When the Government Knows What's Best For You

By Rick Jensen

When government "nudges" people into new behaviors, resistance is often ugly.

Eric Garner died because a Democratic governor sent the message down the line that New York was losing a billion dollars in cigarette taxes and police needed to get tough on everyone, including the guy on the corner selling "loosies."

In New Jersey, the Hampton Police Department brought in millions of dollars in 18 months selling cigarettes illegally in a "sting" operation, during which no charges were filed, no arrests were made and police used proceeds to buy SUV's, electronics and trips to conferences. Thousands of unaccounted dollars were also reportedly withdrawn from their credit union account.

The police chief resigned.

States around the country told you they needed to tax cigarettes to help people quit. Then they raised the taxes more to help fill their general funds. Then they raised them more because fewer people were smoking.

You create a black market for a product by slapping with extraordinary taxes, eventually reducing the amount of tax dollars coming in as people quit buying it. Then the government needs to find new funding for the extra spending that came along with the original short-term tax revenue increases.

The Tax Foundation reports the 2009 excise tax on cigarettes, from $0.39 per pack to $1.01 per pack, more than doubled revenues from $7.6 billion in 2008 to $17.1 billion in 2010, then starting to decline.

revenues will continue. Of course.

Another target for "sin tax" is your vehicle.

This is not an argument for or against smoking or driving enjoyment. It's just a cautionary tale so you're prepared to pay twice as much in gas taxes than you do today... but it won't be the gas that's taxed.

It will be you.

For years, the federal government has been pushing for higher gas mileage vehicles. So much so that manufacturers figured out a way to sell cars as trucks because trucks are allowed to have lower emission and MPG standards.

Voila! The SUV was invented: a family car built on a truck chassis that's rated as a truck, bringing the manufacturer's total CAFE standard in line with government regulations.

American ingenuity.

In 2004, the EPA decided to hold SUV's to the same emissions as cars

Bureaucratic ingenuity.

Then federal central planners decided it would be great to spend billions of taxpayer dollars on electric and hybrid vehicles that use very little or no fossil fuels at all.

Additional pollution from such vehicles' batteries and their manufacture notwithstanding, millions of Americans agree this is a fine idea and are quite pleased their tax dollars helped their neighbor save thousands of dollars on their Prius.

While you may or may not believe that cars are as evil and nasty as smoking, this has brought us a new problem not unlike the cigarette tax.

According to Pew Charitable Trust research, fuel efficient cars have eroded gas tax revenues for road repairs so significantly that states are testing mileage taxes.

Between 2008 and 2014, at least 19 states considered 55 measures related to mileage-based fees, according to the National Conference of State Legislatures. Vermont and Washington enacted bills to study per-mile fees in 2012.

California, Oregon, Colorado and Delaware have equipped vehicles with devices measuring their mileage to test and presumably market the concept.

In Delaware, an estimate by the "I-95 Coalition" states vehicles with varying fuel efficiencies could all pay the same, $10.45 per month based on miles driven.

In their fuel tax estimate, fuel-efficient vehicles getting 25-45 mpg paid about $6.57 per month in gas taxes.

Electric paid zero.

Vehicles getting 5 to 15 mpg paid about $23 per month.

Thus, your expensive Prius will no longer be a gas tax bargain when states enact mileage taxes. Should states actually eliminate the gas tax, a cool 1969 Camaro could be your tax-affordable daily driver.

Then there's your personal GPS data, which governments will need to track to determine your taxable interstate travel.

More nudging will be required.

Buck & Cheryl Decker "Fun" Raiser

There will be a "Fun" Raiser for the Decker's (who lost their home to a fire), on Tuesday, August 14th. The event will take place at the Elks Lodge. Dramatic increases in methamphetamine and heroin found in 2011 - 2017 cases

Montana, as well as toxicology summaries in driving under the influence (DUI), crash, and traffic fatalities for the year.

"The State Crime Lab's annual report confirms what we already knew: Montana is in the midst of a substance abuse crisis," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "The report reflects astronomical increases in methamphetamine and heroin offenses, which have placed an added strain on the Lab as well as on our courts and jails. My office is working with stakeholders across the state to develop solutions to combat this epidemic through our Aid Montana initiative. Clearly, our communities can't wait a minute longer for efficient and effective policies to be found."

Some of the report's highlights include:

- A 375% increase in methamphetamine found in postmortem cases from 2011 to 2017;
- A 324% increase in methamphetamine found in DUI cases from 2011 to 2017;
- A 415% increase in methamphetamine found in controlled substance cases from 2011 to 2017; and
- A 1,234% increase in heroin found in controlled substance cases from 2011 to 2017.

Forensic Science Division Administrator Scott Larson said, "I'm proud of the work our forensic scientists are doing to not only keep up with the demand, but to also decrease turnaround times while providing important services to Montana's criminal justice system. We felt it was vital for this information to be released statewide so there is a better understanding of the work we perform and the challenges facing Montana. Our goal will be to continue releasing this report annually so trends affecting the criminal justice system can be examined."

Located in Missoula and Billings, the Forensic Science Division has 42 employees. It was established in 1977, and has been accredited by the American Society of Crime Laboratory Directors/Laboratory Accreditation Board since 2005, and in international standards since 2011.
