Helen Larson-Martin

January 3, 1927 to July 3, 2015

Helen Larson-Martin was born as Helen Lucille Belden on January 3, 1927 with a love of the saddle, spurs and the next round-up. Her ability to whistle a good tune filled any room with happiness and it mirrored the joy given in her daily Bible readings. She treasured her weathered, highlighted, marked and tattered Bible as it accentuated her journey of biblical wisdom. She shared her most loved scripture with those she felt needed her help and His wisdom. With her oldest son and daughter at her side, Helen died in Idaho Falls, ID on July 3, 2015. At her request, she was honored and buried in a private family ceremony at Mountainview Cemetery in Dillon, Montana.

She married Clifford Lewis Proctor and they shared their love of horses while tending race horses and participating in roping and varied horse-related competitions. While married to Cliff, there were three children born; Diana, Norman and Clyde.

As a young bride, Cliff and Helen were employees of the Bear Paw Dude Ranch in Wyoming where she worked for the Jack Hyler family. During her years at the ranch, she came in contact with many interesting people to include a 14-year-old Steven Forbes and the J. D. Rockefeller family.

When her daytime household chores were done, she thrilled the adrenalin rush of her horse exploding full speed through a chute in calf-roping competitions. She was known for her guts and gusto and was featured in the advertising campaign for the Northwest Orient Airlines at a time when the vacation exodus to the west was the must-see end-destination. Her image; lariat arched in a calculated swing, hair flowing in the wind, eyes alive with excitement, her body leaning forward into the saddle, rein hand urging her horse faster, dust puffed up by the speed of each hoof print; this all raced into a nationwide advertisement seen on postcards and posters as a lure to see Helen as the "Annie Oakley" of the "wild west rodeo".

She later married Tom Larson and they owned the Triple Ranch Cattle Company. At this time, she was active in the Republican Women's Association, the Extension Homemaker's organization and was expressly intuned to the local 4-H organization. As a champion of their cause, she isolated the need and then launched the building of the 4-H Building at the Southwest Montana Fairgrounds in Dillon.

Her family grew to include Cora, Lance and Cody.

Cow camp was any child's dream. Grandmother Helen would gather up her grandkids where memory-deserving activities were created such as taffy-pulling and frog-jumping contests. There was no need for a television because the days were filled with fishing, exploring nature and the simplicity of bird watching while the nighttime filled with stories, reading, puzzles and lots of laughter!

Her husband, Tom, passed in December 1985.

To add to her list of adventures, Helen participated in a wagon train and a cattle drive. In 1989, she and her chuck wagon were part of the Montana Centennial Wagon Train that traveled from Bannack (Montana's first territorial capitol) to Helena (Montana's current capitol). Helen made many friends with whom she remained friends until her passing. On the final leg of this drive and while parading through Helena, she dressed her granddaughters in period clothing and jokingly placed a canvas sign on each side of her wagon advertising, "Mail Order Brides." As fate would twist a mirth-filled karma, this very sign came to be posted, unbeknownst to her, on her wedding day to Douglas Martin.

The second cattle drive was the Centennial Cattle Drive originating in Roundup with a herd of 10,000 cows. This herd followed the original 1889 cattle route that originated in Roundup, Montana and ended in Billings, Montana. Helen was quoted as saying, "If I could move 3,000 head (as was often done on their ranch) then, I can help move 10,000." Her wagon was stockpiled with essential supplies necessary to prepare chuckwagon breakfasts, lunches and suppers for the 40 outriders who accompanied the herd. The stories around the nighttime campfires were funny, sometimes musical, but always memorable.

As a person who said, "I never was much for fur or diamonds-I would rather have had a pair of spurs." Helen did receive a diamond when she married Douglas Martin.

With her granddaughters as her bridesmaids, her "Mail Order Brides" sign was hung where she was unable to see the sign and the laughter that broke out during the ceremony started this marriage with the foundation of happiness and joy.

Helen and Doug had a small ranch outside of Dillon and spent their time traveling as part of the Holiday Ramblers Motorhome group. She had a to see life outside of saddles, spurs and cattle. With their mobile home they took a fanciful approach to travel; go where their whim defined. They wintered in Arizona where they met other fellow travelers and more lifelong friends. Helen and Doug later moved to Rathdrum, Idaho where they purchased a home in a retirement village.

After Doug's passing, Helen moved to Arizona and became part of the beautiful Fellowship Square, Historic Mesa family where she was able to be closer to family. She enjoyed RFDTV because vicariously she remained in ranch life. Visiting with family was precious, making new friends at fellowship, reading her Bible and other works, doing crossword puzzles and writing poetry filled her days. Helen was a gifted and published cowboy poet.

Helen has 17 grandchildren: (Diana and Bruce Davis) Todd, Siri, and Kari; (Cora and Randy Robinson) Wayne and Cory; (Norman and Vicki Proctor) Jeremy, Allison, Molly, and Hope; (Clyde Proctor) Brandt, (Lance and Debbie Larson) Marissa, Breanna, and Joshua; (Cody and Tom Mitchell) Kynda, Samantha, Pete, and John.

Her nine great-grandchildren were especially loved. The "greats" as she called them are: (Jeremy and Jennifer Proctor) Lily, Justin, Natalie; (Siri and Jeffrey Shoemaker) Peter; (Allison Proctor and Nate Slocum) Merrick; (Molly Proctor and Luke Hanson) Remy; and (Breanna Larson) Sammie, Thane and David. She made efforts to attend their baptisms, births, visitations and buy special, unique gifts so they would remember her.

She requests any donations in her name be made to the 4-H Building at Beaverhead County 4-H, 2 South Pacific, Ste #11, Attention: Shannon, Dillon, MT, 59725.

Reality is:

By: MJ

Mr. Soyland stated it was the "responsibility of the construction supervisor as a master carpenter or construction supervisor to abide by the city's building codes." After reviewing the documents at the city I was unable to confirm that the city had a "building code document."

Are there ongoing problems that need solutions at the city? Of course. Would it help the decision makers for people with the expertise and knowledge in a particular field to come forward with suggestions when problems arise in their area of expertise? When the Barnette Ave. Development rose above ground people moved out of their bubbles and filled the council room. They politely asked questions and expressed their concerns.

As a person who attends many meetings at the city I watch the "City Fathers" working together and articulating genuineness and fairness when others were involved. They educate themselves on issues, have polite open conversations at public meetings, and are cognizant of following the laws, rules and regulations. City personnel are working with parties involved in the development on Barnett Ave to find solutions that would be fair and amicable.

When working with a team of people open honest communication is part of the job requirements. Communication is the glue that binds everything together. Some have indicated that the Director of Operations workload has become overload. If that is a problem then he needs to communicate that thus enabling a workable solution to be found.

Gossip is cheap & spiteful – Backbiting gets us nowhere: Ugly gossip, backbiting and internal strife seems to be an essential part of human existence. Gossip and backbiting is a reality where there is two or more employees. People are competitive with money and positions being a driving force. The local city government is no exception to the rule making the community as a whole the losers do to facts being slated and distorted. Honest open communication is therapeutic.

Editors Note: I believe Mr. Soyland was responding with emotion - and devotion to a friend, that I understand, however MJ and the Dillonite are trying to write what goes on at the meetings. We have had other callers that don't like what was reported - we suggest you go to the meetings yourself and see - the answers to the questions asked there are not always forthcoming. Why would it be the reporters fault that people don't like what when on at the meeting - would it be better to keep your head in the sand? That won't change the outcome, you just wont' know about it! Brenda Womack

CHINESE HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS VISIT MONTANA WESTERN

The University of Montana Western welcomed six high school students from China recently as part of the Yellowstone English Environmental Studies Program International (YESPI).

In welcoming the students Montana Western Chancellor Beth Weatherby said, "It's wonderful that these soon-to-be college students have the opportunity to learn in Montana's breathtaking landscapes and that we can give them a taste of Experience One and experiential learning here at UMW."

Education professors Dana Cotton and John Xanthopoulos taught the visiting students about the socratic method of discussion and critical thinking techniques.

Cotton said, "We are strengthening their verbal communication and critical thinking skills by immersing them in our culture which will help them stand out when they apply to American colleges.

"It is my hope that we work with more programs like YESPI so we can demonstrate how much our university has to offer."

The students will spend 21 days visiting Yellowstone and the Rocky Boy Reservation, rafting the Gallatin River and riding horses in Virginia City.

YESPI is an Ennis-based company which prepares Chinese students for college life abroad.
