Waco Fire Department's newest truck comes with an adventure story

By Phillip Ericksen

pericksen@wacotrib.com

In the summer of 2003, Pete Lohmer was minding his own business while driving to his Lake Whitney home.

But law enforcement officials stopped him at least 10 times, he said, though no law was being broken on his three-day trip from Montana.

The authorities just wanted a photo of what Lohmer was driving: a 1956 American LaFrance firetruck that now belongs to the Waco Fire Department.

Lohmer recently donated the open-top truck to be used in parades and funerals for firefighters either killed in the line of duty or after they've retired. The Waco Fire Department Honor Guard/Pipes & Drum nonprofit organization is thrilled with the vehicle, which began its history not far from where Lohmer's 2003 adventure began.

The city of Dillon, Montana, a town of about 4,000 residents, bought the truck new in 1956 from an American LaFrance dealership in New York. It still has Dillon's name on it, along with the No. 3 engine number.

Former Dillon Volunteer Fire Chief Roy Cornell remembers the truck well. Cornell spent 32 years with the Dillon Volunteer Fire Department and was fire chief from 1988 until his retirement in 2000. He now drives school buses in Dillon.

"I'm surprised it's in Texas now," Cornell, 76, said. "I suppose the weather's better for it."

He remembers driving the open-top vehicle around Dillon in temperatures well below zero degrees.

"This is better than finding out it's in a junkyard," he said. "I kind of grew up with that truck. That was a new truck when I was a kid in school."

Current Dillon Fire Marshal Rick Later said Dillon is known for its fly fishing and hunting, especially during the summer. The fire department, formed in 1905, has a large jurisdiction in southwestern Montana, probably "bigger than some states back east," Later said.

"It's a pretty neat place," Later said. "We draw a lot of people moving here from other places for retirement purposes."

Cornell found documents showing the department sold the truck for $1,500 in 1996 to the Dillon Jaycees, a young men's nonprofit organization that hosts annual events, most notably a rodeo, which is "Montana's Biggest Weekend," according to the website.

Mike Ferris, a former member of the Dillon Jaycees, said it wasn't used for the rodeo that year because the group had a better option. He said the truck wasn't around much longer, and he wasn't sure what happened to it next.

Tarrant County deputy sheriff, Fort Worth Independent School District teacher, instructor of deaf children and scout leader.

He bought the truck on eBay for $3,000 in 2003 from a Montana seller, not an unusual purchase for him.

Lohmer, 62, developed his interest in firetrucks through his wife's grandfather, a former Fort Worth fire lieutenant.

"He was as much of a grandpa to me as anyone," he said. "I loved him dearly."

Well before his 2003 journey, Lohmer paid $1,500 for three antique firetrucks from the Walnut Springs Volunteer Fire Department in 1994. Why did he buy them?

"I just wanted to help them out."

3,000-mile round trip

After buying the American LaFrance in Montana, it was time for the 3,000-mile round trip: fly to Billings, get the firetruck, drive home.

He said a former member of the Dillon Jaycees sold it to him. The truck's purpose between 1996 and 2003 remains a mystery, but the amount of rust might indicate it wasn't covered.

"It was a wonderful adventure," Lohmer said. "I'd stop at a Wal-Mart, walk back out and there would be a crowd of people around it."

Stops were frequent on the trip, as the gas-guzzling truck averaged about 5 miles to the gallon.

It was an appropriate addition to Lohmer's other collectibles, which include player pianos and kerosene lamps that he says "look straight out of 'Gone With the Wind.'"

When Lohmer finally got home, the spectacle didn't end. "My kids were in college and they had sleepovers on our property, and they liked riding around with the firetruck," he said. "They fixed it up."

But they didn't refurbish it as much as the Waco Fire Department now plans to. The Honor Guard created a GoFundMe page for the truck's improvements. The site accepts online donations, and the goal is set at $25,000.

Waco firefighter Larry Denman said the money will fund new paint, brakes and other basic tune-ups. But half of the battle is already won, because the engine still works. Denman, Lohmer's neighbor, currently has the truck at his home.

"It's a nostalgic truck," Denman said. "It sits low to the ground. Once we remove the water tank, it's a good height for a casket vehicle. It would also be a good parade vehicle because it's not 10 feet tall."

For those hip to automotive terminology, the 1956 truck has a 12-volt generator system, downdraft carburetor and electric fuel pumps.

"It fits the era of what most people would think," Denman said. He approached Lohmer about a year ago and asked if he would consider donating it to the Honor Guard, and Lohmer gladly agreed.

"I support the fire department," Lohmer said. "They better take care of it. It's going to be a pretty vehicle."

John Linda, a Waco Fire Department lieutenant, is especially excited for future parade use, which includes the Baylor University Homecoming Parade, Veterans Day Parade and Christmas Parade. He said the Dallas and Houston fire departments also have trucks designated for parades and funerals.

"The Honor Guard is going to start this. Waco has never had anything like this in modern history," Linda said. "It sort of gets Waco out there because other departments have one. It makes Waco look even better."

Waco firefighter Tracy Blackshear is the only bagpiper in the organization and expects the truck to bolster the Honor Guard's reputation.

"We try to run like the military does through the top to bottom chain of command," Blackshear said. "The presence of the Honor Guard is important when we post the colors of the American flag. It's one thing to do it, and another thing to do it respectfully."

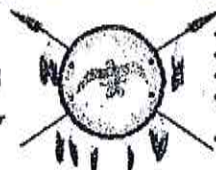

Regardless of the how the 60-year-old truck is used, Waco's 3-year-old Honor Guard now holds responsibility.

Lohmer, who returned home Friday after undergoing rehabilitation following back surgery, knows his 2003 adventure served a purpose.

"I definitely feel it's important to preserve that," he said. "If they didn't, I would myself. It's the same with so many more people. It's very much a reward in itself."

Zoning Board meetings

By: MJ

The zoning committee is working with a document that has 300± pages that regulates what citizens will or will not do on their private property within the city limits. Committee members are: Mr. Schwandt, Mr. McIsaac, Mr. Mooney, Mr. Graham and Mr. Nye. Zoning Compliance certificate #2301 for a home based business was discussed. It was decided that a variance could not be applied for because the local zoning ordinance says that the variance can only be issued on projects dealing with setbacks, yard, lighting... See State Statute # 76-2-321 for more information.

The board has spent many hours wordsmithing this 300± page document and continues to do so. Wordsmithing means using words with Connotations as well as Denotations. Denotation: is the dictionary definition of a word. Connotation: is the implicit meaning of a word and consists of the suggestions, associations, and emotion overtones attached to the word. Example: the word house has a different emotional effect on a reader than does the word home with its connotations of safety, warmth and comfort.

While dealing with the document there seems to be many emotions expressed by committee members with few facts presented. Example: "vision triangle" applied on all alleys. What department will enforce the regulations? How much money will it cost the city to enforce the regulations and what department will be responsible for citations (if any) being issued? As far as I know the solutions to these questions have not been discussed by the committee. Will this mean higher taxes?

It appears that the zoning document has been a major problem for citizens of the community as well as the zoning committee. Dillon's population has had very little growth in last few years and there has not been a flood of new businesses that have brought high paying jobs to the community thus requiring a document of this magnitude. Question: Is the document truly helping the community or is it a colossal problem? Are there other methods that could be used to turn this document into a useful tool for the community besides "wordsmithing?" Is the committee looking at other options? If so they have not discussed them in a public meeting.

The committee is a group of gentleman that volunteer their time.

Letter to the Editor

I watched the Republican debates. They called them debates but it was more like the dislikes for each other. I didn't want to use the word "hate" for each other but the "hate" oozed out most of the night.

They also talked about how much they dislike the American government but for all their dislike for America they still want to be in charge.

They also said they want to get back to the good old days. They never really said what good old days they wanted. They never did mention the good old days of the last Republican President. Not one word. They never mentioned the accomplishments of the last Republican President. They never even mentioned his name!

The last Republican President facilitated many accomplishment for the super rich and the super rich corporations. But also we had the worst economy since the Great Depression. The super rich got richer and the middle class got shafted. Financial regulations were disregarded, but the super rich got richer. We had an unneeded illegal war, thousands lost their lives, a $3 trillion cost, but the rich got richer.

The list goes on and on with great accomplishments for the super rich. We do not need to go back to these days of recession, wars, disregard for the environment, disregard for the middle class, disregard for women's rights, disregard for education, disregard for health care for all American's, disregard for senior citizens and Social Security. The Republicans want the "good old days" for the super rich. But these "good old days" are not good for 99% of the American citizens. The middle class cannot afford to get shafted again.

Dillonite Daily Editor:

As I get older I realize that 'I am just a name on a mail box'. All the 'talking heads' in the news media and beyond can talk of is the upcoming presidential election and particularly 'climate change'.

It is quite obvious that those same talking heads had to change the wording from 'global warming' to some other wording because except by their computer models, is that like the Sports Illustrated swim suit model, they cannot come up with changes in the world's temperatures that will make a hill of beans or a "4377 of" a difference in world history.

I have always referred to 'global warming' as the Creator's 'Global Warning'. There is only One Person in total control of the weather and our climate and it ain't 'man', Mother Nature, Mother Goose, or Mother Earth. It is the Creator of the Universe and this planet we call earth.

All that men need to do is to dust off the Holy Bible, or purchase one, and read the references within it's pages to find out Who is in charge of the weather, this earth and the Universe. But! They won't! A favorite Scripture verse of mine is, "The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge: but fools despise wisdom and instruction." Look it up you will find many other such references.

His Servant and Porcupine,

Ed Flanders

RED HAT SOCIETY NEWS

The Red Hat Belles met at The 4 B's Restaurant on Friday, January 22nd with Harriet Chambers and Marion Williams as co-hostesses. The table was decorated beautifully with two Cineraria plants which were given as door prizes, The lucky winners were Lydia Towery and Glenda Olsen.

"Cis" Siebert and Irene Nesgoda volunteered to co-host the February meeting. Irene indicated that it will be at the Bicentennial Apartments Day Room; however date and time is yet to be scheduled. Thank you "Cis" and Irene.

Thank you to the staff of the 4 B's for their fine service and food. A special thank you to our co-hostesses, Harriet and Marion. What a nice way to start 2016! Thank you... again.

Life's Too Serious

by: Joe Barnhart

I'm not real big into New Year's resolutions. Take 'em or leave 'em is my motto. I'm not saying they don't serve a purpose. I'll throw one at you that's a winner. Boost your vocabulary. One word a day, two a week, I don't care. Words are power. A chap can have a lightning fast cranium but a failure to communicate makes him appear like a salt water hamster watching pro golf on TV.

With that goal in mind, I'm going to give you a gentle shove by providing the first dose of really fun words to use.

Boybel (boy-B-ell) from the Latin meaning a young girl who puts her tongue in your mouth when she kisses you. I mentioned this to my 4th grade grandson and he was, to say the least, stunned. His mom was also quite shaken.

Vomdomness (Vhom-DOM-nesS) We've all felt this way, like waking up in bed with your neighbor's dog. Or you neighbor, for that matter. You don't actually vomit, but you feel like you could spew chunks.

Chexting (verb) From the Greek word, moron. Chexting occurs when you are driving, texting, then accidentally drop the phone and root around on the floor for it.

Studalipoid (stew-dah-lip-toy - id; adj.) In a sentence you'd see it this way, "Lawrence is so studalipoid, we told him the ice wasn't thick enough for a 3/4 ton truck."

Dorkaholic: From the Bulgarian dialect with: dor = a fleet footed stallion, kah = a productive cough, o = a vowel (duh!), lic = a remedy. Combined = An agile, fast thinking guy who produces results. I get called this all the time; often by perfect strangers.

Gooder (good-er) An improvement. As in, "Norm, dat joke was much gooder."

Newiton (neeu-it-on) A girl who places her hand(s) up a guys shirt. I also mentioned this one to my grandson. He's an impressionable youngster, I felt compelled. He wasn't even aware such a thing was possible. He skipped dinner.

Bubnoixously (bub-b-noxious-ly; adv.) People so overtly, incessantly bubbly they make a thermos of cappuccino nervous. Not that it could feel anxious, mind you, much like a warm glass of milk feeling sleepy.

Well, all the space I have for now. Give those a shot. Work hard and watch out for those boybels.
