FOREST SERVICE, HELLE AND REBISH/KONEN FAMILIES FIGHT A LAWSUIT FILED BY THE GALLATIN WILDLIFE ASSOCIATION (GWA) PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION TO STOP GRAZING - DENIED

There is been much talk and support with about 50 livestock producers showed up to support Helle and Rebish/Konen families at the hearing for a Preliminary Injunction at the Federal Courthouse in Great Falls, MT on Wednesday July 8, 2015. They came to sit in the courtroom while the families fought to defend their 4th generation family business and livelihood. The Helle Family had filed to be interveners in the lawsuit filed by the Gallatin Wildlife Association (GWA) against the US Forest Service. GWA filed a Preliminary Injunction to stop grazing domestic sheep on two of the seven allotments in the Gravelly Mountains this summer claiming their members would suffer immediate and irreparable harm. These allotments have been in use by this family for more than 60 years and historically for nearly 150 years.

John Helle stated that he was satisfied with the proceedings and was confident that Judge Brian Morse would likely deny the injunction. Helle and Rebish/Konen's true concern is not only for their livestock's welfare if they are forced to be removed but the health of the rangeland as well. The GWA had claimed that the need was urgent and that the immediate removal of the domestic sheep was necessary to prevent irreparable harm to their recreational plans.

The attorneys for the U.S. Forest Service and Helles pointed out that comingling of the big horn sheep and domestic sheep has never happened nor had there been any big horns lethally removed by FWP or the Helles or Rebish/Konen on these allotments. Their attorneys also state that their management practices do not endanger grizzly bears or big horn sheep. The Helles and Rebish/Konen Family use livestock protection dogs (LPDs) to deter conflict with predators and domestic sheep. There are no documented cases of LPDs on the grazing allotments ever threatening or causing harm to humans and Helles use a breed of LPDs known for non-aggression. Helles also socialize their LPDs well to prevent such issues.

Judge Morris stated that he would have a decision on the injunction by Friday, July 10th. The main lawsuit against the U.S. Forest Service and U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services to stop grazing on all seven of the allotments in the Gravelly Mountains will continue no matter the outcome of the decision made on Friday according to the Western Ag news.

According to the United State District court for the district of Montana Great Falls Division, dated 10th day of July, 2015 Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED:

1. Plaintiff's Motion for Preliminary Injunction (Doc. 3) is DENIED.
2. A Memorandum further explaining the Court's decision will be issued at a later date.

FORMER DEPUTY COMMISSIONER NAMED MONTANA WESTERN'S INTERIM PROVOST

Chancellor Beth Weatherby has appointed Sylvia Moore interim provost at the University of Montana Western. Moore is the former deputy commissioner for academic, research and students affairs for the Montana University System.

"I am so pleased that Dr. Moore has agreed to serve in this important position. Her experience in higher education and prior knowledge of Montana Western make her an ideal fit," Weatherby said.

Moore said that she is looking forward to working with faculty and administrators to build on Montana Western's unique course delivery system, Experience One, where students take a single class at a time and participate in real-world, hands-on learning.

"It is an honor to work with Chancellor Weatherby and her team," Moore said. "I look forward to building momentum for academic initiatives and assisting faculty as we continue to refine and celebrate Experience One"

"Montana Western is a uniquely appealing campus. The emphasis on genuine experiential learning makes it exceptional in American higher education. I'm excited about working with the dedicated faculty who make it possible."

Weatherby said Moore will serve in the interim position while the university conducts a national search to appoint a permanent provost.

Moore received her doctorate of philosophy in education, master's degree in adult education and bachelor's degree in dietetics from the University of Wyoming.

She has also served as assistant dean of the School of Medicine at the University of Washington and as director of the Washington, Wyoming, Alaska, Montana and Idaho (WWAMI) regional medical education program at the University of Wyoming.

Moore replaces Karl Ulrich, who has lead academic programs for the past 19 years and is returning to the faculty.

SHOULDER SEASONS

Montana Fish, Wildlife and Parks is seeking public comment on proposed guidelines to establish elk hunting seasons before or after the existing archery and general rifle seasons.

The additional seasons, called elk shoulder seasons, would be used where needed to reduce elk populations. The primary intent of a shoulder season is to help reduce the population in a hunting district or group of hunting districts.

A shoulder season could occur between Aug. 15 and Feb. 15 outside the five-week general rifle season and six-week archery season.

Comments will be taken until 5 p.m., Aug. 10. To see the proposal and comment, visit the FWP website at fwp.mt.gov Click "Submit Public Comments", then click "Hunting & Trapping". Written comments also will be accepted at:

STORYTIME THURSDAY

Parkview Elementary Teacher Roberta Rafferty will share her family's favorite children's stories this Thursday under the shade trees in front of Curious Minds Preschool on the University of Montana Western campus at 4 p.m. as part of the summertime community children's literature series.

"I am so excited to share two stories, the first called 'Flip' by Wesley Dennis, a charming story about a little foal and the challenges he faces growing up," Rafferty said.

The other is "If You Find a Rock" by Peggy Christian. Rafferty said it is one of her favorite fiction books because of the journey it captures about the enchantment and origin of rocks everywhere...from a great climbing rock to a chalk rock used to create art.

Following the stories, children are invited to do a rock painting craft activity.

On July 30, the final "Storytime Thursdays" guest reader is
