MONTANA WESTERN GRADUATE RECEIVES LAW SCHOOL FELLOWSHIP FROM ALPHA CHI

Callie Kanthack, a University of Montana Western graduate of the Class of 2018, has received one of two 2018-19 Robert W. Sledge Fellowships nationwide from the college honor society Alpha Chi.

A native of East Helena, Mont., the interdisciplinary social sciences major will be attending the Creighton University School of Law, in Omaha, Neb. this fall. Kanthack's field of study at Montana Western combined immersive courses on global politics, sociology, and legal studies—a combination that she believes provided her with the foundation she needed to study law.

"Dr. John Hajduk, the UMW Chapter Sponsor, encouraged me to apply for the fellowship by submitting a research paper I wrote for his 'Montana and the American West' course. Alpha Chi is an outstanding national honors society that emphasizes scholarship and service within undergraduate and graduate education."

The $4,000 fellowship recognizes Kanthack's outstanding academic and community service activities. As a student at Montana Western, she volunteered with P.A.T.H. (Peers Advocating Towards Health), the Rape Prevention Education Task Force, and the Women's Resource Center.

"Callie received this award in competition with students from colleges and universities around the country, all of whom are in the top 10% of their classes, making this a very impressive accomplishment," said History, Philosophy, and Social Sciences Professor John Hajduk.

According to the Alpha Chi website, the purpose of the society is to "promote academic excellence and exemplary character among college and university students and to honor those who achieve such distinction."

With around 300 chapters across the country, the society actively promotes academic excellence, undergraduate and graduate research, campus academic dialogue, and civic engagement.

"This is a well-deserved honor for Callie, and to be among the top six Alpha Chi fellowship recipients is a very exciting accomplishment," said University of Montana Western Chancellor Beth Weatherby.

Kanthack feels the support she received as part of the one-course-at-a-time format of the Experience One program at Montana Western has made a positive impact on her future.

"I am grateful for the opportunity to be a member of Alpha Chi and likewise beyond thankful for Dr. Hajduk's continued support for student academic success," said Kanthack.

SB 153 Went Into Effect May 19, 2017

Today, the Montana Department of Justice announced the results of a survey which indicated at least 197 alleged offenders have been charged with felony strangulation since May 19, 2017.

During the last legislative session, SB 153 was drafted by the Montana Department of Justice in concert with the Yellowstone County Attorney's Office and carried by Senator Margie MacDonald-D, Billings. The bill established that it's a felony offense of strangulation if a person "purposefully or knowingly impedes the normal breathing or circulation of the blood of a partner or family member by applying pressure on the throat or neck of the partner or family member, or blocks air flow to the nose and mouth of the partner or family member."

Montana's old law did not distinguish strangulation from other crimes of assault. To convict a person of felony assault by strangulation, prosecutors had to prove a victim suffered a substantial risk of death or serious bodily injury. This was often very difficult to prove, as injuries are often internal, and not always immediately apparent.

"SB 153 gave Montana's law enforcement and prosecutors the tool they needed to address serial domestic violence in our state," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "Non-lethal instances of strangulation are a particularly dangerous form of abuse, and a red flag for identifying future lethal violence in abusive relationships. The new law has and will save lives by dealing with offenders who engage in this abusive behavior," Attorney General Fox added.

The Yellowstone County Attorney's Office reported prosecuting 69 cases of felony strangulation since the new law was enacted. "Previously, Montana was one of a small minority of states across the country lacking a specific strangulation law," said Yellowstone County Attorney Scott Twito. "There was a gap in our aggravated assault law which didn't provide domestic abuse victims the protection they needed."

Bill sponsor Senator Margie MacDonald, D-Billings, said, "Lives will be saved due these arrests. There is a high correlation between strangulation attempts and subsequent homicides. In the past, abusers were simply returned to their homes and relationships without being held accountable for these dangerous, violent assaults, and too often, we would see the victim again in the emergency room or the morgue."

In 2016, the Attorney General's Office held a series of crime victim forums across the state to give victims an opportunity to speak about their experiences with the justice system, as well as their thoughts on how victims might be better served in the future. After hearing disturbing testimony from two victims in Missoula who were strangled by the same man, Attorney General Fox made it a priority to work with county attorneys and legislators to make strangulation a felony offense in Montana.

Attorney General Fox Leads Coalition Supporting Stiffer Penalties for Irresponsible Drug Manufacturers

Montana Attorney General Tim Fox, along with the attorneys general of Ohio and Washington, led a bipartisan coalition of 39 state and territory attorneys general calling on congressional leaders to promptly pass measures to help hold opioid manufacturers accountable for their role in the opioid epidemic and stem diversion.

The coalition sent a letter to the chair and ranking member of the Health, Education, Labor and Pensions Committee as well as the Judiciary Committee, the committees of jurisdiction, urging them to pass the S.2456, the Comprehensive Addiction and Recovery Act (CARA) 2.0, and S.2440, the Comprehensive Addiction Reform, Education, and Safety (CARES) Act.

"Diversion of prescription opioids has devastated families across the country, including here in Montana," said Attorney General Tim Fox. "The consequences of turning a blind eye toward suspicious opioid orders cannot merely be a cost of doing business. These bills will help states like ours hold opioid manufacturers appropriately accountable for their actions."

Opioid manufacturers have a duty to ensure they take steps to prevent drugs from entering the illicit market. Among other provisions, CARA 2.0 and the CARES Act increase penalties on drug manufacturers failing to report suspicious transactions and maintain effective controls against diversion of their drugs to the illicit market. The bills would increase the civil penalty from $10,000 to $100,000 per violation for negligence in reporting suspicious activity and double the criminal penalty to $500,000 for companies which willfully disregard or knowingly fail to keep proper reporting systems or fail to report suspicious activity.

For more information, click on CARA 2.0, CARES Act, or congress.gov.
