Compliance Permit -(Sign)

By MJ

The zoning committee felt there should be a compliance certificate permit applied for by the Longhorn for the replacement of the same repaired. There was a lengthy discussion. The Longhorn establishment on Montana St. is being given a new face-lift. The historical sign identifying the Longhorn restaurant was taken down to do maintenance work, get a new heart and stabilize the wall mounts for safety reasons.

A representative of the Longhorn felt that the sign was grandfathered and informed the committee that the sign did not change in any way other than new parts required to make the sign operative.

Mayor Klakken stated he was confused as to what the meaning of 'grandfather' was. The Longhorn was a restaurant, was closed for sale a couple years and is now being reopened as a restaurant. The mayor asked the committee if that would fit the grandfather criteria. There was no directive given by the committee to the Mayor Klakken.

The city attorney, Mr. Dolan has been asked by committee and mayor to clarify the meaning of "grandfathered." "Historical" is another word that is used when people are talking about making changes in Dillon and needs a clear definition included in the documents. These are two important words that can end up costing the citizens of Dillon large amounts of money when they make changes to their property. Clear definitions will take personal and emotional feelings out of the decision process for the public, committee members, council and mayor.

After the discussion it was approved by the committee that the sign could be remounted without a compliance permit.

Gun Control and No Fly Lists Won't Fix This

By Susan Stamper Brown

The day before Thanksgiving, President Obama assured Americans all was well and he knew "of no specific and credible intelligence indicating a plot on the homeland" based "on the latest information I just received in the Situation Room."

A week later, in San Bernardino, California, America experienced the most serious terrorist attack on American soil since September 11, 2001. Yet, during his Oval Office speech December 6, President Obama appeared more upset about his unattained ideological dream of gun control than what happened in San Bernardino.

Those watching his speech in the room I was in corporately exhaled a sigh of relief that President Obama finally joined the FBI and the majority of Americans to call the attack for what it was, an act of terrorism. What a low bar we've set that we are overjoyed that our president just called a terrorist attack a terrorist attack.

During his speech, President Obama seemed to spend too much time talking about potential discrimination against Muslims, echoing his Attorney General, Loretta Lynch, who earlier in the week threatened legal action against Americans participating in whatever the Obama administration's definition is of hate speech. To heck with the First Amendment apparently. During a Sunday news show, Lynch also cautioned Americans against jumping to any conclusions regarding the shooters regarding their motives or ties to ISIS, despite evidence showing it was at least an ISIS-inspired attack.

The nearly 15-minute speech offered more of the same with really no new strategy, leaving Americans no assurance that anything of significance is being done to prevent another San Bernardino or worse. Instead and quite disturbingly, Obama offered the distraction of gun control, reiterating his relentless ideological silliness that utilizing America's "no-fly" list for gun control would help.

Given that California has some of the most stringent gun control laws on the books and that apparently neither of the San Bernardino terrorists were on the no-fly list, it makes absolutely no sense that more gun control or a no-fly list background check would have done anything to prevent what happened.

Anyhow, it's public knowledge that many law-abiding Americans are mistakenly on the no-fly list. If Americans give in to this, who's to say that other innocent Americans would not be placed on that list which National Public Radio reported back in April includes hundreds of innocent people who had no idea they were on it or how they got there?

Especially if the definition of who should be on the list is determined by liberals.

Remember years back, the Obama administration's Department of Homeland Security compiled their own "list" of dangerous people in a report they titled "Rightwing Extremism: Current Economic and Political Climate

When are our leaders going to wise up and get their heads out of the sand?

This is a quote from Gen. Douglas MacArthur

"Duty, Honor, Country — those three hallowed words reverently dictate what you ought to be, what you can be, what you will be. They are your rallying point to build courage when courage seems to fail, to regain faith when there seems to be little cause for faith, to create hope when hope becomes forlorn."
