My Personal Olympics

By Chuck Dishno 8/28/2016

May, 1954, graduated from High School in my home town, Bly, Oregon. I worked the summer with my Dad falling timber near Kings Canyon National Park in California. I knew I didn't want to be a logger the rest of my life and was saving up for college. Near Dinuba, California where the saw mill was located was the town of Reedley. There was a nice 2 year college there called Reedley Junior College. It looked inventing so I talked my friend, Doyle to try the spring semester with me.

Off to College

Doyle and I left shortly after New Years in 1955 in his 1948 Chevy Club Coupe. We loved the San Joaquin Valley except for the days of fog. Our apartment was adequate and we were soon settled in and became freshmen taking all the required bone-head courses.

The first month was OK but I soon decided I wanted to get a small job somewhere just to take up the slack. I soon found one in the nearby town of Orange Cove running movie projectors on the weekend. This was a win-win situation for me, not only did I have more pocket money but the theater owner, John took a liking to me and asked if I would consider moving to Fresno with he and his wife Sue and three children for fall semester at Fresno Junior College. I talked it over with Doyle and this was alright with him as he was thinking of going back to Bly and taking work in the logging industry.

It was a great opportunity for me to attend a better college and live a better life. John and Sue had an air charter service along with 2 theaters and lived in a very affluent section of Fresno. I took them up on the offer but told them I would be working with my Pop as soon as school was out and would start my new life in Fresno in September at the start of the fall enrolment.

Party at Blakely's

The college hosted an end of the year party at Blakely's pool and picnic ground in Fresno about 40 miles from Reedley. It was held about a week before school let out for the summer and all students were invited.

I didn't know many kids at Reedley but having finished my finals I thought it might be a good break as I would be leaving the next week to work in the woods with my Dad. The school had about 4 or 5 buses ready to take us to Fresno on Saturday. We got to Blakely's about 11am and needless to say, I was impressed. I had seen a few swimming pools but this one was the largest I had ever seen or even imagined. It was an Olympic size pool complete with 3 diving boards at various heights and two large diving platforms, one 5 meter and one 10 meter. That translates to about 33 feet above the water. Fortunately the pool was 12 feet deep at that end.

I wasn't much of a swimmer but I could do the dog paddle and side stroke OK. As for diving, the only diving I had done was when we dammed up Sprague River near Bly and the sawmill cut us a diving board at a taper which we placed over a large rock and anchored one end with a couple of large granite boulders. It was about 3 feet above the water but worked well for us novice divers.

Blakely's was intriguing but I hadn't brought a swim suit so I wasn't planning to go in anyway. I was just along for the outing and free food and drinks.

I was wearing a pair of faded blue denim pants and a rayon Hawaiian shirt and must have looked out of place with all those beautiful girls in their skimpy bathing suits not to mention the athletic guys in their form fitting suits. Not quite like the Speedo type you see at today's Olympics but still very reveling by outlining their warehouse plumbing.

Not knowing any of the students, all I wanted to do was have some food and maybe a couple of beers then sit under a table umbrella and watch the pool activity.

The soft drinks were free but they charged for the beer. Seeing no one checking ID's I decided to have a beer or two. After loading my plate I sat at a table where there were a couple of girls and guys. They were all watching the divers performing their fancy dives from spring boards and occasionally off the platforms. With each dive the girls would cheer and yell their approval. After several rounds of this I decided to go over to the rental booth and rent a bathing suit so I could at least go into the pool and cool off.

At the rental booth, they didn't have much choice in men's suits. I had my choice of either the short form fitting and revealing briefs or the longer and looser boxer type trunks. Since I weighed only about 115 lbs and was almost 6' tall I selected the boxer trunks knowing I didn't have much to show in the warehouse department.

After selecting my trunks I went into the locker room and changed. The trunks seemed to be one size fits all and these had a rope tie for a belt. I synched them up as tight as I could using my Boy Scout skills in not tying. Coming out I felt very conspicuous and walked around for a while before dipping into the pool to cool off and get used to the chlorinated water.

When I came out I felt much better but before going back to my table I decided to walk around the end of the pool where the diving apparatus was set up. When I got there I saw a long line of athletic guys and before I knew it I was swept up in the line. Too late, I found I was heading for the 10 meter platform. I thought of getting out of line but before I could make up my mind I was at the ladder that led to the top. When I looked back there were 4 or 5 guys waiting their turn. I had no choice but to go up. In my mind I thought, what the heck, I'll just go to the end of the platform, look around, then if it looked to scary, I would climb back down the ladder.

Upon reaching the end with my toe sticking over I looked down at the water and my heart jumped up into my throat and was beating like a marching drum. Having lost the sight in my right eye a few years earlier I didn't have much depth perception and the view from the top sure looked different than looking up from the ground. I was about to swallow my pride and turn to go back to the ladder when I glanced over and saw at least 100 eyes waiting to see what that bean pole was about to do. Pride overcame fear and I knew I had to make some sort of a dive. Going back down that ladder was not an option. It was dive into the water and possibly die or die of humiliation by climbing down.

I had the choice of doing a cannon ball, jackknife or swan dive to get the girls attention but I had never dived from more than 4' so I chose to just bend over at the hips and go straight in. It was a 33' drop but I figured my arms would part the water and I might survive.

With my heart beating a mile a minute I tipped forward and a few seconds later I knifed thru the water. It's good thing that the water was 12' deep at that end because I shot right to the bottom. It must have been that I was so skinny that I shot thru the water like cupid's arrow. Upon hitting the bottom with my hands, I turned around to start up when I felt those boxer trunks slipping below my knees. I must have done the Boy Scout faux pas and tied a granny knot instead of a square knot which pulled out with the force of the water. I made a frantic grab for the trunks, just getting my fingers on the top band and haul them up to a respectable location or so I hoped. This only took few seconds but it seemed like forever. At that depth, my ears felt like they were about to burst.

After I made the grab, I turned and headed to the surface. When I looked over at the audience, to my delight they were all watching another muscular diver about to make his double flip and no one was paying attention to me. I was glad that the attention had turned and it gave me the opportunity to swim over to a swim-out near and pool ladder.

I never have been a great swimmer and it must have been entertaining to watch me swim half way across that huge pool doing the one arm dog-paddle while holding up my dignity with the other hand. Upon reaching the swim-out I sat there and undid the granny knot then tied the preferred square knot assuring that the trunks would not slip below my skinny hips. I sat there in waist deep water on the swim-out before getting up nerve enough to climb out and make my way back to the umbrella table that I had left about 15 minutes earlier. It was only 15 minutes but to me it had been a life time.

I sat there a while then took my rental trunks back to the locker room, changed into my denims and got back outside just as a bus was loading to return to Reedley. To my relief no one on the bus mentioned my Olympic dive. The next day I took my last final and headed to the woods to work the summer falling timber with my Pop. When I told him the story he really cracked up and said he wish he had been there so he could award me some sort of a medal for my efforts.

In September, I made the transfer to Fresno Junior College where I stayed for the next 3 semesters before getting married and then drafted into the Army. My life was just starting

Mayor's Time in Office

By: MJ

The mayor will not take credit alone for the success that he has had during his term so far. He is quick to say without the skillful administration, 45± employees the positive progress would not have happened in this short amount of time.

Mayor Klakken is very proud of the employees, the pride they take in their jobs and the willingness of each of them to meet the challenges they are faced with at any given time.

When running for office the mayor wanted to lower water bills. That he has done. Yes, it is true some water users bills went up and some went down. There were people that were not paying anything, some that received benefits by being charged a lower rate... The mayor and his team have streamlined the process, making it easier and more efficient. Ultimately saving money for the taxpayers via no budget increases.

Water Meters: The challenges continue. The meters at the water wells are reporting 40± percent of water being pumped is not accounted for. In other words the meters at the wells are reporting more water distributed to consumers in Dillon then the city is billing people for. Possible Reasons: The fairground sprinklers are supported by the city water works and until recently there was no system in place to document the gallons of water being used at the fairgrounds. Contractors have been seen filling water trucks with no accountability. City placed a meter on several outlets at the fair grounds that metered 840 thousand gallons pumped in one month.

Streets: Another one of the issues the mayor wanted to make improvements on. With the efficiency of the street crew improvements are slowly being made. The goal of the mayor and crew is to do long term repairs on the streets and not just a patch job that will only last a year. As you were driving around you might have seen a different method being used by digging out the clay layer and replacing it with a base material and a thicker layer of asphalt.

Money Saved: Mayor Klakken and the Administration have saved the city millions of dollars via the reconstruction of bonds. This savings is realized over the life of the bonds. The council seen the benefits of the process to the city and put their stamp of approval on it.

Equalize Costs: Hundreds of people are living outside of city yet they work within the city. They use the streets and the infrastructure yet cost of the upkeep of streets, water/sewer falls on the backs of those who live within the city. Mayor is hoping to find a justifiable way to make all users share the costs.

Mayor Klakken will tell you the most enjoyable part of his job is helping people and the city. He is quick to say that the employees have taken ownership and are proud of the jobs they do. We all should remember a "thank you" is appreciated.
