New Year's Absolution

By Jason Graves

I've never been one to make New Year's resolutions. In fact, I usually scoff at the very concept of suddenly making a decision to change some aspect of one's life, especially after a night that, for many folks, involves staying up too late and losing important articles of clothing in public. The most crucial decision these people should be making is how to navigate their way to bed without ruining the carpet. But this year, I've decided to make some significant changes, considering that it's noon on a Tuesday as I write this, and I'm still wearing pajamas.

Speaking of pajamas, my first resolution is to clean out my underwear drawer. We've all been there. It's 6:00 a.m.our bodies and minds are barely functioning, and we just grab whatever's on top in the drawer where we think we crammed our clean underwear the last time we finally put them away and stopped getting dressed out of the laundry basket. It might be a pair with enough holes to strain pasta. (Try getting that image out of your mind.) It might be a pair you've had since your senior year in high school and now fits like a giant pressure bandage. Or it might be a pair that has lost its elasticity and by the end of the day becomes an extra pair of socks. Life is just too short to wear uncomfortable underwear, and by golly, if I had to choose, I'd rather wear none at all - yikes!

My next resolution involves the way I spend money. In 2017, I spent far too much on pets for my children. Now, don't get me wrong; I love animals. In fact, when I was a kid, my heroes were Grizzly Adams, Jacques Cousteau, and Marlin Perkins. Sure, they were old, weird, and made questionable fashion choices, but they all loved animals - and so do I. But that's no excuse for, how I've allowed my finances to be disrupted by purchases involving, a horse, a dog, a cat, two hedgehogs, a hamster, and a mouse.I never dreamed that I'd be spending this, kind of money for the privilege of constantly handling poop of various sizes. In 2018, I'm determined to avoid acquiring, any new creatures, that don't know how to flush.

Next, I resolve to be more realistic about the condition of my own body.I try to follow the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services exercise guidelines, and, other than maintaining the current contours of my love handles, it seems to have little effect. It's about time that I resign myself to the fact that no matter how many reps I do on the ThighMaster, I'm simply not going to look like Jason

Momoa, The Rock, or even that guy who starred in the, latest crappy King Arthur movie. Instead, I think I'm destined to look more like a close relative of Jim Gaffigan. (I see a wardrobe featuring pants with elastic waistbands in my future.)

My final resolution relates to politics. This next year, I'm resolving to stop getting worked up about what's going on in Washington, DC. It usually just makes me angry, and then I take it out on my daughters, insisting that they go bush-hog their rooms and threatening to sell their pets on eBay. When I turn on the news and hear names like Chuck and Nancy, Crooked Hillary, Rocket Man, Crazy Bernie, or Pocahontas, instead of being outraged, I'll just imagine I'm watching an episode of the WWE-rather than witnessing the cage match that is the US Government. The absurd plotlines are similar, the poorly choreographed moves are equally contrived, and both are led by brash billionaires who've spent time in the ring and have an apparent obsession with tanning and hair products. I'm just glad the costumes are different. (I'm not ready for a shirtless Donald in a pair of flamed trunks and body paint.)

Along with all of my own resolutions, I truly wish, a, blessed new year to all of my family, friends, and people with nothing better to do than read this. I'll close with a, traditional Irish blessing for 2018:

"May, your, unmentionables drawer be full and fresh;
May your waistbands be flexible and non-chafing;
May your excuses for not purchasing a ferret be credible;
May your politics be harmlessly theatrical;
And may you find this column funny so that I'll continue to feel good about myself."

Amen, and Happy New Year!

ATTENTION CITY OF DILLON DOG OWNERS

Dillon Municipal Code Title 6 – ANIMALS Section 6.04.020 requires all dogs within Dillon City limits to be licensed.

The City of Dillon will issue 2018 Dog Tags beginning December 1, 2017. Tags are sold at a reduced rate during the month of December. During that time, the cost for a City dog tag is $9.00 for dogs that are not spayed or neutered and $4.00 for dogs that are spayed or neutered. These fees will increase to $10.00 and $5.00 beginning January 1, 2018.

Proof of current rabies vaccination must be provided at time of license purchase if current proof is not on file with the City of Dillon Dogs will not be licensed if rabies information is not current.

Pet owners who have not licensed their dog(s) by January 31, 2018 may be subject to a fine. If you no longer own a dog please contact City Hall at 406-683-4245 so you pet's name may be removed from our list.

ATTENTION CITY OF DILLON CHICKEN OWNERS

Dillon Municipal Code Title 6 - ANIMALS - Section 6.08.050 requires persons keeping chickens within city limits to obtain an annual permit from the City of Dillon.

2018 Annual permits are now being issued at City offices located at 125 N. Idaho Street. Permits must be obtained by January 31, 2018. Those keeping chickens within city limits without a permit after that date may be subject to a fine.

The fee for keeping one to four chickens is $5.00. The fee for keeping five to ten chickens is $10.00. The maximum number of chickens allowed within City limits is ten.

Censorship at the CDC and Beyond

By Graham F. West

The words we choose are always important - especially when it comes to crafting government policy. That simple fact makes an incident last week at the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, Georgia worth paying attention to.

At a meeting last Thursday, analysts were reportedly given a list of seven words they were not going to be allowed to use when formulating their budget documents in 2018. The offending terms were, in no particular order, "vulnerable," "entitlement," "diversity," "transgender," "fetus," "evidence-based" and "science-based."

Some of the words are clearly tied to questions of ideology. "Fetus" is at the center of the abortion debate, while "vulnerable" and "diversity" obviously have a bearing on programs that might study or otherwise affect underprivileged or disadvantaged populations. The inclusion of "transgender" seems almost self-explanatory with someone like Mike Pence occupying the office of the Vice Presidency. The same could be said for "entitlement," Paul Ryan, and the House speakership.

Even for those who aren't inclined to care about those "social justice warrior" issues (which do in fact affect the civil liberties, quality of life, and equality of opportunity for our fellow Americans), there can't possibly be a rationale for prohibiting one of the most critical scientific institutions in our government from talking about what is or is not "evidence-based." All schoolchildren learn that the scientific method - formulating hypotheses and testing them with experiments to draw conclusions from evidence - is a fundamental tenet of modern thought. It has taken us from understanding the fundamental principles of our universe to pushing the frontiers of what is possible through technology, so it should stand to reason that we'd want the smartest people studying the deadliest diseases to stick with it.

In fairness, there is some confusion around the story. The director of the CDC denied that any words had been "banned, prohibited, or forbidden," yet could not confirm or deny that staff might have been advised to avoid some words. Other commentators speculated that perhaps the meeting attendees were not being given directives, but rather 'self-censoring' in an effort to avoid charged terms and therefore win favor during the budgeting process - a possibility that is problematic in and of itself.

Only a Freedom of Information Act request still in the works might shed some more light on this specific incident in Atlanta. Unfortunately, the story as reported is part of a larger pattern of what is happening to words and information in the age of Trump.

Scientists are being discouraged from studying, collecting records on, or talking about climate change. Health surveys are omitting questions about different gender identities. Objective reports undermining administration policies - for example, the DHS study showing just how ineffective the Muslim ban would have been at stopping any extremist incident in the last several decades - are buried. And websites are designed to make it harder rather than easier to sign up for government healthcare, as well as the advertising money and means for publicizing that process, are being slashed.

Across the government, language, data, and access to all that is objectionable to this administration's ideological bent is being suppressed - to say nothing about the relentless assault on the notion of objective truth that comes in the form of President Trump's lies large and small, day in and day out.

Mysteriously, the most reliable defenders of free speech - those like Tucker Carlson, who launches an investigation into a new liberal student body's language policing every show, or Tomi Lahren, who rose to prominence ripping 'liberal snowflakes' for their inability to process ideas they disagree with - are silent when the voices being hushed by big government want to talk about these particular topics. It's almost as if their outrage is not stalwart in defense of principle, but conditional on its utility to partisan priorities.

And really, the principle should be simple to get behind. Our government agencies should not be prohibited from using terms so long as those terms are not harmful to others. Moreover, they certainly should not be stopped from using language that is central to their mission and work - especially when that work is as important as protecting Americans from deadly emergent diseases.

But that seems beyond the pale with this administration, which is a frightening sign indeed. Just because our president's vocabulary is limited to terms like "beautiful," "sad," and of course "huge" doesn't mean the rest of the government's should be.

Bible Truth...The Biblical Goal of Big Sky Missionary Baptist Church

----We believe the following: (1) the Bible was given by the inspiration of God, 2 Timothy 3:16-17; (2) all statements made in this and any ensuing articles will be based on what the Bible says; (3) the Bible only is the reliable source of spiritual & doctrinal truth; (4) all beliefs in conflict with Bible are false.

We recently mailed 200 pamphlets to neighbors in the general vicinity of our church. Each pamphlet included a tract relating to the birth of Jesus Christ. Each tract presented the fact that Jesus Christ came to become the Savior of the world. The pamphlets briefly stated what we believe and a statement indicating our aim.

Under the heading "What we Believe" it states that we believe the Bible is the word of God, Jesus Christ is the only Savior, the church is always a local assembly, baptism is administered only to believers by church authority, salvation is by grace through faith, the virgin birth of Christ, Christ lived a righteous life without sin then died for our sins, rose again, and will one day return to earth.

Our aim is to preach the word of God, serve Christ in the local church and assist our community with its spiritual needs, send and support missionaries, conduct Sunday school and training courses to educate people about how to get to heaven and how to serve God, support missions at home and abroad, and conduct home Bible studies as often as opportunities arise.

Though there was nothing political in this pamphlet we received the following (seemingly angry) response from someone who did not identify him/herself. "When evangelicals quit supporting Trump – the antithesis of JESUS – I may consider going back to church. As long as you are hypocrits (misspelled by writer...correct spelling...hypocrites), you are turning people away from church. You need to do a little soul searching."

We want everyone to understand that our goals are neither social nor political, but spiritual. We desire to help people understand the need for Jesus Christ as their personal Savior in order to be delivered from the eternal, fiery punishment for sin. As stated in 2 Peter 3:9b, "The Lord...is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."
