Attorney General Fox Offers Safe Giving Tips for Year-End Donors

Many nonprofit organizations rely on end-of-year donations to round out their budgets. Attorney General Tim Fox and his Office of Consumer Protection (OCP) want to make sure Montanans who donate to their favorite charities at this time of year do so in the safest way possible.

"Making a charitable donation before December 31 is a great way to support the causes that are close to your heart and save some money come tax time," said Attorney General Tim Fox. "Unfortunately, there are some unscrupulous people out there who pose as representatives for a charity, or who set up a false charity in order to steal money and personal information from donors. However, there are many tools donors can use to ensure their philanthropic contributions are going toward a real cause instead of being pocketed by a scammer."

Best practices include:

- Give wisely. Would-be donors should ask questions and donate only when they feel satisfied that their money will be used in ways they consider appropriate.
- Be wary of callers who use high pressure tactics or those who promise sweepstakes winnings or any prize of significant value in exchange for a contribution.

Ask how much of each donation will go to the charity for its charitable (rather than administrative) purposes. Ask solicitors if they are paid fund-raisers. If the solicitors are paid, a portion of any charitable contribution will help pay their salary.

Ask solicitors to provide written documentation indicating that the donation will be tax deductible.

Ask for the full, official name of the charity, then search for it online through a charity evaluator website, a list of which can be found on the Montana Office of Consumer Protection's web page at <https://dojmt.gov/consumer/donations-to-charities/>. Alternatively, you can also call the Office of Consumer Protection at 406-444-4500 to ensure there is no scam activity taking place with the charity soliciting your donation.

Don't give out credit card numbers to a telephone solicitor or in response to any unsolicited phone calls received. Pay by check instead. A cancelled check will help for tax record purposes. Use the full, official name of the charity on the check.

NEXT STEPS: To get updates on the latest scams affecting Montanans, sign up for Consumer Alerts through the Office of Consumer Protection. To report an attempted scam, use OCP's convenient online reporting form here. You can also call to speak with one of OCP's investigators at (800) 481-6896 or (406) 444-4500, visit OCP's homepage at <https://dojmt.gov/consumer/>.

Office-party Christmas Spirit Runs Afoul of Political Correctness

By Tom Purcell

"You almost got fired because your company had a holiday party? You're going to have to explain."

"Look, where I come from, we call holiday parties 'Christmas parties.' Nobody told me I was supposed to avoid anything relating to our country's Christmas tradition."

"What did you do?"

"Well, the owners of my company threw our holiday party after work one evening. Thanks to me and the boys in the sales department, the adult beverages were flowing. That's when the Human Resources director threatened to can me."

"You were unaware that many organizations no longer serve alcoholic beverages due to liability issues and the fact that some religions and cultures are offended by the consumption of alcohol?"

"That's right. As far as I was concerned, we were having a normal Christmas party. That's why I brought a Christmas tree."

"You didn't."

"Look, I figured everybody would love it, but HR threatened to fire me if I didn't remove it. HR said I was creating a hostile work environment by being insensitive to people of other faiths - that even though the Supreme Court ruled that a Christmas tree is a secular symbol, the only acceptable tree would be a 'diversity tree' that represented everybody's point of view. But then I got into trouble again."

"What did you do next?"

"Well, me and the boys in sales had gotten pretty well oiled before HR took our hooch away, and we love to sing when we're liquored up. We started singing Christmas carols like 'Silent Night,' 'Hark! The Herald Angels Sing' and pink slip."

"You didn't knock it off, though, did you?"

"Nope. You see, me and the boys in sales slipped outside to have a few more snorts of whiskey, and when we got back, one of the hottest ladies in Accounting walked into the room. You wouldn't believe some of the clothing she wears to work - or, to be more precise, the clothing she doesn't wear."

"Please don't tell me there was mistletoe."

"How'd you guess? The boys bet me 20 bucks I could coax her under the mistletoe and give her a little peck. Silver-tongued devil that I am, I began commenting on how great she looked in her scanty duds when -"

"HR threatened to fire you?"

"Bingo. The Accounting babe dresses like a pop star and I'm the one who gets into trouble for commenting on her lack of clothing? I don't get it."

"I read about similar Christmas office-party woes in several news reports. As our workforce has become more diverse - Americans have so many different social styles, religions and points of view these days - more companies are no longer sure how to handle Christmas events."

"My company handled it by taking all the fun out of Christmas."

"Well, in our lawsuit-crazy world, companies are afraid to serve alcohol. And their fear of being insensitive to people of diverse faiths and points of view is the reason many are abandoning traditional Christmas parties in favor of dull, generic, daytime events. Though you have to admit you were awfully boorish and brash at your Christmas party."

"I admit it. But me and the boys in sales have been boorish and brash every year. It's just that nowadays, HR will threaten to fire you for it."
