2nd Annual Spoken Word Festival

Southwest Montana Arts Council, as a part of our Showstopper Series, is excited to announce the 2nd Annual Spoken Word Festival, Thursday, March 22, at 7 PM at the Depot Theater. This year we will be featuring Dave Caserio, the author of This Vanishing and Wisdom For A Dance In The Street, a CD of poetry and music. A recipient of a Fellowship in Poetry award from the New York State Foundation of the Arts, Caserio works with various community outreach programs, Humanities Montana Conversations and Arts Without Boundaries. He is a founding member of the writer's collective, Big Sky Writing, and producer of a series of poetry-in-performance events: A Feast For The Hunger Moon, WordSongs, Arc of the Communal, and I Conjure A Stubborn Faith, that combine poetry, music, dance and the visual arts. Recent publications include the Coachella Review, and the anthologies, Unearthing Paradise and Poems Across the Big Sky, II. <http://davecaserio.com/>

The Big Sky Trio will also be joining us and work in collaboration with Dave. They are all top-notch musicians, who play everything from jazz to classical. Essentially, the interplay of poetry and music that they present is maintained while the addition of other instrumental voices expands and enhances the performance. It will be a unique collaborative experience.

Tahj Kjelland, creator of Express 2 Speak, is joining us again this year. Express 2 Speak is a program made to help young adults discover new ways to express themselves in safe, creative, and entertaining ways. Tahj uses song, dance, and poetry to help empower young adults and give them a creative tool to use as an outlet. A talented poet and musician, Tahj brings a lot of energy and loves to interact with the audience. He recently spent time with the middle school English classes and also worked in the classrooms with Montana Youth Challenge cadets.

Our last featured lover of words, is Dillon's very own, Debbie Sporich, owner of The Bookstore. Who better to celebrate the Spoken Word, than someone surrounded by stories of every kind. Debbie is passionate about books and we are thrilled she is able to come and share some of that passion with us.

We will wrap up the night with an open mic and invite anyone who has a poem to share to get up and speak.

In preparation for this exciting night, SMAC is offering two Poetry Workshops: Youth Poetry Workshop is Saturday, March 17 at 10 AM at the Art Center, 120 N. Montana, FREE to kids in 3rd-12th grade. Adult Poetry Workshop is Monday, March 19 at 6:45 PM at the Art Center, 120 N. Montana, $5 at the door, or a donation toward the building of an amphitheater at Jaycee Park.

For more information and to sign up for the workshops, please visit SMACarts.org/contact, or call 683-6208.

Recent syphilis cases in Montana affecting more women

A national increase in syphilis cases continues to impact Montana and public health officials are concerned. During the first couple of months in 2018, nine new syphilis cases were reported in Montana, continuing the 2017 outbreak experienced when 49 cases were reported. The increase in cases is alarming when compared to the average of 12 cases per year reported from 2014-2016.

While cases in past years occurred primarily among men who have sex with men, 4 out of 9 of the 2018 cases are women. The increase of cases among women is a concern because the infection can be easily passed to an unborn child, resulting in serious complications or death of the baby. Yellowstone County reported 2/3 of this year's cases with others identified in Cascade, Gallatin and Lewis & Clark counties.

Syphilis is a sexually transmitted disease (STD) that can have very serious complications when left untreated, but it is simple to prevent and can be cured with penicillin. When not adequately treated, syphilis can lead to visual impairment, hearing loss, cardiac arrest, dementia and even death. Syphilis infection can also increase a person's risk for getting HIV or giving it to others.

One of the most serious complications is congenital syphilis, which can occur when an untreated woman with syphilis gives birth. Up to 40 percent of babies born to women with untreated syphilis die from the infection as a newborn.

Dana Fejes of the DPHHS STD-HIV Prevention Section said there are simple steps people can take to prevent STDs. "It is important for Montanans to know that STDs are preventable and treatable," Fejes said. "Become informed about disease transmission and protect yourself. If you are sexually active, talk to your health care provider about the need for testing. If you are at risk, regular screening is essential in preventing transmission and long term health consequences associated with STDs."

It is crucial that syphilis is detected early, reported timely and treated appropriately to prevent others from becoming infected and prevent any adverse health outcomes of untreated syphilis.

To lower the risk of syphilis and other sexually transmitted infections, DPHHS recommends the following:

- Reduce your number of sexual partner(s) or remain in a long-term monogamous relationship.
- Talk to your partner about STDs.
- Use latex condoms every time you have sex.
- Get the vaccine for human papillomavirus, or HPV, which can protect you against diseases (including cancers) caused by the virus.
- Speak with your health care provider about your sexual history so that he or she can provide you with the appropriate STD testing and prevention guidance.

"If you are not comfortable speaking with your regular health care provider, contact one of the clinics listed on the DPHHS website for confidential and free or low-cost testing," Fejes said.

For more information on STDs, HIV, testing, and how to protect yourself, contact your local health department or visit: <http://dphhs.mt.gov>

PARK COUNTY MEN PLEAD GUILTY TO BISON POACHING

Three Park County men were sentenced Tuesday in Justice Court for the illegal hunting and wasting of three bull bison in the Gardiner area on February 28.

Jesse Darr, Ryley Heidt, and Peyton Simmons pled guilty to unlawful possession, waste, and hunting during a closed season.

The dead bison were discovered March 2 by agency personnel in Beattie Gulch, an area of U.S. Forest Service land near the border of Yellowstone National Park. All three bison had their heads removed and all usable meat was left to waste. The bison skulls had been skinned and hidden nearby.

Solving the case was a matter of a collaborative enforcement effort. U.S. Forest Service (USFS) and National Park Service (NPS) officers aided FWP game wardens in the identification of the suspects.

"We're thankful for the help of our enforcement partners," said Warden Sgt. Coy Kline. "The value of extra sets of eyes and ears on the ground can't be overstated."

Also significant in this case, was the use of FWP canine, Kikka, who was integral in the discovery of evidence linking the men responsible to the case.

The FWP enforcement division is currently engaged in a research and trial period using trained canines in very limited applications. FWP currently only has two canine teams as part of this statewide trial program.

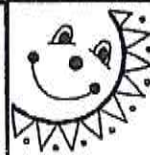

Enforcement Chief Dave Loewen said using canines to detect critical evidence at wildlife crime scenes is an incredible tool that can greatly reduce staff time and increase the chances of locating evidence.

"It is doubtful the evidence in this case would have been detected and located without the canine."

The judge in this case ordered each of the men to pay $2,605 in fines and restitution with a 18-month suspended jail sentence. The men also lost their fishing, hunting and trapping privileges for 54 months with the added restriction of not being able to apply for permits for an additional five years after their privileges are reinstated. Remedial hunter education was also ordered.

Rate of Problem Gambling Treatment Increases in Montana; New Outreach Campaign Begins Soon

March is National Problem Gambling Awareness Month

As the state's rate of treatment for problem gambling grows, the Montana Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Montana Council on Problem Gambling are partnering to remind the public that help is available.

The Montana Council on Problem Gambling, a nonprofit organization which funds outpatient treatment for problem gambling through contracts with over 24 providers in the state, reports the need for help has been steadily increasing. Last year, the Council served almost 1,700 patients compared to around 1,400 in 2016.

"Problem gambling is a behavior that damages relationships, runs up large debts, and sometimes leads to criminal activity," said Attorney General Tim Fox. "People with gambling problems are found in every demographic of our society. Warning signs include a preoccupation with gambling, a need to gamble with increasing amounts of money, and trying to make up losses by additional gambling. I encourage folks who think they have a problem to call the Montana Council on Problem Gambling's helpline today for a treatment referral."

Brad Longcake, Executive Director of Montana Council on Problem Gambling, said, "Issues with gambling go hand in hand with other addictive tendencies, but problem gambling tends to be treated less often. The growing need for accessible resources in Montana presents us with the challenge to do our best to help families and individuals coping with the effects of problem gambling."

DOJ's Gambling Control Division, in conjunction with the Montana Council on Problem Gambling, is collaborating on an outreach campaign to increase awareness of problem gambling and provide help for those in need of support. Coasters advertising the Montana Council on Problem Gambling's free 24-hour problem gambling helpline will be distributed across the state soon. Individuals who need help are encouraged to call the helpline at (888) 900-9979 or one of the Gamblers Anonymous hotlines available in Montana.
