left with dry creek beds during times of drought if the Compact is not passed.

Thanks to the diligent work of the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, and local Senator Debbie Barrett, the CSKT Compact will be passed on to the Legislature in Helena for final ratification. Sen. Barrett sits on the Compact Commission and voted in favor of passing the current Compact agreement on to the Legislature. We thank her for her hard work and dedication to protecting the property rights of water right holders in Beaverhead County.
