Candidates and Election

By: MJ

The upcoming election ballot will give you a selection of new candidates that have thrown their hat in the political ring. On the ballot you will find two mayor candidates, one judge candidate listed. Note: Chrystal Thompson will also be listed as a judge's candidate however she has pulled out of the race. The ballots had been printed when she made her decision to not run and that is why her name will show.

There are several people that chose to not have their names listed on the ballot but are running as write-ins. One is for the city judge's position and one for the open council seat.

I thank the Tribune for publishing answers to questions they ask the candidates. Everyone has their own way of telling a story. Some people use data like facts and figures to tell their story, and other people chose to use feel good words without figures and facts. Each way has its benefits and speaks to different people in different ways.

NOTE: Dillon's City Charter clearly states that the seated council members make the final decisions on any and all issues that govern the city. The mayor is the person that manages and oversees the wide-ranging workings of the city including employees. The mayor does hours of research and fact finding on issues that the council will be making a final decision via a vote.

A mayor needs to comprehend and be willing to do the research required including an understanding of the laws, comprehend how to work with-in the limitations of those laws, know how to generate a budget, be the leader that helps council to understand where the reasoning, figures, and facts were derived from to produce the budget offered and most of all work for the whole of the whole community.

The budget process is complicated when you have tax dollars and enterprise funds. Enterprise funds are those funds derived from user fees like water/sewer. Those funds are only to be used within the confines of the entity the funds were collected for. There are strict laws on how those funds will be used. Many governments have taken money out of these accounts for other purposes, never paid the money back and then charge the people higher fees for the service. That is taxation without representation. When electing an official such as a mayor this is a subject a person might want to ask the candidate.

City Judge: We see a much different way of telling each of their stories. One candidate gets right to the point, is not a lawyer, and the other candidate uses many words and is a representative of the law as a lawyer.

The puzzle for the electorate is to sift through all the rhetoric and make their decision on which box to check on the ballot.

News from theSports Information office at Eastern Oregon

Former Eastern Oregon football player Jace Billingsley has been added to the Detroit Lions 53-man active roster, multiple reports announced on Wednesday.

Billingsley, a native of Winnemucca, Nevada, was signed as an undrafted free agent by the Lions in 2016 after an outstanding career in the Blue and Gold. This is the second time Billingsley has been added to the Lions' active roster when he suited up in the team's regular season finale last year.

In his final season at EOU, Billingsley ranked fourth in the country with 1,931 all-purpose yards, tallying 863 rushing yards on 176 carries, 506 receiving yards on 57 catches, and scoring 13 touchdowns for a team-high 78 points.

Billingsley will suit up as the Lions take on the Pittsburgh Steelers on Sunday Night Football on NBC at 5:30 p.m. The former Mountaineer was the Lion's leading receiver during the preseason, hauling in 10 catches for 106 yards.

For more information on Eastern Oregon football, follow @EOUathletics or visit eousports.com.

Kevin Asselin, executive artistic director of Montana Shakespeare in the Schools, said "Shakespeare in the Schools is one of the only programs in the country to reach as extensively into rural areas, bringing Shakespeare the way it was meant to be experienced, in a live performance."

Chicago-based director Marti Lyons will head the production.

"'Twelfth Night' is a comedy, but a comedy that bursts forth from a deep sadness," Lyons said. "In this world, like in our world, love and joy can grow in the midst of sorrow and longing."

Tickets are $5 and $8 at the door; Montana Western students are admitted free of charge. Season tickets are $40 and are available by calling 406-683-7101.

For more information, please contact Dr. Judy Ulrich by calling (406) 660-0221.

Montana Shakespeare in the Schools will perform "Twelfth Night" by William Shakespeare as part of the Bank of Commerce Performing Arts Series on November 8 and 9, 2017 at Montana Western.

Attorney General Fox Releases Statement on President Trump's Declaration of Opioid Public Health Emergency

Montana Attorney General Tim Fox released the following statement Thursday on President Trump's declaration of a national public health emergency due to the opioid epidemic:

"Perhaps never before in our nation's history have we experienced such acute public health and public safety impacts from substance abuse. I applaud the President's decision to direct much-needed resources and focus towards mitigating the devastating effects of opioids. I look forward to working with the federal government through my office's Aid Montana initiative to address the impact of all abused substances, not just opioids. Alcohol abuse, and methamphetamine sourced from other countries, continue to be the leading drivers of substance-related crimes in Montana. We have a lot of work ahead of us to get this problem under control, but we can and must find solutions."

500th Anniversary: What Is the Protestant Reformation? (Part 1)

The Protestant Reformation is usually considered to have begun on October 31, 1517. This is the date on which Martin Luther nailed an announcement to the chapel door in the German town of Wittenberg, listing 95 theses on which he challenged a certain Fr. Johan Tetzel to a debate. (We will deal with this later.) However, to say that the Reformation began on this date is to simplify things far too much. It is only one of many events that form a long chain leading up to this great movement worked by God. The ongoing, ever worsening corruption in the Medieval church, especially in the papacy, the rise of the nation states and the waning of the power of the emperors, the threat of Islam from the south and the east, the rediscovery of much ancient learning, and the rise of universities – are but some of the elements which make up this fascinating history. And long before Luther, Calvin and Knox, the Lord had raised up other men in the service to His Word.

The Pre-Reformers by Rev. C.A. Schouls

John Wycliffe (1320-1384)

This Englishman was trained at Oxford University and, through his brilliance in speech and writing, became well known and a favorite of the current king, Edward III. Edward was in conflict with the pope about sending tribute money (a burden laid upon King John by Pope Innocent III in 1213). When Parliament debated this matter and then voted to stop sending this tribute, Wycliffe wrote in support of that position. This was a time when nationalism was on the rise; England was involved in the Hundred Years War with France (the time of Joan of Arc). Wycliffe was extremely popular with the common people, but not so with the church and its priests.

In the debate with the pope, Wycliffe showed that the state has the right to tax the church and thus have the clergy help pay for the war. He saw that the great riches of the church, much of which was going to Rome, was an evil. But then, he addressed other evils as well. Really, he strove for a return to simple, New Testament Christianity.

He held to the following.

Since the Church is the Body of Christ, he rejected:

1. The Roman priesthood as being the very heart or essence of the church;
2. The pope as head of Church with the entire system of priests and sacrifices (sacerdotalism);
3. Transubstantiation, Confession (to priests) and Absolution (the priest's power to forgive sins).

He stressed the following.

The Church is an organism (living entity), therefore:

1. It is made up of true believers;
2. Christ, not the pope, is the Head of the church;
3. God chooses his people to eternal life (predestination);
4. The church on earth contains some evil men (the idea of 'visible and invisible' church).

As a result of these views, Wycliffe came to the conclusion that Scripture has supreme authority; its plain meaning must be adopted; the common people (the laity) should have the Bible. In keeping with this, he proceeded to translate the Bible into English. Unfortunately, he had no knowledge of Greek or Hebrew, but translated from the Latin Vulgate (produced by Jerome around 400 AD). Although not the best possible, his translation was of the greatest importance as this was the first time the Bible had been translated into the language of the common people. It is telling of the state of affairs that this work by Wycliffe got him into more trouble with Rome than did all his other attacks on false doctrine and abuses.

In his later years, Wycliffe organized and trained a number of 'poor preachers.' These men, dressed in simple garb, went two by two through the English countryside to evangelize the people. Challenging many aspects of the sacramental system, they were bitterly hated and persecuted by the church. Quiet evangelizers rather than public speakers, these preachers became known as the Lollards (probably from an old Dutch word that can be translated as 'mumblers'). As a result of their work, many people were brought to salvation. Wycliffe himself was never persecuted directly and lived a quiet, scholarly life. No doubt, much of this peace was due to his favored status with the various kings of England who used him to demonstrate their own independence of Rome. Years after his death in 1384, the vengeful church did strike. By order of the Roman church, his bones were dug up, burned and his ashes scattered over the waters of the river in his hometown of Lutterworth (1428).

John Huss (1371-1415)

He was a great Bohemian patriot and preacher. (Bohemia is part of the modern Czech Republic). He adopted much of Wycliffe's teaching, although he toned down some of it and tried to reform the church from within. He accepted the doctrine of transubstantiation, which Wycliffe had rejected. Ordained a priest in 1401, he soon won a wide following.

Preaching in the Czech language, he sharply denounced the corruption in the church. Because of his sharp sermons, he lost the support of his one-time ally, the powerful Archbishop of Hassenberg. By 1410, Huss had been excommunicated and his writings publicly burned. (Remember that this was before the printing press had been invented--there would not have been many copies of his books in circulation.) Huss continued his influential work at the University of Prague and he continued to preach.

All this took place during the time of the Great Schism. In 1411 one of the counter popes placed Prague under the interdict (general ban, which meant that no one could receive the sacraments or be given a Christian burial). This is when King Wenceslaus (not the one of the Christmas carol who had lived from 907 to 929) stepped in by protecting Huss and commanding the papal order to be ignored. Huss then proceeded to criticize sharply the sale of indulgences to raise cash for a crusade, even denouncing the pope as the Antichrist. This was too much even for Wenceslaus and he suggested Huss leave Prague.

In 1414 the council of Constance convened to try to untangle the confusion in the Bohemian church and to heal the disgusting schism which saw rival popes in Rome and Avignon cursing and excommunicating each other. Reform was long overdue. Huss was summoned to appear before this council. The Holy Roman emperor Sigismund promised him safe conduct but, upon his arrival at Prague, he was arrested and ordered to recant. Bravely, he insisted that Scripture is the only guide for faith and practice and that the only true Church is the community of the elect. He refused to retract his position. The council condemned him and a year later he died in the flames of the stake on July 6, 1415.

This did not end his influence. His followers, called Hussites or Moravians, survived into the time of the Reformation and beyond. After Huss's death a bitter civil war broke out in Bohemia between his followers and those loyal to Rome. This is one of the first of many bloody religious wars which ravaged Europe during the next two centuries.

The Moravian Church survives till today (also in the U.S.) and is active in mission work. Its doctrines are broadly Reformed, with an emphasis on peaceful, loving lives. Moravians founded the towns of Bethlehem and Nazareth in Pennsylvania.

Wycliffe and Huss – these two men were used by God to prepare the soil of Europe for the teachings of Luther and Calvin. However, before their work could really break through, other events must still take place. One of these is the movement known as The Renaissance. We will look at that next time, IHS Rev. David H. Andrew IV
