UMW CLASS PRODUCES MINING AND GEOLOGY MAP

University of Montana Western students from professor Rob Thomas' structural geology class recently spent part of their block mapping the Argenta quadrangle in Beaverhead County for the Montana Bureau of Mines and Geology.

"The level of hands-on experience our students obtain is unmatched," said Thomas. "They develop skills at the undergraduate level that will be attractive to various companies and agencies when they graduate."

Thomas said the map created by his students is part of the state's ongoing efforts to make geologic maps of the region at various scales.

The maps are used by many different state and federal agencies and private companies for natural resource development and natural hazards identification and mitigation.

"Student mapping like this is usually done as summer thesis work or USGS summer grant projects," said Thomas. "As a result of Experience One, Montana Western students are doing this as a structural geology class during the academic year."

Thomas will review and submit a finalized map to the Montana Bureau of Mines and Geology soon. The map will be published and available free to the public after the bureau conducts a rigorous peer-review process.

OCC SHOEBOXES

Have you been packing your shoe boxes? Collection week for Operation Christmas Child is November 16th through 23rd. The Dillon Relay Center is located at Grace Bible Church again this year. You can drop off boxes during collection week at the church on Laknar Lane from 10:30 am to 1:30pm. If you can't make it during this time, please call Barb Kramer at 925-2657.

I have "How to Pack Your Shoebox" brochures available at WestFeeds. Feel free to pick one up for suggestions on what to put in your box and a label to attach to the box.

It has been over twenty years since Samaritan's Purse has been delivering Operation Christmas Child shoe box gifts to share the true meaning of Christmas with hurting children around the world. Through the years we have been able to reach 124 million children around the world in 150 countries.

Besides all the fun gifts, don't forget to add a note of encouragement and a picture of yourself. If you choose to donate shipping cost on line you can track your shoebox and see what country it went to.

Thank you for supporting this wonderful ministry!

We both know people need pets. Except tropical fish, which are a fungus with only one trick – dying. Real pets, such as your typical dog, cat, or yak provide unconditional love, devotion, and a furry surface to caress -- much like a Fed Ex driver. They may even cough up a hair ball to give your life purpose. The pets, that is.

Have you ever wondered how pets began? Neither have I. No doubt they started with Tyrannosaurus Rex strays following kids back to the cave after school where they begged, "It just followed me home, can't we keep . . . Whoa, it just ate Uncle Jeb!" But today's pets are eager companions. I daily spend hours of in-depth dialogue with my dog, Hank. He smiles constantly – I doubt his sincerity:

Me: Good boy Hank!

Hank: (Smiling)

Me: The situation in Syria looks dire.

Hank: (Smiling)

Me: Hey, your stinkin' tail's on fire.

Hank: (Smiling)

Me: Wow, that Hillary sure is a straight shooter.

Hank: (Barfing on the living room rug)

The U.S. is pet-addicted. So it won't be surprising how bonkers we go when Chinese genetically altered pigs start arriving. The Beijing Genomics Institute (Exit 345 next to the Ming Gator Wrestling Emporium) has divulged plans to sell DNA modified pigs (Slogan: "Always small, never tall, make great pet, you buy at mall.") BGI folks probably started with earthworms but everybody got bored until a guy, we'll call Dave, said, "Hey, let's try pigs." Dave was a free thinker, probably the Sichuan (pronounced: St A y - Hi) Province where they grow tons of hemp – if you catch my drift.

The "DNA tweak" was originally meant to produce racing pigs but the first batch turned out so dang cute, BGI staff saw the pet potential. Which makes perfect sense – racing pigs is akin to dating a juniper bush. Plus, people don't want a large hog in their living room.

I can relate to the big-pig problem first hand. Last Labor Day I surveyed the "pig barn" and one thing about pigs is that, for lack of a

City Happenings

By: MJ

It has been interesting watching the public become comfortable with the council members and mayor. For the public part of working with city fathers is knowing who will lend an ear for a positive outcome to their plight. That appears to be happening.

The council and committees have been overloaded with opinions and personal judgements lately. Is it time the public members be required to bring facts and proof for their reasoning when addressing issues like parking, abandoned vehicles, motor homes, trailers... If you are building a house you must bring maps showing location, setbacks, sidewalks, utilities...

Parking: The topic of parking in Dillon has been a hot topic at several meetings lately. The public's desires have went like this; there is not enough parking spaces downtown, the utility and horse trailers along with motor homes and abandoned vehicles need to be removed from the streets, college students are parking on city streets in front of residents homes (not private driveways)...

Issues: 1) Does the city have regulations in place that would allow them to tow and impound vehicles? (No) 2) Does the city have a secured place to take the vehicles? (No) 3) What would the cost be to the city to implement a towing program and does the city have money available? 4) What defines an abandoned vehicle? This is vital information that the public members have not provided the council nor committee. Montana Code Annotated address vehicles parked for 5 days and Dillon Municipal Code address vehicles parked for 120 hours however they do not allow for towing except in the business district.

Question: If you came into a town and there were no cars on the streets would you feel comfortable stopping and getting out of your car. Could it be that people want cars removed in certain areas and not others areas? Again let us remember it is not all about me-myself and I. It's about an entire community. People pulling horse trailers are spending money at local businesses when they are parked in the town and they have a right to park.

Nit-picking solves no problems and brings about unfavorable results.

better word, they STINK -- much like the Trump species, minus the ridiculous combover. No disrespect intended. So, clearly, a gianmous swine in the White House is a stupid idea, too.

I know what you're thinking. Wouldn't it be cool to genetically create perfect presidential contenders? Especially as we ramp up for an election year where instead of legit candidates, gibberish-spewing goofballs abound. Heck, let's skip humans altogether and just give the BGI mini pigs opposing thumbs. Those swine are smart, dependable, refreshingly honest, and can always be eaten if their foreign policy bombs. We should visit with Dave at BGI before lunch. But not after lunch -- he always has the munchies then.

"ON THE ROCKS" SERIES PRESENTS: TRAVELS IN THE RUSSIAN FAR EAST

Former University of Montana Western staffers will present in the latest installment of the "On the Rocks" series on Nov. 30, 2015.

"On the Rocks" is a lecture series sponsored by the environmental sciences department and Foundation Office of the University of Montana Western.

The speakers will share highlights of their recent travels in the Russian far east and Siberia where they spent two months exploring nature preserves as visiting scientists.

They spent time in the field with Russian biologists who were studying birds, musk deer, Siberian tigers and Amur leopards.

Easter-Pilcher was a faculty member in the environmental sciences department at Montana Western from 1996 to 2008.

Brian Pilcher directed student support services and the math-science Upward Bound program.

In 2008 the couple moved to St. George's University in Grenada, West Indies where both serve as faculty.

Easter-Pilcher received a Master of Science degree in wildlife biology from the University of Montana and a Ph.D. in conservation biology and statistics from Montana State University.
