QUILT SHOW

First annual quilt show hosted by The No. 1 Ladies Quilt Shop and friends. It will take place the Thursday, Friday and Saturday of labor day weekend (August 31, and September, 1 and 2). We are looking for local businesses that would be willing to have quilts on display in their business, and then we are looking for quilters who are willing to have their quilts on display. Quilts can be antique, previously made or new for the show. We will also accept table runners and wall hangings. There will be no charge for the quilt show and we are not going to judge quilts. This is just going to be a "show and tell" quilt show. If you have a quilt you want to show and would like to sell it you can add a for sale sign. Businesses and quilt owners will work together on how best to display your quilt. We thought this would be a wonderful way to show quilts and include businesses around town. For more information please contact the quilt store. 683-5884. Thank you! Veva and friends

Pima Medical Institute Becomes only Accredited Veterinary Technician Program in Montana

Pima Medical Institute is proud to announce the recent programmatic accreditation of its Veterinary Technician program in Dillon, Montana, which is offered in collaboration with the University of Montana Western. It is the only accredited veterinary technician program offered in the state of Montana.

The American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) just confirmed Pima Medical's new accreditation in late April. The campus is institutionally accredited by the Accrediting Bureau of Health Education Schools.

"Our collaboration with the University of Montana Western is a shining example of how educational efficiencies and outcomes improve with a unified alliance; making student success the first priority," said Pima Medical Institute President and CEO, Fred Freedman. "UMW has been a valuable partner. Jobs have been created and successful graduates will enrich their Montana communities. We are thrilled to play a part in this success story."

Receiving AVMA accreditation helps to elevate a program and validates to employers that it's meeting a higher standard of instructional achievement for veterinary medical education in the United States.

"Institutions that earn accreditation confirm their commitment to quality and continuous improvement through a rigorous and comprehensive peer review," according to the AVMA. The accreditation process is a voluntary one that involves site inspections, curriculum, faculty, and financial reviews, outcomes and other factors.

"Montana has been trying to get a vet tech program for a long time," said Pima Medical Institute Veterinary Technician Program Director, Dr. Jan Winderl. "Vets have been calling us two to three times a month asking about our graduates. The whole state is aware of this program and anxious to hire trained vet techs. Now Montanans won't have to leave the state to get their educations."

With AVMA accreditation, Pima Medical graduates will be able to sit for the Veterinary Technician National Examination (VTNE). The exam tests graduates for skills and knowledge, and even though the state of Montana does not currently require a veterinary technician to be licensed, as most other states do, it may in the near future, said Dr. Rick Scherr, a member of the Montana Veterinary Medical Association's Veterinary Technician Committee and founder of Big Sky Animal Medical Center in Great Falls, MT.

"It's really about consistency of care," Scherr said. "Veterinary technicians are nurses—animal nurses—and they have pharmacology, anatomy, physiology knowledge. They are taught that in school. They know the pathophysiology and can think their way through a situation."

Currently there is a bill being drafted and will be introduced in the near future that, if passed, will require veterinary technicians to be licensed in Montana. Pima Medical Institute's veterinary technician program in Dillon is currently the only program in Montana where students can graduate and sit for the exam.

"I used to have to fly to Denver and recruit vet techs. Now I don't have to do that. We plan to hire several people from Pima Medical," Scherr said. "Honestly, I want to thank Pima Medical."

Students who enroll in Pima Medical's program start in the veterinary assistant program and then move on to the veterinary technician program. Both programs combined take approximately 18 months. Students are provided externships during the vet assistant and vet technician programs, which gives them hands-on experience at an animal clinic. Often those externships lead to permanent positions.

Winderl said that several of the veterinary clinics that worked with Pima Medical's veterinary assistant students during their externships asked for the same students to come back during their veterinary technician externships. Their skills and training have already become in demand.

"We are educating students with the essential skills they need. They are trained to work with small and large animals, exotics, lab, equine, farm, etc. They're well rounded and prepared."

Pima Medical's vet assistant and vet technician programs were first introduced in Dillon in the spring of 2015. With more than 2.5 million head of cattle and an estimated $1.4 billion in annual livestock sales, it made sense to offer such a necessary program in Montana.

Pima Medical's veterinary technician students learn how to become animal nurses. The curriculum focuses on animal behavior and care, surgical assisting, laboratory testing and nursing procedures. In the veterinary assistant program, students are trained to provide post-operative animal care, teeth cleaning, medication administration, blood draws and more. The programs give students hands-on experience with large and small animals.

The first class of veterinary technician students will graduate on May 26. Students who attend Pima Medical's veterinary programs at the University of Montana Western have full access to classrooms, labs and a surgical suite, campus housing and cafeteria services, and access to university counselors and student services.

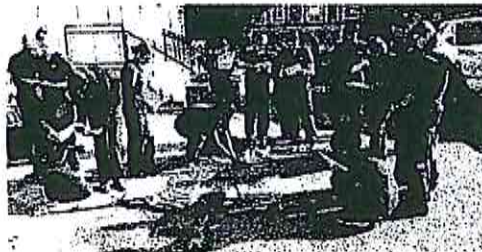

Photo caption: Pima Medical Institute veterinary technician students study the skeletal makeup of a horse at the University of Montana Western in Dillon, Mont. Pima Medical's program, offered on the university's campus, was just accredited by the American Veterinary Medical Association in April, making it the only accredited veterinary technician program in Montana. Letter to the Editor

Within a few days we will have a most important election for a U.S. House of Representatives seat from Montana. I strongly urge you to exercise your duty as a citizen of the United States of America to cast a ballot. We have three candidates in this race. Of the three, Greg Gianforte is by far the candidate with the most reliable credentials; an engineer and successful businessman. He supports a strong national defense, the 2nd amendment, free speech, is against government overreach and is for simplifying the tax code.

We need to think about who would be the best candidate to vote for the common good of our state and nation. Let's bring back decency, respect and self control to the USA.

I urge you to vote for Greg Gianforte on May 25.
Nancy Johnson
