Pearl Harbor: The 75th Anniversary

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

When I was a preschooler, I lived across the road from Rufus Foster. I still attend church with his widow.

One of many memorable things about Mr. Foster was that, as a 19-year-old from the hills of Tennessee, he was at Pearl Harbor during the Japanese sneak attack.

DAVE GRANLUND © www.davegranlund.com

December 7 marks three-quarters of a century since that attack, and I have to wonder if we truly remember the lessons of the tragedy.

We pay lip service to military preparedness and diplomatic solutions; but in a million ways large and small, America remains an accident waiting to happen.

In a world of widely shared personal data, porous borders, massive power grids and the Internet of Things, there is no room for complacency.

Young and old, public and private sector, management and labor ---- we're all flirting with disaster.

We hear of product recalls with mind-numbing frequency.
High government officials are accused of "extreme carelessness" with state secrets. Restaurants are at the center of epidemic outbreaks. Suicide prevention hotlines for veterans go unmanned. Anthrax samples are shipped to labs haphazardly. Economic bubbles are treated as if they'll never burst. People giving off warning signs are allowed to "go postal" in the workplace.

Yes, "stuff happens." But lightning strikes, earthquakes and other so-called "acts of God" are only part of the problem we face.

Negligence, incompetence, laziness, denial, unpreparedness and other factors exacerbate potential crises.

Kicking the can down the road, passing the buck, taking shortcuts, engaging in juvenile jurisdictional wrangling, administering wrist-slap punishments and carrying on Ol' Boy Network shenanigans all make our infrastructure, food supply and identities a little more vulnerable.

The 21st century is fraught with danger because of a network of human shortcomings: employees who goof off when mixing a batch or tightening a nut; workers who ignore the rules-breaking of teammates; supervisors and CEOs who ignore metaphorical "check engine soon" lights while counting their bonus before it hatches.

Sometimes we're so concerned about "rocking the boat" that we wind up sinking the ship.

Did the "Greatest Generation" really risk life and limb during World War II so their great-grandchildren could (a) get molested by an authority figure who fell between the cracks, (b) sink to a watery grave because a bridge inspector didn't really, you know, INSPECT THE BRIDGE, (c) get sick from tainted water because someone was too cheap to clean it up, (d) get beaten up by a police officer whose history of violence was whitewashed, (e) lose their life savings because of lax security at a financial institution or retailer or (f) get slaughtered because someone was too politically correct to investigate a terrorist?

Eternal vigilance is not something reserved for the commander-in-chief or the top brass at the Pentagon. For America to survive and thrive, we must all contribute.

Individual citizens must be conscientious enough to do their own jobs right and remain politically well-informed.

Workers must be willing to "see something, say something" when co-workers or management do questionable things.

Managers must enforce "top-down" quality control, placing the proper protocols in place and not merely assuming that procedures are followed out.

September 11, 2001 joined December 7, 1941 as a day of mourning.

Another "date which will live in infamy" may be lurking out there.

In honor of those who were killed or injured at Pearl Harbor, make sure you're not a contributor to it.

Public health reporting increase in norovirus outbreaks

The Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) announced today that in the last three months there have been 12 norovirus outbreaks in Montana that have sickened more than 250 people.

This is three times the number of outbreaks usually reported during this time of year.

Norovirus, a very contagious virus that can affect anyone, is the most common cause of gastroenteritis in Montana and the US.

Outbreaks have occurred in the counties of Cascade, Flathead, Rosebud, Sanders, Valley and Yellowstone.

"Most of these outbreaks occurred in nursing homes and assisted living facilities, putting our elderly population at risk," said Dana Fejes of the DPHHS Communicable Disease Epidemiology Section. "Washing your hands thoroughly with soap and water often can protect you and others from norovirus."

The usual symptoms of norovirus include diarrhea, vomiting, nausea, and stomach pain. There is no specific treatment for this illness and most individuals recover in 1 to 3 days. The illness can last longer and be more severe in young children, older people, or people who have other chronic health conditions.

The virus is highly contagious and can spread rapidly between persons and through contaminated food or water. Norovirus can survive on surfaces and be transferred to other people when they touch the contaminated surface.

DPHHS and local authorities are reminding individuals to stay home when ill to prevent exposing others. "It's a simple and effective method to keep infectious diseases from spreading: stay home when you are ill," Fejes said.

Public health officials advise following simple tips to prevent the spread of norovirus and many other infectious illnesses:

- Practice proper hand hygiene: Wash your hands carefully with soap and water, especially after using the bathroom or changing diapers and always before eating or preparing food. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers can be used in addition to hand washing. But, they should not be used as a substitute for washing with soap and water.
- Take care in the kitchen: Carefully wash fruits and vegetables, and cook oysters and other shellfish thoroughly before eating them.
- Do not prepare food while ill: People who are infected with norovirus should not prepare food for others while they have symptoms and for 3 days after they recover from their illness.
- Clean and disinfect contaminated surfaces: After throwing up or having diarrhea, immediately clean and disinfect contaminated surfaces. Use a chlorine bleach solution with a concentration of 1000-5000 parts per million (generally 5 to 25 tablespoons of standard household bleach per gallon of water) or other disinfectant labeled as effective against norovirus.
- Wash laundry thoroughly: Immediately remove clothing or linens that may be contaminated and wash with detergent at the maximum length available cycle, then machine dry. Handle soiled items carefully—without agitating them—to avoid spreading virus.
