Help! We Need These Apps For Spring!

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

"In spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of wearing out his thumbs on the keyboard." - with apologies to Alfred, Lord Tennyson.

Late
last autumn
I finally upgraded to a smartphone.
Although some of my relatives still cling to older

communications devices ("That pharmacy would get a lot more of my business if they skipped all this high-tech folderol and learned the virtues of tin cans and a really long string..."). I am like a hog feeding at the trough of apps.

I just wish there were more apps designed specifically to help us navigate the trials and tribulations of springtime. Attention, software developers! Here are some apps we really, really need:

1. A variation of the venerable cellphone flashlight. This one would use advanced algorithms to produce just the right wavelengths of light to counteract the glare from pale, white wintertime skin that is suddenly being exposed again.

2. A comical graphics app that portrays Mother Nature as a stereotypical cat. ("I think I'll make it hot...I think I'll make it cold...I think I'll make it hot...I think I'll make it cold...Oh, have some hairballs the tornado dragged in...")

3. An app that notifies your local undertaker that you can now die happy because you've cut your lawn 1/16 of an inch shorter than that &^%$# at the end of the street.

4. An app that scans a saliva sample and searches an international database until it finds the obscure Achilles heel of all your friends and acquaintances who suffer no ill effects

5. Hijacking the same sentiment, an app that summons a convertible by remote control - and sends it crashing through the front door of the Big Pharma execs who turn out all those ineffectual over-the-counter antihistamines, decongestants and cough remedies!

6. An unflinching app that compares Asian education to the last couple of months of the American school year, with all the movies, "wander around outside" days and "Dress up like all those old fogeys from 2009 who knew Abe Lincoln personally" days.

7. An app to forecast the exact date of your first catastrophic flip-flop incident of the season (and the likelihood of the ER attendants being in a committed relationship).

8. An app to make up cheerful "happily ever after"

stories about all those adorable bunnies and chicks who were forgotten after the last Easter candy was gobbled down.

9. An app to send a false alarm and save you from buckling down and doing that dreaded Spring Cleaning. Don't settle for something mundane like a nuclear missile headed for Hawaii. You could have a bulletin like "The Titanic has suddenly risen and is on a collision course with Ohio! Forget cleaning out the garage!"

If anyone has already designed one of the aforementioned apps, please let me know so credit can be given.

I'll even give you another assignment: design an app to produce enough white noise to drown out the people who grouse, "Stop staring at that screen and admire all the weeds and bugs around you! Dadgum it, get me the string and the can for the newspaper editor so I can give this generation a piece of my mind!"

Letter to the Editor

By: Mark Lesniowski

A Poem for Randy Piper, responder yestday to Mr Francisconi.

On defense 'ad hominem' you plaintively cry,
Yet on offence the meaning of the term you deny.

You paraphrase THE WHO with generous content license, Kind of like eating muskrats, and calling them bisons.

You are beating all the conservative drums with unfettered glee.
Twanging the old Republican saws 'cuz you really, really want it to be.

But paraphrasing the Who to put a dent in bad old Marxism,
Is like giving someone from the Flying Spaghetti Monster Church a full monty exorcism.

Indeed invoking Marxism nowadays in Montana,
Is akin to quoting the 'lyrics' of an instrumental by Santana.

For god's sake release yourself from your straitjacket of an ideology.
It just doesn't make any sense- of course I'm speaking epistemologically.

In summary spending five hundred words on Marxism seems a little dense.
Maybe you should have quoted The Talking Heads, STOP MAKING SENSE.

MINING IN MONTANA

Johannes Soyland

This is in response to recent articles about the new proposals for restricting new hard rock mining and cleaning up old mining problems here in Montana.

First I think we should keep in mind that many of the "environmental problems" we see were created at a time when almost no one was aware of potential problems. Butte looks like a serious problem but here I think we need to remember that Butte produced huge amounts of copper, that made it possible for the rest of the country to have indoor plumbing and not outhouses in every back yard.

To restrict new mines would conflict with many established interests in mineral rights that have existed for many years. It would also restrict the access to new sources of raw materials that may be sorely needed in the near future. To ((make America great again" we will need to re-establish a mining based industry. China has decided not to export raw materials in the future.

The leaching of heavy metals into streams appears to be a problem, but if you view it in a larger perspective it really isn't. Western Montana has an awful lot of igneous and volcanic rock formations. All of these formations contain some heavy metals. All of them erode over time and all of them emit heavy metals into the environment, naturally. This natural emission of heavy metals has to be several orders of magnitude greater than all the mines in Montana. But, as usual, the environmentalists don't like to consider such things. It tends to destroy all of their simple theories.

The Dillon Jaycees are excited to announce the lineup for the 2018 Summer Kick Off Concert. Canadian country singer/songwriter CORB LUND (<https://www.corblund.com>) will be headlining this years event with opening act Tylor & the Train Robbers (<https://www.tylorandthetrainrobbers.com>).

of Southern Alberta, then spent the early years of his career writing songs and playing bass for the indie rock band "the smalls."

Lund's music reflects his Western heritage and rock and roll roots. His distinct blend of Americana-meets-roots-meets-alt-country has attracted accolades from critics in Canada and the U.S., who have called him "one of the best contemporary country songwriters" (Popmatters) and one of the "10 New Country Artists You Need to Know" (Rolling Stone Country).

Lund's 2015 release, Things That Can't Be Undone, was produced by Grammy Award-nominated producer Dave Cobb (Jason Isbell, Sturgill Simpson, Chris Stapleton). His previous record, 2014's Counterfeit Blues, was recorded at the legendary Sun Studio in Memphis, TN, and was the focus of a 2-hour CMT special. Previous to that, 2012's Cabin Fever debuted at #1 on the Billboard Canadian Charts, and Hair In My Eyes Like A Highland Steer is certified Platinum in Canada.

Tylor & The Train Robbers debut album "Gravel" is a perfect blend of gritty americana and outlaw honky tonk. This album has been described as honest, inviting and quintessentially western (Micheal Deeds - Idaho Statesman). Released in May of 2017, "Gravel" is a compilation of 10 original songs written by lead singer Tylor Ketchum. Tylor describes this album as a snapshot of the band just as you'd hear them at a live show.
