MONTANA WESTERN NAMES RICHARDSON NEW ATHLETIC DIRECTOR

Russ Richardson, currently head athletic trainer at the University of Montana Western, has been named the university's athletic director, Chancellor Beth Weatherby announced today.

"Russ brings a wealth of experience and proven leadership skills that will help guide us in taking our athletic programs and university to the next level," Weatherby said. "My thanks to the search committee for their hard work, and to many across campus and in the community who assisted providing valuable input."

"I'm excited to begin working right away to build on the success of our athletic programs and provide opportunities and resources to allow our student-athletes to have the chance to be a part of championship caliber teams," Richardson said.

A 1982 graduate of then Western Montana College (now the University of Montana Western), Richardson also earned a master's from California State University, Fresno and a doctorate from Washington State University in Pullman, Wash.

Richardson has served as the head athletic trainer and associate professor at UMW since 2012. He previously was a visiting professor at Idaho State University in Pocatello, Idaho and director of athletic training at Whitworth University in Spokane, Wash. for 23 years.

A nationally recognized educator, Richardson has consulted with universities and colleges across the country on program development and assessment. He has served on leadership boards including the National Athletic Trainers' Association and served as president of the Northwest Athletic Trainers' Association, District 10. Richardson was the head athletic trainer of the Hula Bowl All-Star Football Classic from 1998 to 2002.

Richardson will succeed Athletic Director Ryan Nourse who has served in the position since 2013. Nourse returns to the head football coach position for UMW.

Weatherby thanked Nourse for his leadership and energy in developing opportunities for our student-athletes.

The athletic director position directs the university's athletic programs and serves as a member of the chancellor's cabinet.

Richardson's appointment will be submitted to the Montana Board of Regents for final approval.

THANK YOU

After a very busy week last week of getting ready for our only annual fund raiser, the Beaverhead Animal Shelter is happy to announce that we made just over $10,000 this year.

We could not have done it without the help and support of the wonderful community here in Beaverhead County. Thanks to the volunteers who worked so hard to put all the pieces together. Thanks to the businesses and individuals who contributed items to be auctioned and the ingredients used for the spaghetti dinner. And a special thank you to those who attended our event.

Just as your every day expenses keep increasing, ours at the Shelter do as well. This amount will help keep our animals, healthy, fed, and well cared for until we are able to find them forever homes.

DPHHS offers advice to prevent tick bites

As Montanans look to enjoy the great outdoors this spring and summer, Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) and local public health officials urge everyone to follow a few simple steps to prevent tick bites and their illnesses: Limit, repel, and inspect.

State public health officials receive an average of eight tick-borne illness reports every year, the most common being Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever, Tularemia, and Colorado Tick Fever.

"The best defense against tick-borne illnesses is by spraying your legs, ankles, pants, socks, and shoes with insect repellent," said DPHHS epidemiologist Christine Mulgrew.

Public Health experts emphasize a 3-step approach to prevent tick bites: LIMIT: Ticks live in wooded, brushy, or grassy areas so walk in the center of trails and mow your property where you and your pets spend time.

REPEL: Wear long, light-colored pants and socks to spot ticks more easily and use insect repellents. Repellents containing up to 30 percent DEET can be used on the skin or clothing. Repellents with lower DEET concentrations might need to be applied more frequently. Repellents containing permethrin can be used on clothing, but not on skin. One application to pants, socks, and shoes may be effective through several washings.

INSPECT: Check your skin carefully for ticks after returning from outdoor activities especially if you were in wooded, brushy, or grassy areas. De-ticking clothing is best done by throwing clothes into a drier on high for 10 minutes, even before washing. Remember to inspect children and animals after an outing.

The most common symptoms of tick-borne infections include fever and chills, aches and pains, rash, and fever of varying degrees. Although easily treated with antibiotics, these diseases can be difficult for physicians to diagnose. Early recognition and treatment of the infection decreases the risk of serious complications.

"See your doctor immediately if you have been bitten by a tick and experience symptoms," Mulgrew said.

If a tick is found and is attached, follow these steps to safely remove the tick:

1. Use fine-tipped, "pointy" tweezers to grasp the tick as close to the skin's surface as possible.
2. Pull upward with steady, even pressure. Don't twist or jerk the tick; this can cause the mouth-parts to break off and remain in the skin. If this happens, remove the mouth-parts with tweezers. If you are unable to remove the mouth easily with clean tweezers, leave it alone and let the skin heal.
3. After removing the tick, thoroughly clean the bite area and your hands with rubbing alcohol, an iodine scrub, or soap and water.

Do not use folklore remedies such as "painting" the tick with nail polish or petroleum jelly, or using heat to make the tick detach from the skin. These methods are not recommended and may cause the tick to burrow deeper into the skin.
