George Fred Needens

George Fred Needens was born June 29th, 1922, in Hardin, Montana, and died at April 16th, 2015 (age 92 years, 9 months, and 18 days) at the Missouri River Care & Rehabilitation Center in Great Falls, Montana after a progressive battle with dementia.

The fifth of eight children born to Jacob Needens & Amalia "Molly" (Müller) Needens--both natives of Gnadentau, a German village in Samara, Russia--George was originally named "Georg Friedrich Niedens", after his mother's only brother, Georg Friedrich Müller, who never left Russia and who, along with nine other Uncles and Aunts on the Niedens and Müller sides of the family, and thousands of other relatives--met an early and tragic demise when millions of the Volga Germans had their property confiscated and were exterminated through starvation, execution, or were exiled to regions where survival was next to impossible, if possible at all.

George was just a baby--a toddler at most--when his parents moved to Sheridan County, Wyoming. He attended ranch schools in that community, through the 8th grade. He was confirmed at Immanuel Lutheran Church in Sheridan, Wyoming, in 1938.

George was incredibly gifted at wood-carving. He carved horses and bulls that were amazingly lifelike. He developed this talent so well that he could have easily opened a shop, been very successful and widely known, but he chose to just give his carvings away and eventually lost interest. Always somewhat of a loner. While still a teenager, George took off on his own "riding the rails and ended up losing two fingers.

George couldn't and wouldn't hurt a fly and had a compassion for animals. When WW2 came along and he was drafted into the army, he ended up going AWOL and getting a dishonorable discharge because of his conviction against, and aversion to killing and violence of any kind.

Other than a brief period when he worked picking fruit in California, and a short residency in Idaho, George spent most of his life herding sheep up in the mountains around Dillon, Montana, eventually retiring to a secluded trailer park a short distance out of Dillon. He eventually left the trailer park to live in a camper trailer in a rented spot on Railroad Avenue. He was living at that location when his health declined to the point he could no longer care for himself.

George was preceded in death by his parents, Jake & Molly Needens; three brothers, Walt, Bill, and Ed; and one sister, Elsie (Needens) Slusher. He is survived by two sisters, Hilda (Needens) Anderson of Sheridan, Wyoming, and Helen (Needens) Lind of Quincy, Washington; one brother, Ike Needens, also of Quincy, Washington. Two first cousins, Harry Nedens of Livingston, Montana, and Lydia (Nedens) Stricker of Hardin, Montana, also survive, as well as numerous outstanding nieces and nephews scattered around the U. S. Services pending.

As we approach what could be the final full week of the 64th Legislative session, I will share some proposals still alive in the process.

The budget negotiation process is moving along and in its final stages. Infrastructure spending and the state employee pay plan are among the areas still being negotiated between both the Legislature and the Governor's Office.

SB 289 - A measure requiring more disclosure surrounding campaign donations has passed the Legislature and is headed to the governor for his signature. Senators passed the bill as amended in the House by a vote of 30-20 on Wednesday. Sponsored by Republican Sen. Duane Ankney of Colstrip and backed by Democratic Gov. Steve Bullock, the measure aims to shed light on anonymous money that began flowing into elections after the U.S. Supreme Court's 2010 decision in Citizens United v. Federal Election Commission. The court held that it's unconstitutional to ban corporations from making political expenditures if the money is not given directly to a candidate. Under Senate Bill 289, certain groups would be required to publicize reports on political donations and expenditures if they spend money supporting or opposing candidates or ballot issues.

HJ 13, Rep. Kerry White a Republican from Bozeman is carrying bill that would create a state task force to study the condition of federal land in Montana was passed out of the Senate Natural Resources Committee on Wednesday on an a 7-5 Measures to transfer federal land to state control or study the idea are being discussed in several western states with supporters arguing states could do better managing lands in ways that increase revenue and access. If states take control, hunting and conservation groups argue, the land could end up being privatized or auctioned for drilling, mining and logging to pay for the additional. This proposal has been amended so it calls for only a study of federal land, instead of a transfer of federal land to state management. Members of the task force, if created, would conduct an economic analysis of land managed by the Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service, and study the cost-effectiveness of their management. An appropriation of $35,000 has been set aside for the study.

passed second reading on a 54-46 vote in the House last Thursday. The proposal would increase highway speed limits by 5 mph at certain areas where the Montana Department of Transportation deems the speeds safe. It would also increase maximum speeding fines from $100 to $200. Montana Highway Patrol Chief Tom Butler says the fine increases would make Montana's speeding punishments similar to seven surrounding states. The patrol has supported SB 375 and opposed three other bills to increase highway speed limits that died this session. The other proposals included no changes to speeding fines.

As the 2015 Legislature crafts the final state budget, a debate still brews over how best to tackle Montana's mental-health crisis: More beds and personnel at state institutions? Or more money for community-based treatment? The Bullock administration is insisting on more beds, at both the State Hospital for the mentally ill in Warm Springs and the Montana Mental Health Nursing Care Center in Lewistown, generally speaking, it is my belief that community based solutions are a better way to go, I feel there will be a workable balance between state run institutions and community based facilities before we end the session.

In closing, I would like to thank Lyla Dumke and Kim Konen for bringing the BCHS Government class to visit the Legislature last week.

Perfection or Not

By: MJ

Are you a person that has spent their life waiting until you're perfect before you do anything? When we spend our lives waiting until what we perceive is perfect or bulletproof before we walk into an arena we are sacrificing relationships and opportunities that may not be recoverable. We squander our time on earth. We turn our backs on our gifts and unique contributions that only you can make.

The quest for perfection is exhausting and destructive. There are many social expectations that teach us that being imperfect is the same as being inadequate. Every day you encounter someone who tells us tells us who, what and how we're supposed to be. Receiving those type messages we learn to hide our struggles and protect ourselves from judgment, criticism and blame by pretending we are perfect.

Our imperfections are what connect us to our humanity. Vulnerabilities are not weaknesses; they are reminders to keep our hearts and minds open to the reality of life.

Humans judge people in areas where they themselves are vulnerable. Example: If I feel good about how I parent my children then I will not pass judgment on other parent's choices. If I feel good about my body, I don't go around making fun of other people's weight or appearance. Many times we don't know the whole truth and the lack of information keeps us from knowing how to respond. So in the absence of information, we make up stories that often turn out to be our own memories. We use other people as a launching pad for our own perceived deficiencies.

BULLDOG FOOTBALL RECOGNIZED IN NAIA PRESEASON POLLING

The NAIA preseason football coaches' poll was released this week and the Montana Western Bulldogs were voted into the Top 25 rankings by a number of coaches.

The Bulldogs received seven votes in the poll, placing them at number 26 in the nation. Three Frontier Conference opponents were selected to spots in the rankings, in nearly the same position each finished the 2014 season.

Defending national champion Southern Oregon were awarded the top position in the preseason poll. Carroll College landed at number three after finishing last season at number five and Eastern Oregon moved from 15 to the number 13 ranking.

Last season Montana Western lost to both Carroll and Southern Oregon before ending the season with a four game winning streak, which included a 32-28 defeat of then 15 ranked Eastern Oregon.

"We appreciate people recognizing our athletes and coaches for their hard work and dedication," Bulldog head coach BJ Robertson commented. "National rankings are fun, but our focus is on the Frontier Conference."

The Bulldogs will face Carroll College, Southern Oregon, and Eastern Oregon in a three-game stretch in the middle of the 2015 season. "We are extremely excited to see how we respond to the ultimate competitive test that is our Frontier Conference schedule," Robertson said.
