Welborn's Weekly Legislative Review

Helena:

First, I want to make a shout out to T'iel Lochridge, the 2015 Montana State spelling bee champion. Congratulations on a job very well done.

I also had a chance to host Dale Royer, a BCHS Junior, as a House Page this past week. Thanks to Dale for taking part in the Legislative Process, and I hope it was all that you expected and more.

The State's major budget bill, HB 2 was taken up for debate before the full House this past week. The Republican-led House passed a nearly $10 billion budget, that was 2.5% lower than Governor Bullock's proposed budget for on going spending for the next two year budget cycle. The House passed the bill 59-41 on a party-line vote Thursday afternoon after rejecting nearly 100 amendments by Democrats. Everything from $37 million for Early Edge, a preschool program, to additional pay raises for certain state employees, to funding other programs at current levels. Republicans, who hold a majority in the House, denied nearly $1 billion in additional state services requested by Democrats. What does all this really mean? The budget in it's current form is holding State spending increases to the cost of inflation over the next biennium. This is the prudent thing to do, so we can perhaps invest in a more responsible infrastructure proposal, and still leave some money in the bank for uncertain times and unforeseen, but necessary expenditures. In contrast to the 2015 Budget debate, with over 100 proposed amendments and two days of floor debate, in 2013, it took us only a little over an hour to unanimously approve a roughly $9 billion spending plan, thanks to bonafide and bipartisan negotiation beforehand. House Bill 2 will go to the Senate next for consideration.

Now, shifting gears, to the Medical Reform Debate. A package of three bills touted by some as an alternative to accepting federal funds to expand Medicaid eligibility rules to cover low-income Montanans were all narrowly defeated on the House Floor this past week. Rep. Art Wittich's HB 544 would have created a 13-member commission, financed with $100,000 from the state's general fund, to promote the federal exchange under The Affordable Care Act. This is a redundant approach, as there is currently available health care "navigators," a website, and advertising that is helping Montanans access Obamacare. While this seems like a small and inexpensive component, I feel it's wasteful to put additional people in place to do the same job already being done. The bill failed on a 50-50 vote.

Rep. Wittich's second bill, HB 582, created a special fund for covering the costs of "catastrophic care" for the uninsured using existing taxes. This plan would only cover about 800 or just over one percent of the actual number of Montanans caught in the coverage gap. Under this plan, Hospital bills under $10,000 dollars would not be paid even though some of the patients are making just $11,000 annually. The bill failed 49-51 House Bill 455, by Rep. Nancy Ballance, R-Hamilton, would have expanded the state's Medicaid coverage to about 11,000 low-income parents and veterans using $31 million in state funds over the next two years. This plan would still utilize $65 million in federal money. The current state-federal Medicaid cost sharing is 35% State and 65% Federal funding. from a purely fiscal standpoint, this also doesn't make sense. This measure died 48-52

I applaud Rep. Ballance and Rep. Wittich for their efforts, with that said, all three proposals fall short in coverage while costing Montana tax-payers more money. These alternative plans, cover virtually a small very small group of people, at an enormous cost, in contrast, the Governor's Healthy Montana Plan, had no real reforms at all. Precisely why I didn't support it either. One health care proposal still alive is SB 405, and was introduced by Sen. Ed Buttrely (R) Great Falls, this past week. Known as Montana HELP, it offers true compromise from a broad group of stake holders. This measure insures more people with better coverage, contains tort reforms, incentivizes healthy behavior, and has asset and income requirements to participate, it is also administered by a private company, it contains job training and workforce placement, all components that Republicans typically support and does it all with more responsible use of tax dollars than any other proposal offered.

Also, this past week, Sen. Duane Ankney, R-Colstrip, appeared before the House Business and Labor Committee, which I serve on, with his Senate Bill 289, a key provision of which requires the reporting of "dark money" spent to influence Montana elections. "When you boil it all down it's about Montana elections being supported and opposed by the Montana electorate," Sen. Ankney told the panel. Shortly before testifying against the bill, Jeff Laszloffy, president of the Montana Family Foundation, published on his web site that if the bill "were to become law, Montana houses of worship would be at risk of having to publicize every single titling they receive." He went on to say during the hearing that he would "challenge the law in federal court if it is passed." During questions to witnesses from our committee, I asked Commissioner of Political Practices, if The Family Foundation's fears were based on fact? The Commissioner said "absolutely not" and walked us through current law and also proposed changes, to back up his resistance to The Family Foundation's mis- guided interpretation. Many organizations that get involved in elections, under the guise of issue advocacy, continue to acknowledge that there is a problem with dark money in Montana elections, but they oppose every attempt to address it. It begs the question: If you or your donors have nothing to shield from the public, then why oppose these different proposals that bring sunshine to the process? Montanans support transparency in elections, and SB 289 is the game-changer folks are looking for.

Finally this week, we will be taking up before the Full House, a measure that will put in place, a Statewide Sage Grouse Management Plan, this plan is required to head off a federal listing on the endangered species registry. For the protection of grazing, natural resource production, and continued hunting of the species, this statewide plan is vital to the viability of these industries and the jobs they create.

Please stay in touch on the issues important to you.

MONTANA WESTERN HONORS TWO SERVICE AWARD WINNERS

The University of Montana Western will host the annual Dr. Jane Helm Maddock Service Award dinner Tuesday, April 14, The 2015 award winners are Debbie Sporich and Susan Briggs.

"The UMW Foundation is extremely proud to honor these deserving and generous individuals," said UMW Foundation Director Roxanne Engellant.

Sporich was born and raised in Augusta, Mont., and attended the University of Montana Western in 1982. While attending Montana Western, she met and married Bill Sporich, her husband of 23 years.

She spent the next nine years working in the insurance industry in Wyoming and Dillon. In 1991, she approached Pat Blade about purchasing The Bookstore in Dillon. After some early negotiations, she assumed ownership and has been running The Bookstore for 23 years.

Sporich is a Dillon business leader and has been instrumental in supporting UMW and the community. Sporich is a regular guest speaker in several English department classes sharing her experience and knowledge. She is a constant presence at Dances With Words on the UMW campus, and she loves the opportunity the program provides our students and wants to share her passion and excitement of books.

Briggs was born and raised in Dillon, Mont. Her love of Montana Western began at an early age. She spent many years as a young girl on the UMW campus, playing in Main Hall and the towers and teaching swimming lessons at the campus swimming pool. Her father, Carl Davis, was a coach at Montana Western and they lived just a few blocks from campus.

Briggs graduated from Beaverhead County High School and the University of Montana. In 1972, Susan married her high school sweetheart, Bob Briggs. They will celebrate their 43rd wedding anniversary this year. They spent their early years in Utah and Missoula, Mont., raising their 3 children. Briggs became the Director of Fiscal Affairs for Montana Western in 1998 after her youngest daughter graduated from high school. She and Bob returned to Dillon and her love of this university continued to grow. Her presence at campus events is unparalleled. Her appreciation for this campus and the access it provides to higher education is unmatched.

The Dr. Jane Maddock dinner is from 5:30-7:30 p.m. in the Lewis and Clark Room in Mathews Hall. The cost to attend the service award dinner is $10 for faculty, staff and community and $5 for students. Please contact the UMW Alumni Office at 406-683-7306 to RSVP.

It's Not A War On Easter, But...

Tyrades! By Danny Tyree

As my family prepares to celebrate Easter 2015, I feel overwhelmed by the changes the holiday has undergone in both religious and secular terms.

Perhaps it's the haze of passing years that prejudices me, but it seems that the holiday has declined greatly in innocence and reverence since the days I was hugging my stuffed bunny and fighting my cousins for festive eggs in Granny Tyree's front yard.

The White House Easter Egg Roll has devolved into the poor man's version of "It's The Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown." ("I got a chocolate egg." "I got a strawberry egg." "I got a lemon egg." "I got tire tracks from the Secret Service Agent's runaway car.")

Innocent children's songs about hippity-hop rabbits are on the verge of being shanghaied by hip-hop ARTISTS. (I understand good ol' Peter is about to forget the bunny trail and instead get the spotlight in "I like big cottontails and I cannot lie...")

Remember when the important question was who got to bite the ears off the chocolate bunny, not who got to BEHEAD the chocolate bunny if it was found in a car with a male other than a family member?

Casual Friday at work has segued right into casual Sunday. Fewer and fewer people care about looking spiffy for Easter. Instead of an Easter bonnet with all the frills upon it, we have a parade of Easter butt-cracks with all the frills upon them.

Cable channels have done way too many historical expose documentaries riding the coattails of Easter. What will we hear next, "Judas Kiss Or Judas Lap Dance: You Be The Judge"?

If da Vinci were painting today, his masterpiece would probably contain product placement and be called "The Last Supper Before Next Exit."

Facebook has shot down its "Feeling Fat" status, but I hear that "Feeling Crucified" is still in the wings.

Remember when sunrise services could be conducted without side issues such as carbon footprints? ("Sunrise services: where we're reminded that solar panels are the reason for the season. Don't forget your 'God loves windmills this much' poster.")

I understand the next "Fast and Furious" movie will be filmed in the church parking lot immediately after Easter services. ("See ya at Christmas!")

It used to be so much simpler to deal with resurrection skeptics at Easter. Now proselytizing gets met with "So Jesus really gave up a man cave like that? You are pulling my leg!"

It used to be so comforting to think that Jesus Christ came to save everyone. Due to recent "private server" developments at the State Department, scripture is being rewritten to say, "Everyone can be saved — except the people my staff has looked over and decided aren't worth saving."

Remember when "coming out" meant emerging from the tomb, not coming out to your parishioners? ("Since there's not a single feline mentioned in the Bible, you've probably wondered why I've had the choir director do all those show tunes from 'Cats'...")

I am cautiously optimistic about NBC's Easter presentation of the early-church drama "A.D." — but I fear that its inspiring moments will soon be negated by a documentary with a promo that blares, "Pontius Pilate washed his hands of the whole matter — or DID he? Hidden-camera footage shows Pilate NOT washing up before sending Christ to his death, or before going to his second-shift job flipping burgers."

"Your pet is #1 with us"

You're Basics?

Accumulation and wealth seems to be the primary parts of our lives. Our life should be as simple as the life of a dog as he walks along his path exercising, while enhancing his ability to smell, or finds a special spot that needs his/her mark left left, and the joy he displays when he gets a fresh piece of meat.

It appears to me that our society today says it is important to have the most money we can amass, and have as many products we can acquire during our life time. Products that we believe give us a higher standing or ranking amongst our friends and in the community and what we perceive brings us happiness. REALLY? Are you destroying your happiness by trying to be a person someone else wants you to be?

Some people have orbited in a society that says it's what we have that is important. Others have denied that society and elected to live in a cabin in the woods enjoying life with the basics (a roof, 4 walls, open shelves displaying everything you own, bed)... Everyone has a different basic requirement. My basic would require one indoor bathroom, running water in sink, stove for heat/cooking. Oh, also a man to pack the wood.

Positioning and Ranking are not new, they are required. There must be leaders and supporters. Example: The lions (leaders) complete the kill, proceed to eat and vultures (supporters) come in cleaning up the scrapes. Basic requirements for survival. Everyone has a skill and is a valuable component of a process.

We are born without nothing and we can take nothing with us when we die. Question: Why is it so important to us that during our lifetime we stockpile things we put in a cupboard or on a shelf in the shop to never be seen again? We give thanks to the vultures in the world of humans that make a living cleaning up the products we have gathered, stored, hoarded, accumulated...

Is it possible and would we be happier and satisfied camper if we had the basics in our life; coat, shoes, shirt, a bowl of soup? Question: What would the basic requirements be in your life? Would it be a better life if we had things that get old and leave us or things that get old and we leave behind?

Thrift Shop

If you haven't stopped by yet to check out the Thrift Shop, Friday, March 27, would be a good day to do just that. The "Kennel Club" of the Beaverhead County Animal Shelter will have their homemade items available that day. These are those wonderful items you see at the farmer's market and local craft fairs. Great gift items for your animal loving friends. The Shop is located at 28 E Center (across from the Elk's Lodge) and is open from 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM.
