Dillon Author featured at The Bookstore

Fran Davis, Dillon resident will be signing copies of his new book at The Bookstore on Saturday, November 25th from 1:00-3:00. West of Love a Story Cycle is a fierce and moving elegy to young love in a world that is about to change, in essential ways forever. The narrator, Stewart Simmons , of these linked stories flees a haunted Philadelphia for the beauty of the west. This book presents a picture of the human heart and offers testament to how we heal and how we go on.

Francis Davis was born and raised in Philadelphia, but has lived most of his adult life in the West. A finalist for the 2016 Katherine Anne Porter Prize in Short Fiction for West of Love, his debut collection of stories, he's won writing fellowships from the Ragdale Foundation, The Millay Colony for the Arts and the Vermont Studio Center. A graduate of the University of Montana's MFA program in fiction, his stories have appeared in Story, Natural Bridge and Weber: The Contemporary West, among other publications. He lives with wife Sally Cobau and their three children in Dillon, Montana, where he's an Assistant Professor of English at University of Montana Western.

Hazard Tree Removal at the Birch Creek Center

Winter work has begun at the Birch Creek Center, removing hazard trees from 130 acres near the historic Civilian Conservation Corp (CCC) camp. The project will remove dead and dying Douglas-fir trees, which have been attacked by bark beetles and spruce budworm. These weakened trees pose a safety risk to visitors of the Birch Creek Outdoor Education and Conference Center, operated by the University of Montana Western.

District Ranger Scot Shuler described how the logging will benefit the area. "By removing the dead and dying trees in this high-use area, we can provide a much safer environment for visitors and students using the trails at the Birch Creek Center. In addition, by leaving the larger, healthy trees, we can restore more open-forest conditions that existed when the camp was built and used by the CCC. Removing high fuel loads could also help protect the Center from wildfire."

The Birch Creek Camp was built in 1935 by the CCC, who then used the camp until 1941. The Camp was run by the U.S. Army with help from the U.S. Forest Service. Up to 200 men from around the country lived at the camp and worked in the local area. The men planted trees, fought wildfire, and constructed roads, levees, dikes, fences, campgrounds, trails, range cabins, and fire lookouts.

Today the Birch Creek Outdoor Education and Conference Center brings thousands of students and visitors to the Camp each year. The University maintains and uses all the remaining historic buildings, as well as the modern Bender Conference Center.

To ensure public safety during logging operations, a timber sale area closure will be in effect. The area will reopen late winter when logging is completed. The hazard tree removal is being done by Lorango & Sons Logging, under contract with the U.S. Forest Service. The project is authorized by the 2009 Forest-Wide Developed Site Hazard Tree Removal Project. More information on the Birch Creek CCC Camp is available from the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest and the University of Montana Western.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MONTANA WESTERN FINE ARTS GALLERY ANNOUNCES SHOW OPENING

The University of Montana Western's Fine Arts Gallery has scheduled an opening reception of the new contemporary exhibit in the Corr Gallery entitled "Vocabulary of the Self" by sculptor Crista Ann Ames from 6-7 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 7, 2017. The opening will be preceded by Ames's Artist's talk in Main Hall room 309 from 5-6 p.m. the same day.

Showcasing new work by Washington and Montana artist Crista Ann Ames, the exhibit features her lyrical, mythology-driven forms that explore the complexity of human emotion, experience, and imagination.

The exhibit will be open Nov. 16, 2017 – Jan. 1, 2018 during regular gallery hours. Gallery hours are Monday-Friday from 1-3 p.m., and Wednesday-Friday from 10 a.m.-12 p.m. while class is in session, or by appointment.

The Fine Arts Gallery is also proud to announce the arrival of new works from the Permanent Collection displayed in the Walton Gallery, including: "Fleur Blanche" by Rodolfo Krasno, a painting by Walter Ball, and an intaglio print by Haku Maki.

The event is free and open to the public, and complimentary refreshments will be served. The Gallery is located at the South end of Main Hall. For more information, please contact Aja Mujinga Sherrard by email at aja.sherrard@umwestern.edu, or call 406-683-7313.

AUTHOR CAROLINE PATTERSON TO READ AT DANCES WITH WORDS SERIES

On Dec. 7, 2017, at 7:30 pm, author Caroline Patterson will visit the University of Montana Western for a reading as part of the "Dances with Words" series. Each performance in the series takes place at The Cup, Montana Western's coffeehouse located below the library on campus.

"Dances with Words" is produced by English Professor Alan Weltzien. The series, free and open to the public, provides the community with a unique opportunity to listen to writers reading their own works, including Montana Western student writers.

Patterson is an award-winning author and former Stegner Fellow at Stanford University. She is also the executive director of The Missoula Writing Collaborative, a nonprofit organization that teaches creative writing to underserved students. She makes her home in Missoula, Mont. where she lives with her family.

"Ballet at the Moose Lodge" is her latest work, consisting of 16 short stories that "explore what it is to grow up female in the American West."

The Drumlummon Institute, publishers of her new book, stated, "As her narratives reveal the lives of travelers, homemakers, radio show announcers, mothers, teachers, dancers, shop clerks, and the subterranean world of girls, they take the reader from a ferry dock in Resurrection Bay, Alaska, to a two-room school in the Bitterroot Valley, from brash, backpacking college students to young new mothers on the edge, from the 1920s to the 1990s."

Author Caroline Patterson will read from her own works at the next "Dances with Words" event.

Kim Zupan, author of "The Ploughmen," wrote of these stories, "The emotional breadth of these heart-wrenching yarns is vast, the characters within them fragile yet counterintuitively rugged and complex. Here are stories that explore the darkest recesses of the soul and will resound in your head like the ring of an ax long after you put this wonderful book aside."

For more information, please contact Alan Weltzien by email at alan.weltzien@umwestern.edu or call 406-683-7431.

Thanksgiving: Have You Already Missed It?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

As far as Thanksgiving songs are concerned, "Over the River and Through the Woods" may soon be replaced by rock group Chicago's "Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is?"

According to a Wall Street Journal article titled "The Whenever Thanksgiving," a survey by polling firm CivicScience shows that 16 percent of respondents plan to celebrate Thanksgiving earlier than the traditional Thanksgiving Day this year, and another 13 percent are willing to experiment in the future. (And 24 percent of those surveyed thanked God that they keep an air horn by the telephone for occasions when pesky pollsters call during mealtime. At least pollsters THINK that's what they said.)

Yes, in order to work with the busy schedules of family members and lessen holiday stress, a growing number of Americans no longer consider themselves tied down by the fourth Thursday of November.

Oh, there are still traditionalists, like my elderly neighbor, who thinks Moses came down from Mount Sinai with the Ten Commandments in one hand and a recipe for mincemeat pie in the other. She won't even let the menfolk watch football on TV after the Thanksgiving Day meal (insisting that they honor indigenous peoples by receiving the play-by-play via smoke signals).

Nonetheless, a significant segment of us ARE observing Thanksgiving earlier. The Journal said one family actually celebrated its "Fauxgiving" on October 28 â€' three days before Halloween! The gathering was marred only by the inconvenience of taking the turkey to the hospital for x-rays after fake news of Butterballs stuffed with razor blades circulated.

What if the holiday creeps earlier and earlier every year? Do we need to hear Alice Cooper singing, "School's out for summer/School's out for sweet potatoes with marshmallows"? Will the story of the Native Americans and the Pilgrims resonate so well if a giant rabbit is hiding candy cranberries on the lawn? Would you be willing to consume a turkey that had been shot by Ol' Dan Cupid?

Of course, some families find it easier to celebrate on the Saturday AFTER Thanksgiving; but the holiday could go deep into December. Then all those people who have birthdays on or near Christmas would get ripped off even worse. ("I got you a wishbone with a red bow for your birthday, Cuz. Hope you're still getting me those 'Hamilton' tickets for my MID-YEAR birthday.")

I realize that spreading out the observances helps ease the tension of negotiating with co-workers who ALWAYS beat you to the vacation calendar. ("I know you really want that triple bypass surgery, Hank; but I've had MY heart set on seeing the world's biggest ball of string since last Wednesday.")

And, yes, non-traditionalists are scoring some bargains in groceries, lodging and airfare right now; but the various industries will surely adjust to the New Normal. ("Well, if you wanted your luggage on the same plane instead of on the Mayflower, you should've paid for first class.")

If Thanksgiving becomes unmoored from a concrete date, it might become just a glorified tailgate party. It needs to retain some of its special late-autumn sacredness and other features.

For instance, Thanksgiving has traditionally been a time for introducing your college sweetheart to the family. Rush the holiday up TOO much and you're likely to hear, "Mom, Dad, I'd like you to meet Mr. Anderson. See that gleam in his eye? That's the girl I'm going to marry someday!"
