DPHHS: Takes steps to prevent West Nile Virus infection this summer

State and local public health officials are reminding Montanans to take steps to avoid mosquito bites and prevent infection with West Nile Virus (WNV). In Montana, WNV season usually begins in July and ends in October, as this is when the mosquitoes responsible for it emerge.

The best way to prevent mosquito-borne diseases such as WNV, or any other mosquito-borne illness, is to protect yourself from mosquito bites. While mosquitoes found in Montana are unable to transmit other diseases like Zika virus, they are able to transmit WNV. The virus can also infect horses and birds, with birds serving as the source of infection for most mosquitoes who then pass the virus along to humans by biting them.

When infected with WNV, about 4 out of 5 people will not have symptoms and will develop immunity after clearing the infection. Among the 1 in 5 individuals who develop illness, they will generally experience mild symptoms that may include: headache, body aches, joint pain, vomiting, diarrhea, or a rash.

Serious symptoms can develop in rare cases with fewer than 1 in 100 of those infected developing serious infections in or around the brain, also known as neuroinvasive disease. Last year, Montana had 11 cases of WNV reported; 8 were mild cases, while 3 were neuroinvasive cases. Although no deaths from WNV were reported in 2017, Montana has had deaths in previous years. Currently, no vaccine or specific treatment exists for a person at risk or ill with WNV. If someone develops any of the symptoms listed above, they should see their healthcare provider for evaluation and care. As mentioned above, humans are not the only ones that can be infected with WNV. Last year, Montana had 8 equine cases reported. A vaccine for horses is available and highly recommended.

The 4 D's of West Nile Virus prevention should be followed to reduce the chance of mosquito bites.

1. DEET: Use insect repellent such as DEET or picaridin
2. Drain: Drain standing water around your house to prevent mosquito breeding
3. Dawn/Dusk: Mosquitoes are most active during dawn and dusk. Stay inside or take precautions to prevent mosquito bites during these times
4. Dress: When possible, wear long sleeved shirts and pants to protect yourself from bites

"As we approach WNV season, we encourage everyone to take the proper precautions to prevent mosquito bites when outdoors," stated DPHHS epidemiologist Erika Baldry. For more information about WNV, please visit the DPHHS website at: www.dphhs.mt.gov

Electricity - unplugged

by: Joe Barnhart

Electricity may confuse you the way real work baffles Congress. This is your own fault; but don't beat yourself up. Congressmen still get paid. Electrical veterans, acting nonchalantly like they just brushed their teeth, claim the power sparking from duplex wall outlets is merely frenetic electrons hurling down a semi-rigid wire faster than a greased pig on a playground slide. Those amp-huggers would say anything after a couple of beers.

You might ask, "How does electricity work?" A very childish question now isn't it? Something a third grader might ask. I'm no better. I ask questions like, "Who tracked in that dirt? I didn't."

Electricity needs slippery electrons that can't be seen even if you'd been drinking all night. This is quite a quandary, much like ordering French fries and getting onion rings. Noted scientists insist electrons exist and can be created, moved, measured, fluorinated, and sold en masse to unsuspecting souls.

Electrons are amazing. If you tell one, "Hey, your mama wears army boots!" it won't care. Electrons have no feelings -- one characteristic setting them apart in the animal kingdom. Another is the lack of reproductive organs. As if anyone cares.

You create electrons by shuffling feet across carpeting or the preferred spinning method. Fill a bucket with water and, out in your front yard, spin it as fast as you can. No, much faster. Hydroelectric plants do exactly this with gigantic turbines, slinging electrons out like nobody's business. And people say disposable diapers are cool!

Elections travel in two ways - AC and DC. Big deal. Either one wants to kill you, looking to spring out and fry you in the bath tub, or shower for that matter. Pocket-sized electricity is relatively safe, such as batteries and citrus fruit. By my calculations, there're enough electrons in Lake Erie to fill a 9-volt battery. Awesome!!

As an electricity consumer, let's analyze your typical electric bill:

- 12232.89000 KW = a meaningless value left-over from the Clinton/Lewinski affair.
- 23 1/2 joules = packaging costs. A joule is like a sheet of denatured butcher paper.
- 85.4 hectares/second = the velocity of how quickly your electrons arrive.

We could reminisce about other electrical concepts like rancid bratwurst (i.e. "Harriett, the #!@#&%$ deep freeze died again!"). But why bother? It's gibberish anyway. Suffice to say electrical power is a very complex organism traveling along the maze of power distribution wires lacing into a Mecca of unrelenting power dissemination. Just remember, electricity is like a plugged toilet. Don't mess with it yourself, for reasons that aren't always apparent.
