Montana and 12 Other States Challenge New EPA & Corps of Engineers Regulation

Counties, farmers, ranchers, other groups support multi-state legal challenge

This week, Montana Attorney General Tim Fox and 12 other states filed a lawsuit against the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) over the new regulation broadly expanding the definition of "Waters of the U.S." under the Clean Water Act. The case was filed in the U.S. district court for the District of North Dakota.

In their complaint, the states contend the new definition of "Waters of the U.S." violates provisions of the Clean Water Act, the National Environmental Policy Act, and the United States Constitution.

"Congress and the U.S. Supreme Court have rejected the very regulatory expansion that the EPA and Corps of Engineers are implementing through this new rule," Attorney General Fox said. "This is yet another example of a federal agency acting by decree to bypass Congress and violate rights of states reserved under the law and the U.S. Constitution."

The states assert that the EPA's and Corps' new rule wrongly broadens federal authority by placing a majority of water and land resource management in the hands of the federal government. Congress and the courts have repeatedly affirmed that the states have primary responsibility for the protection of intrastate waters and land management. The states argue that the burdens created by these new regulations on waters and lands are harmful and will negatively affect farmers, ranchers, and landowners. As a result, landowners will have to seek additional federal permits or face substantial fines and federal criminal enforcement actions.

"Clean water is important to all of us, and we Montanans know how to protect our waters," Fox said. "Through our state Constitution, the 1971 Water Quality Control Act, and other legislation, we have established strong water protections tailored to the unique needs of our communities. These new federal regulations add a complicated and unnecessary layer of rules."

The states are asking the court to vacate the rule and enjoin the EPA and Corps from enforcing the new, significantly expanded definition of "Waters of the U.S."

Senator Brad Hamlett (D-Cascade), chairman of the legislature's Water Policy Interim Committee, spoke in support of the lawsuit. "Montana's Constitution states that all of the water that falls and flows within the boundaries of Montana belongs to the state for the beneficial use of its citizens," Sen. Hamlett said. "Now we have two federal executive branch agencies, the EPA and the Army Corps of Engineers, attempting to assert control over Montana state waters by rule. This is, in my opinion, unconstitutional, a deliberate interference with our state's most valuable resource, and must be stopped dead in its tracks. This is not about clean water, it is about jurisdiction, as Montana being a headwaters state cherishes and protects its waters and knowing the lay of the land and our waters best we definitely, constitutionally, and practically need to remain in control."

expressed their support of Attorney General Fox's decision to challenge the new federal regulations.

"The Montana Association of Counties is pleased that Attorney General Fox is joining other states in challenging these new regulations," said Harold Blattie, executive director of the Montana Association of Counties. "The EPA and Corps failed to consider concerns expressed by over 40 Montana counties about placing an undue burden on their ability to perform routine road maintenance. The final regulation lacks the clarity for counties to even be able to tell which roadside ditches are now under the EPA's and Corps' jurisdiction and which are not."

"In our initial review of the finalized Waters of the U.S. regulation, it represents a significant expansion of federal jurisdiction beyond current practices and the limitations affirmed by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Errol Rice, Executive Vice President of the Montana Stockgrowers Association. "The final regulation ignores state and local efforts to protect these waters and will have major implications for all Montanans. As ranchers who already have practices in place to promote water quality, we see the final regulation as problematic to implement and causing more harm and confusion rather than clarifying the law."

"Farmers and ranchers are still very concerned with the EPA's new regulation," said Nicole Rolf of the Montana Farm Bureau Federation. "It takes power away from state and local governments, while at the same time burdening farmers and ranchers with unnecessary and ridiculous rules. We very much appreciate that Attorney General Tim Fox recognizes these problems and is willing to defend Montanans who make their living raising food."

The Montana Chamber of Commerce, Montana Building Industry Association, Montana Contractors Association, and the Montana Association of Realtors are also in support of the legal challenge.

Joining Montana in the suit are the states of Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Idaho, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wyoming.

Forest Service Closes Hazardous Mine Openings

The Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest (BDNF) possesses a mining heritage with one of the most extensive and best-preserved compliments of historic mining in the Northern Rockies Region. Commonly encountered historic mining features such as open adits and/or shafts with unstable structures or debris have been abandoned and inactive for many years and present a public safety hazard. Inventory of the abandoned mine hazards is an ongoing program on the Forest.

The purpose of the inventory is to identify hazardous mine openings to close and reclaim. As part of this ongoing program to close hazardous openings, the BDNF proposes to close eleven mine openings this summer. The closure work this year will be located on the Pintler, Wise River, Jefferson and Butte Ranger Districts.

Adequate access routes necessary to perform the closure work exist and the Forest plans to close the openings by installing either bat-friendly structures, polyurethane foam, or backfilling with nearby materials. The Forest will keep disturbance of the surrounding area to a minimum and preserve the mining setting.

Direct any requests for additional information about the closure of these hazardous mine openings on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest to Licette Hammer, Forest Physical Scientist, at (406) 683-3911 or lhammer@fs.fed.us.

My name is Osborne T. Watkins III. I am a licensed occupational therapist and retired Navy Medical Service Corps Officer. Overall, I have had nearly 50 years of experience as a practitioner and have been working currently two days a week at Kindred Nursing & Rehabilitation - Parkview. today is my last day of my nine months work at this facility. As a 7-year-old I am also eligible for care at facilities like Parkview should it ever be needed. I leave Parkview with mixed emotions. they have a full-time occupational therapist coming on board in July who will provide more consistency of care. I have been very impressed with this facility. Parkview utilizes a team approach to patient centered care planning. I have witnessed treatment and procedures carried out collaboratively with patients always with a climate of empathy and respect. It is a place where I would be willing to receive care or allow my loved ones to receive care. Dillon, Montana has many environmental, cultural and recreational draws. I want to thank the staff at Parkview for welcoming me and allowing me to practice alongside them for the last nine months. I would encourage Dillonites to consider Kindred Parkview as being another one of the community's greatest draws.

Montana Law Enforcement Academy
Graduates 45 New Officers

At a ceremony, the Montana Law Enforcement Academy graduated 45 new officers who will serve 24 different agencies across the state. The Montana Law Enforcement Academy is operated by the Montana Department of Justice, providing basic and advanced training for state, county, city and tribal law enforcement officers throughout the state.

"While the tools and technologies available to officers have changed over the years, the real heart and soul of law enforcement has remained the same. And what it boils down to is really caring about people. It's an intrinsic part of public service," Attorney General Tim Fox told the graduates.

The class elected Christopher Davis to speak on its behalf during the ceremony. Davis said, "There's a tremendous amount of responsibility placed on peace officers today. I speak for everyone in our class when I say that we recognize the amount of trust you have placed in us and we will do our utmost to honor that trust."

Work begins on Boulder and Copper Lakes Bridges

Construction will begin in mid-July to replace two bridges located northeast of Philipsburg on the Boulder Lake Trail No. 8033 and one bridge on Copper Lake Trail No. 8034. The bridges have decayed and one is collapsed and unusable. The bridges will be replaced with treated wood materials and new approaches will be constructed to each bridge. Wildwood Trails from Bozeman, Montana will be responsible for the demolition and installation of the new bridges. Work is expected to last through mid-August.

During the construction period the trail will be closed to public entry for public safety and the safety of the contractor and their equipment. For more information contact the Pintler Ranger District at (406) 859-3211.

Below are photos of the bridges and their current condition.
