Forest Service, BLM Christmas Tree Permits Available

If your Christmas spirit gets a boost from going to the woods to cut your own Christmas tree, then the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management can help out.

With a permit, you can cut a Christmas tree in all the national forests in Montana and on public lands served by BLM's Missoula, Dillon, and Butte field offices.

Forest Service offices selling permits in Southwest Montana are located in Philipsburg, Butte, Dillon, Wisdom, Sheridan, and Ennis.

Christmas tree-cutting permits are $5, and each family may purchase up to three permits. Cutting trees without a permit is subject to a citation and fine.

New this year! As part of the 'Every Kid in a Park' (EKIP) national initiative which strives to connect youth with nature, the Beaverhead-Deerlodge NF and the BLM are offering one free Christmas tree permit to every fourth grader. To participate in the free holiday tree program visit www.everykidinapark.gov. Fourth graders must present a valid EKIP Pass or paper voucher at their local Forest Service or BLM office (not vendors) to receive their free permit.

FWP TO DISCUSS POSSIBLE CHANGES TO GARDINER AREA ELK HUNTING

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks will host an informational meeting in Livingston on Dec. 3 to discuss a possible change to hunting regulations that would establish limited-draw permits for bull elk in hunting district 313.

The informational meeting will be held on Thursday, Dec. 3 in Livingston, at the Pioneer Lodge, 1515 West Park St. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m.

The regulation change is proposed in response to low numbers of mature bull elk in this Gardiner area hunting district.

At the meeting, FWP will explain the proposed change, provide background information, answer questions, and take comments. It will be formally proposed at the Dec. 10 Fish & Wildlife Commission meeting in Helena.

Official public comment on forthcoming Montana hunting season regulations for 2016 and 2017 will begin in January. That season-setting process will be explained at the meeting as well.

Saving Bats in SW Montana

White Nose Syndrome is an emerging disease that has devastated hibernating bat populations, causing the most precipitous wildlife decline in North America in the past century. It is estimated that between 5.7 and 6.7 million bats have died from White Nose Syndrome since it was first detected almost ten years ago in a New York cave and has spread to 26 states and five Canadian Provinces. It spreads primarily from bat to bat; however, people can potentially spread the fungal spores responsible for White Nose Syndrome among caves, mines and other bat roost sites.

The Northern Region of the Forest Service has been working with the Northern Rocky Mountain Grotto and several other agencies to develop educational signs about bats and White Nose Syndrome. Two large signs were created and recently installed on the exterior of two of the Region's most visited caves. Smaller signs will be placed inside of the more sensitive caves along with new cave registers. During International Bat Week (Oct. 25-31) the Grotto installed several of the small signs in caves on the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest.

"Our goal is to educate others about White Nose Syndrome and bat conservation and provide decontamination information to help reduce the human caused spread of White Nose Syndrome, said Forest Service Biologist Amie Shovlain. "Bats are our most important natural predators of night-flying insects, consuming mosquitoes and, moths, among others." "Many of these insects are serious agricultural or forests pests. Every year, bats save us billions of dollars in pest control simply by eating insects."

"The signs highlight how important it is to practice clean caving. While bats are the impetus for the clean caving push, they aren't the only reason. The underground is a delicate and fragile place, and it is unknown what other microorganisms' humans could be spreading. The fungus responsible for White Nose Syndrome is the scariest one we know about right now," commented Northern Rocky Mountain Grotto President Ian Chechet.

"The signs will help explorers to understand how important it is to "Leave No Trace" of their visit. Many caves across the state have garbage left behind by previous explorers. Most visitors are unaware of the impacts, so these signs are a reminder to cave visitors that caves are a delicate place that can be easily and permanently damaged. One false move and a 50,000 year old formation could be gone forever. A single muddy handprint may last for 5,000 years underground."

The registers have a White Nose Syndrome and conservation message inside to further get the word out. They also will help to determine the amount of usage these caves are getting in order to manage them.

Cavers have a special affinity for bats; they are the only animals that visit the same dark depths that humans do. Across the country, and especially here in Montana, caving groups and several land management agencies are working to gather as much data as possible to be ready if White Nose Syndrome spreads to Montana.

To find out more about Bats and how to save them, go online to: http://www.batcon.org, or http://batslive.pwnet.org. To get involved with Bat conservation, contact the Northern Rocky Mountain Grotto at http://nrmg.org.

Dear Patients of Barrett Hospital & HealthCare:

As of October 19, Barrett Hospital & HealthCare no longer has a contract with New West Health Services. Barrett Hospital & Healthcare will not have a contract with New West Health Services in 2016. If you are insured through New West Medicare Advantage, you will need to confirm with New West how this change affects your benefits.

Choosing a plan that includes your choice of doctors and hospitals is an important decision. During "open enrollment," October 15th through December 7th, you have an opportunity to consider changing your insurance for 2016. Your insurance coverage is a matter of your personal choice. Seniors considering a Medicare Advantage Plan should consider whether their hospital, clinic and doctor will be in-network prior to making a decision for 2016. Barrett Hospital & HealthCare, including our employed physicians, is not currently contracted with New West and will not have a contract with New West for 2016.

Barrett Hospital & HealthCare is a provider for regular Medicare and all Medicare supplemental plans. Please see the information below about accessing independent information for Medicare options.

We share your disappointment with this situation but we look forward to continuing our relationship with you. Between now and the end of the year, we will do our best to work with you regarding this change. You may contact us at 683-1188.

Thank you.
