Statewide AMBER Alert System Test Scheduled for Friday

Test Scheduled on National AMBER Alert Day

The Montana Department of Justice reminds media and the public a statewide test of the Montana AMBER Alert System has been scheduled for National AMBER Alert Day - January 13 - at approximately 10:00 am. This will be an end-to-end live system test and should include cell phone alerting.

Montana's AMBER Alert system is activated to alert the public when law enforcement believes a child has been abducted under life-threatening circumstances. Since Montana's AMBER Alert Program was established in 2003, there have been 32 AMBER Alerts issued; seven of them were for abductions that occurred in other states or Canada. Due to strong public participation, all 47 children were located.
Tragically, four were located deceased.

Save Our School Talent Shows

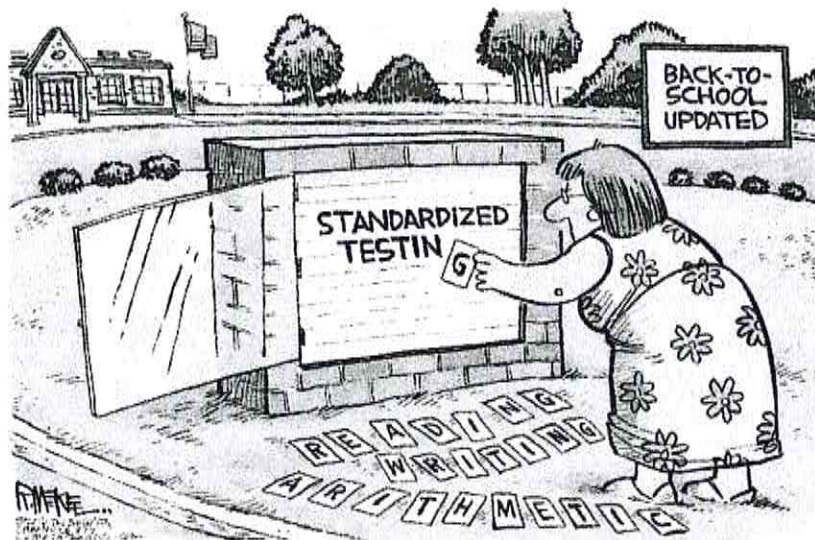

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

It seems there's a shortage of the old Hollywood Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland "Hey, kids - let's put on a show!"
exuberance.

My son Gideon (a.k.a. magician The Amazing Gideon) was devastated to learn that lack of participation resulted in his middle school's talent show being canceled twice in the same school year.

I'm sure the singers, dancers, acrobats, musicians, comedians and martial artists at most schools are thriving; but surely Gideon's isn't the only school where a problem exists.

Extracurricular clubs, afterschool jobs and dysfunctional families can play havoc with talent show participation. And the teen years can be an awkward time, when if you're not the star quarterback or the Class Brain, you just want to stay under the radar and survive the experience. For many teens, a talent show is like Public Speaking and Raising Your Hand In Class had a baby and YOU have to change its diaper.

It's ironic. Youngsters are all "ME ME ME"...but they don't want to do anything that makes them SELF-CONSCIOUS.

Perhaps talent shows have also lost some of their appeal because we've lowered the bar so much. Who needs arduous rehearsals of human pyramid building or intricate rope twirling if you can get a blue ribbon just for picking the wrong bathroom?

I can understand school administrators observing caution in regard to wardrobe malfunctions and song lyrics, but maybe they could loosen up on other restrictions that limit talent show participation. You know, rules such as "We welcome one-man bands, as long as they are DIVERSE in nature."

Perhaps faculty members could be a little more enthusiastic about drumming up interest. I understand the "quality control" issues that can make try-outs an ordeal. There's a YouTube video titled "12 year old nails it during a middle school talent show," but what teachers so often encounter could better be described as "12 year old DUCT TAPES it during a middle school talent show."

Parents should encourage their children to come outside their comfort zones and share their talents, even if it's only in the Synchronized Sighing And Rolling The Eyes category.

Talent shows are indispensable for many reasons. They can build self-esteem, confidence and teamwork. If you're truly destined to be a star, they can be a splendid launching pad. If you're probably fated to have a humdrum adult life, they can provide that one uninhibited blaze of glory you'll treasure for decades. If you want to RE-BRAND yourself as the TALENTED kid instead of the fat kid or the clumsy kid or the booger-eating kid, here's your chance. (Unless, of course, your stool disintegrates under you while you're juggling hardened mucus.)

Some communities tout talent shows as a way to combat juvenile delinquency. Sure, I can see that. ("Go knocking down mailboxes with the gang? Nah, nothing sticks it to The Man like reciting 'I'm a little teapot, short and stout' in front of 500 parents. Power to the people!")

Let's all celebrate the good things about talent shows - just as long as the participants don't go power-mad.

"Thank you, thank you for your applause. Now that you've turned me into a CELEBRITY for making my ventriloquist dummy sound vaguely like the shop teacher with sinus congestion and a paper bag over his head, I feel eminently qualified to second-guess the class treasurer's records, reassign the lunch lady's parking space and..."

Do You Know the Truth... Church, definition and origin of

----We believe the following: (1) the Bible was given by the inspiration of God as stated in 2 Timothy 3:16-17; (2) all statements made in this and any ensuing articles will be based on what the Bible says; (3) the Bible only is the reliable source of spiritual & doctrinal truth; (4) all beliefs in conflict with Biblical teachings are false.---

Definition of church: The term "church" in the scriptures is translated from a Greek word meaning, "to call out" and is translated "assembly" in numerous scripture references. In each and every place the word "church" is used it refers to a local, visible assembly or gathering. This definition eliminates any possibility of a universal church consisting of every believer in Christ. Since 'church' or 'assembly' always means local, and universal always means global or everywhere, the two terms cannot logically refer to the same entity. Using 'universal church' together is equivalent to saying 'all-over local', which obviously makes no sense.

Origin of the church: Jesus started His church during His personal ministry. Remember that 'church' means to 'to call out.' In Matthew 4:17-22 we clearly see Jesus calling out certain men to follow Him shortly after His baptism by John the Baptist. This means that the church did not originate on the Day of Pentecost. In fact, in Acts 1:15-22 we see the church assembled and conducting business prior to the day of Pentecost. In that business meeting it is noted that the requirements for one to be an apostle he had to have been baptized by John the Baptist. A study of the Biblical record reveals that many of the first disciples Christ called were men who had repented at the preaching of John the Baptist and had been baptized by him.

Conclusion: Biblical evidence shows: (1) the church was established by Christ during His earthly ministry, NOT on the Day of Pentecost; (2) the church is always a local body of saved, baptized believers and never a universal, invisible body.
