Tax-Time Misery

By Tom Purcell

When I came to, I was on my back on the floor of my accountant's office.

"What happened?" I said.

"When I told you how much you owe, you went down like ton of bricks," said my accountant.

"I owe the IRS again? But I set aside money every quarter!"

"How many times do I have to tell you? As a self-employed writer, you have to set aside a big chunk of dough to pay your local, state and federal income taxes. Since you are your own employer, you have to pay your FICA (12.9 percent) and Medicare (2.9 percent) taxes. It adds up fast. Most of your income is being taxed at about 47 percent."

"Forty-seven percent! That's unconscionable! I thought Republicans in Congress were going to fix this mess."

"Remember that it was Congress that created the mess. Look, when the income tax became law in 1913, the tax code was 16 pages long. Today it is exactly 73,954 pages — every page more incomprehensible than the one before it."

"Why so complex?"

"Because the government uses the tax code to do everything from paying back financial supporters to redistributing wealth to giving taxpayers incentives to buy homes, have kids, save money, spend money and on and on."

"We should reform and simplify our tax system!"

"There has been lots of talk about tax simplification. The last major tax reform happened in 1986, when the economy was half as big and the Internet hadn't yet transformed commerce. The tax code is outdated."

"Then how do we proceed?"

"Well, there are lots of ideas to strip out loopholes in return for simplified tax brackets at lower rates. There is even some agreement on both sides of the political aisle to tackle tax reform. Robust debate is needed so that our politicians in Washington can hammer out a new approach that unleashes the economy and moves the country forward!"

"Then why isn't it happening?"

"President Obama could take the lead on this one and build a consensus among both parties, but he doesn't seem terribly interested in income-tax reform. Some in the Senate are pushing ideas, but at the moment that is all they are — just ideas. Besides, no small number of people like things just the way they are."

"Who could possibly like our complex tax code?"

"People who make good livings helping people navigate our complicated tax code. You think these people want to give up this gravy train? These people have deep pockets and their money fills the coffers of the politicians who do their bidding."

"You're depressing me," I said.

"The truth is that every time a tax-reform bill is passed into law, the lobbyists get right on it and pretty soon all kinds of loopholes and complexities are added back into the tax code. The fact is, taxes keep getting more complex and income taxes keep going up."

"And that's why I am miserable this time every year."

"You are not alone. Did you know it takes the average American taxpayer 13 hours to gather and compile all the necessary receipts and forms to comply with the tax code?"

"It figures. I'll bet most people have no idea how much they are real-

California's License Scheme Punishes Its Poor

By Peter Funt

Imagine if a doctor struggled to pay a small debt and as punishment the government took away his stethoscope. Or, if a ballerina owed money and was forced to surrender her toe shoes. Makes no sense, right?

Yet, here in California as many as 4 million citizens have had driver's licenses suspended for reasons having little or nothing to do with vehicular safety. The state increasingly uses license-suspension as a tool and, in doing so, creates "cycles of poverty that are difficult if not impossible to overcome."

That is the conclusion of a just-released report co-authored by five leading legal aid and civil rights groups. An offense as minimal as loitering can result in a fine that multiplies quickly if unpaid — often leading to a suspended license, lost employment and, before long, crippling debt.

Such scenarios create significant economic and social problems in California, where nearly a quarter of the state's 38 million residents live in poverty. Uncollected court-ordered fees now total over $10 billion. In an ill-conceived effort to balance the books, California annually suspends over a half-million driver's licenses for missed court dates or delinquent payments of fines and fees.

While the recent Justice Department probe in Ferguson, Missouri, got headlines for revealing a pattern of abuse through fees and arrest warrants in non-criminal cases, California has long engaged in similar efforts to feed state coffers. For example, a $100 base fine — say, for failure to carry proof of auto insurance — actually costs $490 with mandatory fees and assessments. If the initial deadline for the fine is missed, the total due soars to $815.

What began as a system of fines to punish bad behavior has gradually become a scheme to fund state programs. And whereas driver's licenses were once suspended solely to keep unfit motorists off the roads, California now takes away driving privileges for such things as misplaced registration stickers, failure to report a change of address, failure to pay a bus fare — even for skipping school.

Whether it's in California, Missouri or any other state, government actions such as these invariably have the greatest impact on the poor and otherwise disadvantaged. "The human cost of this practice is enormous," said Meredith Desautels, a staff attorney at the Lawyers' Committee for Civil Rights of the San Francisco Bay Area. She notes that "a disproportionate burden is placed on communities of color, already unfairly targeted by law enforcement, and low-income people who don't have the means to pay."

Under Gov. Jerry Brown, California has overcome many of its financial problems. The state is in the vanguard of much progressive legislation, yet the scandalous process of exorbitant fees and license suspensions persists.

Desautels and her colleagues say reform efforts in California have gained bipartisan support but remain stalled because some lawmakers believe the cost of change is too steep.

Their report, titled "Not Just a Ferguson Problem — How Traffic Courts Drive Inequality in California," suggests that California restructure its debt collection process and end the use of license suspensions. Additionally, the authors urge creation of a formula by which more than 4 million residents with suspended licenses can have their driving privileges restored.

Included in the report are numerous case studies of crippling effects from the current system of fines, fees and suspensions. Typical is Alyssa, a bus driver, who received a ticket for not notifying the DMV when her address changed. She corrected the documents, but failed to pay the $25 fine. Her license was suspended. She was fired by the bus company. Alyssa had to seek state aid to provide for her children. She is unable to pay her fine and penalty fees which now total $2,900.

That's a crime. And Californians like Alyssa are the victims, not the villains.

Beaverhead County Sheriff S&R Press Release -04/07/15

On 04/06/15, at 10:33 p.m., the Beaverhead County Sheriff's Office received a report from a parent in regards to his 16 year old daughter being overdue. Information given was that the 16 year old and one of her friends, also a 16 year old girl, were somewhere driving with two young men from Dell, MT. The young men were reported as 18 years of age and 20 years of age. They were believed to be driving a 2002 White Chevrolet pickup truck. A deputy sheriff was assigned to investigate.

Search and rescue managers were activated by the Sheriff before midnight. Several Beaverhead Search and Rescue members began to assemble and a search was started in the Sweetwater, Blacktail, Bon Accord and Stone Creek areas near Dillon. At daybreak a helicopter from Butte Lifeflight, and fixed wing aircraft from the Dillon Flying Service were also helping with the search. Two SAR members from the Horse Prairie area checked the Reservoir Lake road and found fresh vehicle tracks, but could not go further due to snow pack. The fixed wing aircraft that was searching the area west of Interstate 15 south of Dillon was routed to this area.

At 11:17 a.m. this morning (04/07/15), four individuals were spotted by the fixed wing aircraft walking near the cattle guard entrance to Reservoir Lake. The truck was spotted moments later about two miles to the west, stuck in the road. A ground team of search and rescue members, including a physician, were sent to the area and made contact with the four at 12:25 p.m. They were confirmed to be the missing teenage girls and young men, who were in good shape and walking out with their dog.

The individuals were transported back to the Search and Rescue Building in Dillon, where the girls were reunited with their parents.

The three search managers responding were Park Scott, Brad Wagner, and Mel Rice.

Twenty other search and rescue members responding including Shane Puyear, Steve Scott, Mike Clark M.D., Don Kopple, Brian Demars, Lee Diedrich, Tommie Goins, John Helle, Alan Holt, Jim and Katie Kavin, Angela and Mike Keck, Donnie Keltz, Chuck Maddox, Greame McDougal, J.D. Mulkey, Tara Remely, Larry Skiles, and Brian Vinson.

Deputies Bill Knox and Scott Kessel, and Sergeant Dan Mulkey responded for the Sheriff's Office.
