City Wages Paid

By: MJ

I am of a different time. I remember clearly when President Kennedy said the following at his 1961 Inaugural Address: "Ask not what your country can do for you - ask what you can do for your country." Times have changed and today the focus and question is not what we can do but what we are owed. I am not saying the cities employees and elected officials should not have wage increases. In todays work place we hear the words deserved and entitled when it comes to wage increases. Thinking like this says the person taking responsibility for his job, has a good job performance record and etc. is no more entitled to a wage increase then the person who spends many working hours on the sidelines watching.

All people working for the city received an automatic 2 percent wage increase with the exception of the council.
This increase is calculated on the hourly salary. The 2 percent raise is what the employee's union negotiated 2± years ago. Not all on the city payroll belong to the union however the mayor gave the 2% increase across the board.

WAGES: Judge Thompson; The judge asked for a wage increase of $11,000± for the year. She explained to the finance committee she would be working an extra ten (10) hours a week. The finance committee recommended to the council that this be approved. After extensive discussion about the ten extra hours and more, the council rejected her request. Judge Thompson received the 2% raise.

Mayor Klakken; Mayor ask finance committee for a wage increase. The discussion by Councilman Straugh and McIsaac centered on the budget not including the mayor's increase. NOTE: The budget they were talking about at the time of this discussion was a temporary budget and in working progress where changes could be made. Straugh ask the mayor what his justification for holding the others to a 2% raise and the mayor asking for more was. Straugh then went onto say that it's reasonable to provide raises because of addition work or additional hours and asked the mayor if he was putting in extra hours. Mayor responded "yes." City Treasurer Straus stated that his hours as city treasurer are half of his predecessors and that he spent little time doing the budget so the mayor had to be putting in the extra hours to get the work done. NOTE: During all this discussion on the Mayor's wages, the committee did not compare other's wages and or hours worked. FACT: The mayor does receive less wages then several other city employees.

Finance committee did not recommend this increase to council. Finance committee members are; Councilman Garry, McIsaac and Straugh.

The preliminary budget the finance committee was working with at the time of this meeting has now been passed by the council. It now goes to public hearing for comment then the council can make changes or not and take a vote. The final vote for the budget will be Sept. 7th at the council meeting. The public can still comment at that meeting.

FIRE SAFE LANDSCAPING

Due to the high level of fire danger Fire Chief Morast and the Dillon Volunteer Fire Department would like to remind homeowners that fire safe landscaping can reduce the hazards from fires and give an added margin of protection. Regular scheduled maintenance decreases the fire hazard. Remove all fallen branches, shreds of bark, and dead or dying foliage from the ground. Keep annual grasses and weeds mowed to reduce their fire carrying potential.

AG Fox Secures Cephalon Settlement for Consumers, State

Company Actively Delayed Generic Competition for Wakefulness Drug Provigil

Montana Attorney General Tim Fox announced today that his office and 47 other states and the District of Columbia entered into a $125 million settlement with Cephalon and affiliated companies ("Cephalon"). The settlement ends a multistate investigation into anticompetitive conduct by Cephalon to protect the monopoly profits it earned from its landmark wakefulness drug, Provigil. That conduct delayed generic versions of Provigil from entering the market for several years.

As patent and regulatory barriers that prevented generic competition to Provigil neared expiration, Cephalon intentionally defrauded the Patent and Trademark Office to secure an additional patent, which a court subsequently deemed invalid and unenforceable. Before that court finding, Cephalon was able to delay generic competition for nearly six years by filing patent infringement lawsuits against all potential generic competitors. Cephalon settled those lawsuits in 2005 and early 2006 by paying the generic competitors to delay sale of their generic versions of Provigil until at least April 2012. Because of that delayed entry, consumers, states, and others paid hundreds of millions more for Provigil than they would have had generic versions of the drug launched by early 2006, as expected.

"Consumers benefit greatly from having generic options when they're purchasing pharmaceutical drugs," said Attorney General Tim Fox. "We need to do what we can to break down barriers that delay entry of generic drugs into the marketplace. This settlement holds Cephalon accountable for its anticompetitive conduct and will put some money back into the pockets of consumers who overpaid; it also compensates taxpayer funded state programs that overpaid for Provigil."

The settlement includes $35 million for distribution to consumers in the 48 states and District of Columbia who bought Provigil. The states hope this $35 million consumer recovery will be supplemented with recovery from a settlement of a class action against Cephalon. Montana's total estimated recovery will be about $695,000 that will compensate Montana consumers and the State of Montana.

This multistate settlement was facilitated by litigation brought against Cephalon by the Federal Trade Commission. In May 2015, the FTC settled its suit against Cephalon for injunctive relief and $1.2 billion, which was paid into an escrow account. The FTC settlement allowed for those escrow funds to be distributed for settlement of certain related cases and government investigations, such as those of the 48 states.

The settlement is subject to court review, including providing consumers with notice and an opportunity to participate in, object to, or opt out of settlement. The states expect court review will be provided by Judge Mitchell Goldberg of the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, who is currently overseeing other litigation concerning Provigil against Cephalon and others.

The settlement agreement is available here: https://dojmt.gov/wp-content/uploads/Provigil-Settlement_Agreement.pdf

Thank You Katie Tackett!

The Beaverhead Watershed Committee in Dillon will be saying goodbye to its wonderful watershed coordinator, Katie Tackett. Katie is stepping down from her post with BWC after eight impactful years of conservation in southwest Montana.

She leaves a legacy as a dedicated organizer, an effective fundraiser, and an essential contact for getting watershed projects done in the Beaverhead. It is fitting that she will be receiving the FWP Director's award for her role in orchestrating the signature project of her tenure: the Poindexter Slough Project. This project brought one of the Dillon community's old favorite fishing spots back to life to be enjoyed for many decades to come.

Thank you Katie for your years of great work and we wish you well in your new chapter!
