"Literature and Women" Class organizes fundraiser for Women's Resource Center

University of Montana Western English Professor Bethany Blankenship's "Literature and Women" class recently organized an event raising over $2,000 for the local Women's Resource Center.

The Women's Resource Center is a proactive organization for individuals who seek to free themselves from domestic violence and for those affected by sexual assault. They are dedicated to enhancing the quality of peoples lives through community involvement, education, and non-confrontational conflict resolution in the Beaverhead and Madison County areas.

Blankenship began her class by studying the female writers of ancient Greece, to medieval and renaissance female leaders and up to current graphic novelists promoting social empowerment for women's rights.

"For the classroom portion of the course, students learned about women's impact in literature, the social challenges women writers had to overcome throughout history and female writers who empowered other women by giving them a voice," Blankenship explained. "I wanted my students to have a clear picture of the struggles women have had throughout history and how it still persists to this day."

The class includes a service learning component as a requirement, which inspired Blankenship to put the students in charge of organizing the fundraiser to benefit the WRC.

"Because of Experience One, this class has much more potential than merely sitting around a table, sipping tea and talking about literature," Blankenship said. "The fundraiser was a great way to get the students involved with women's issues today and truly be experiential."

The fundraiser included a "pint night" portion, where one dollar from every pint purchased was donated to the WRC, and a silent auction. The auction included items from over 20 local businesses. Blankenship's students also conducted a raffle for fly fishing gear and a guided fishing trip on the Beaverhead River donated by Kailey Outfitters.

"After learning about the struggle female writers went through to have their voices heard I have come to appreciate my freedom to write, be published, and recognized as a female writer," student WesleyAnn Johnson said. "Organizing an event to help those in domestic violence and sexual assault situations opened my eyes to struggles within our own community. I'm happy we were able to be a part of the solution."

No. 17 Montana Western Takes Care of Warner Pacific College 87-75

The Montana Western Bulldogs (10-1, 2-0) used a balanced offense to keep a pesky Warner Pacific College (5-5) team at arms-length to cruise to an 87-75 victory, in both teams second game in the Cactus Classic.

The Knights of Warner Pacific College tried to catch the Bulldogs on their heels, jumping out to an early lead. The Bulldogs weathered the storm and were able to build and maintain a double digit lead throughout the game.

Junior Marcus Payne (Livingston, Mont.) paced the Bulldogs in the first half scoring 12 points and grabbing 4 rebounds. Fellow junior Dom Robinson (Tacoma, Wash.), for the second straight game, hit a three-point shot late in the first half giving the Bulldogs a 13 point lead heading into the break.

Senior Shyke Smalls (Great Falls, Mont.) started the second half with three straight three-point baskets helping the Bulldogs build a large lead, however the Knights matched the Bulldogs shot for shot. Eventually turnovers took their toll and the Bulldogs were able to stop any run the Knights tried to make keeping a double digit lead for the remainder of the game.

The Bulldogs balanced offensive attack was led by Smalls who finished with a game high 22 points, four rebounds, two assists, two steals and a block. Payne finished with 16 points and seven rebounds. Robinson added 14 points and 5 assist. Three other Bulldogs finished the game with eight points each.

U.S. Supreme Court Hands Montana a Victory in Water-Use Lawsuit with Wyoming

A Special Master appointed by the Supreme Court of the United States ruled Tuesday in State of Montana v. State of Wyoming that the state of Montana is entitled to specific declaration of its water compact rights, to recovery of damages in the form of water from the State of Wyoming, as well as that Montana has the right to fill the Tongue River Reservoir to the pre-1950 levels. The Court's decision is the latest development in the nine year legal battle surrounding water use under the Yellowstone River Compact, passed by Congress in 1950.

The dispute originated out of concern by the state of Montana that the State of Wyoming did not recognize Montana's water rights under the Yellowstone River Compact. Earlier this year, the United States Supreme Court issued an order that recognizes Montana suffered damages as the result of Wyoming's failure to abide by terms of the Yellowstone River Compact with respect to waters of the Tongue River. Special Master Barton Thompson, appointed by the United States Supreme Court to preside over the case, ruled in 2014 that the State of Montana is entitled to protection of pre-1950 water rights, if the State of Wyoming was properly notified during lean water years.

"Today's decision is a big win for the State of Montana and its water users," said Montana Attorney General Tim Fox. "I am pleased that the Special Master recognized the State of Montana's right to assert its Compact rights, and has ruled that Montana is entitled to a specific judicial declaration of its rights."

Either party can appeal the Special Master's opinion to the full Court if they choose.

Statewide AMBER Alert Test Scheduled for January 13 Test Scheduled for National AMBER Alert Day

The Montana Department of Justice (DOJ) is notifying the public a statewide test of the Montana AMBER Alert System has been scheduled for National AMBER Alert Day - January 13, 2017 at approximately 10:00 am. This will be an end-to-end live system test and should include cell phone alerting.

The public should be aware Montana's AMBER Alert system uses two types of cell phone notifications:

The first type of cellular alert is the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) Integrated Public Alert Warning System (IPAWS) Wireless Emergency Alert (WEA) which broadcasts a loud tone and sends a short text message. This is the same system used to broadcast Presidential Emergency messages. Every cellular phone in the AMBER Alert area should receive this message if they have not disabled the alert. If citizens do not receive this alert, they should contact their cell phone carrier.

The second type of cellular alert comes from CodeRED and allows more detailed AMBER Alert information to be distributed, including photographs. However, in order to receive these cellular alerts, citizens must download the free CodeRED application available at: <https://ecnetwork.com/codered-mobile-alert-app/>

Montana's AMBER Alert system is activated to alert the public when law enforcement believes a child has been abducted under life-threatening circumstances. "The upcoming test of our AMBER Alert system is key to maintaining this life-saving notification tool for Montana's missing children," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "We know that the first few hours after an abduction are the most critical for a kidnapped child's safe return. Citizen tips are vital for Montana's law enforcement agencies as they work to recover children and arrest kidnapping suspects," Attorney General Fox added.

Since Montana's AMBER Alert Program was established in 2003, there have been 32 AMBER Alerts issued; seven of them were for abductions that occurred in other states or Canada. Due to strong public participation, all 47 children were located. Tragically, four were located deceased: Two were murdered in cases that started in Idaho and Canada respectively; one child was the victim of an accidental death; and one child was murdered in Montana last year.

Last summer, DOJ announced it began using CodeRED to issue Montana's AMBER Alerts and Missing Endangered Person Advisories (MEPAs), thanks to a generous donation by the Town Pump Foundation, which made the switch to the new alert system possible.

Montana's AMBER Alert system is effective in large part because of the dedicated partnership among Montana law enforcement, the Montana Broadcasters Association and media, the Montana National Weather Service, and several state agencies including the Montana Department of Justice, the Montana Department of Transportation, the Montana Department of Administration, and the Montana Lottery, as well as Montana's citizens.

Outdoor Winter Fun Day January 7

Get ready for winter fun! On Sat. Jan. 7, you can take part in a winter fun day event from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Elkhorn Hot Springs.

Activities include snow shoeing or cross country skiing to interactive stations with either fun in the snow activities or winter survival skill building. Stations may include: beacon search, tracking, and snowball darts to name a few. Youth can learn about and begin the process of becoming a "Junior Snow Ranger". There will be free coffee, hot chocolate and treats inside the Elkhorn Forest Service Cabin (located just above the hot spring pools). Snow shoes will be available to try for free, or you can bring your own skis and snow shoes. Skilled skiers are encouraged to come and ski some of the local trails and tack up trail markers along the routes. Those interested in marking trail, should arrive promptly at 11 a.m. to depart as a group.

The Elkhorn Cross-Country Ski Trails are free to the public and open to both snow shoes and cross-country skiing. So bring your family up for a fun day of learning, snowshoeing, and soaking. Elkhorn Hot Springs is offering $3 swim coupons for all participants.

The Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest, Beaverhead Trails Coalition, Pioneer Mountain Education Foundation, and Elkhorn Hot Springs have joined together to host this fun family event.

All are welcome. For more information about the event call the Forest Service at (406) 683-3900.
