Montana Western English faculty published in Montana-based poetry volume

University of Montana Western English faculty Sally Cobau and O. Alan Weltzien were recently published in the Montana-based poetry volume, Poems Across the Big Sky II by Many Voices Press.

Published in Kalispell, Mont. at Flathead Valley Community College (FVCC), Many Voices Press was started by Lowell Jaeger, an FVCC English instructor and published poet.

"Our goal in this publishing project is to give deserving Montana poets an opportunity to be heard and to give readers everywhere a generous sampling of Montana's best poets," Jaeger said.

Weltzien contributed two poems for the collection, "Blue Eyes" and "Maple Floor." Cobau submitted one poem titled "Almost Halloween." Their poems will appear together with some of Montana's most well known writers, including Jim Harrison, Michael Earl Craig and Sheryl Noethe.

Cobau is an instructor of English at UMW and is currently poetry editor of the online literary journal, Newworld Review. She has had poems and short stories published in LitRag, Room Magazine and The Sun.

"I'm pleased my poem was selected for the second edition of Poems Across the Big Sky," Cobau said. "Many Voices Press has put together an excellent collection of Montana's finest poets and writers and it's an honor to be included alongside them."

A self-described "born-again poet," Weltzien is a longtime English professor at Montana

Newly Positioned Council Person

By: MJ

Mr. Russell Schwandt was the candidate chosen by the council to replace Mr. Kevin Hodge as the Ward #2 representative on the council. When a council's position is vacated applications are taken and the council chooses one applicant via a vote. The seat was vacated by Mr. Kevin Hodge when he took another job out of Dillon area.

The council had a challenge as there was two qualified applicants. Russell Schwandt and Ed Mooney submitted applications. Each candidates was nominated by a council member. It was explained by City Attorney Dolan that the vote had to be open to the public and not a closed vote.

There was well-meaning discussions by council members. It was apparent that the council had done research, reviewed minutes and personally spoke with or received emails from citizens they represent in Dillon.

Council members expressed their appreciation of the public's involvement in the process.

Should Bothering Employees
After Work Hours Be Illegal?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

On January 1, France implemented a new law that gives workers the legal "right to disconnect" from emails and other digital correspondence from co-workers and bosses while off the clock.

For the sake of accuracy, I must point out that the law covers only companies with 50 or more employees, thus leaving out the mom-and-pop operations (or, as they call them in France, the mom-and-pop-and-pop's-mistress operations).

If workers and management can't compromise on after-work correspondence, the company must publish a charter that specifically states expectations for workers outside the office.

Alas, it is a rather toothless law. As the "Christian Science Monitor" reports, it lacks any defined punishment for companies that fail to define employment terms or abide by after-hours rules. This shortcoming certainly dashed the hopes of the guillotine industry. There would have been protests in the street, but most of the guillotine office staff were tied up using France's generous benefit of "six weeks paid leave for flashbacks from that really traumatic paper cut incident during my probation period."

Even though the standard work week in France was set at 35 hours in 2000, I can understand the stress that office workers face. My teachers assured me the workday is a constant barrage of "Where is the library?" and "I want a cheese omelet." Unless someone accidentally "presses two" and gets a frantic string of "Donde esta la casa de Pepe?"

Perhaps unions should have forgotten about legislation and instead countered family-time intrusions by outsmarting management. ("Oui, you can pick my brain about the Chevalier Project; but be forewarned that I'm including you in a CONFERENCE CALL with the vinyl siding guy, the home security system guy and the alumni donations guy.")

A lot of people around the world empathize with the French professionals, but the farmers and ranchers I deal with in my day job at a farmers cooperative think the French "have got it made and don't know it." The farm folk can only dream of a world in which they can be sheltered from unexpected communications for most of the day. When a cow is delivering a calf in a hailstorm at midnight, they don't get to say, "Chill out and check my rights in the CHARTER, Bossy."

Perhaps the NEED for after-hours conversations could be minimized if a few executives had a backbone. I know there are multinational goals and umpteen time zones and all that jazz, but the corporate world doesn't HAVE to be one crisis after another.

Instead of huffing, "Maurice, our client in Buenos Aires needs an algorithm ASAP to determine the exact optimum proportion of mauve and puce oolated squiggs for shipment at Christmas 2017," a manager could say, "Tomorrow morning after wine break, we'll tell the client in Buenos Aires that he can help us find a new place to

Skeptics wonder if this French revolt against blurred lines

With all due respect to the American work ethic, perhaps the lines have already been irreversibly blurred.

Do You Know the Truth... Who is God and what are His characteristics? (Pt. 2)

---We believe the following: (1) the Bible was given by the inspiration of God as stated in 2 Timothy 3:16-17; (2) all statements made in this and any ensuing articles will be based on what the Bible says; (3) the Bible only is the reliable source of spiritual & doctrinal truth; (4) all beliefs in conflict with Biblical teachings are false.---

The first thing to understand about God is that He is eternal and that He created the universe. The only book inspired by God is the Bible. Only the Bible has a record of how the creation came about. In Genesis 1:1 God simply states, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

Many speculate that the intricate creation and everything within came about in some other manner, but no proof is offered of such a possibility. An idea or a principle never created anything. To create life requires power. There is no such thing as action without something acting any more than there is motion without movement. Will a watch, which is much less complex than the universe, reassemble itself if you put it in a shoebox & shake it a few million years? Yet some want us to believe that creation came about with no source of power to put it in order??

Among the attributes of God are: (1) He is omnipotent as seen in the creation [Jeremiah 32:17] and the resurrection [Acts 10:40]; (2) He is omnipresent as seen in His care of the creation, including those who reject Him, "for he makes his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sends rain on the just and on the unjust," [Matthew 5:45]; (3) He is omniscient, knowing in advance all things past, present, and future [Acts 15:18].

Conclusion: The Eternal God willed and provided salvation for sinful man in eternity, 1 Peter 1:18-20; He offered His Son as the sacrifice for sinful man in time, John 3:16-18; He sends His Spirit to indwell all who will believe in Jesus Christ as their Savior, John 3:6 & Romans 8:9; Jesus only is qualified to act as mediator between God and man, 1 Timothy 2:5-6.
