'Body Language Experts': Do They Do A Body Good?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

Nonverbal cues ain't what they used to be.

Once upon a time (unless you were Mr. Oblivious), a little common sense would tell you that a yawning, wristwatch-obsessed listener was bored or that a jittery teenager had probably been caught red-handed at something.

Back in my factory days, we amateurs could even surmise that one co-worker had a casual attitude about authority when he would plop his manure-caked boots on the desk while chatting with his brother-in-law the supervisor.

Not so in 2018. Now the world revolves around a cottage industry of "body language experts" ("earning" an average salary of $65,000 a year, according to the Indeed job site) who pontificate about every handshake, neck tilt, nose scratch and extra inch of stance width.

I suppose there is a legitimate need for thoughtful examination of nonverbal cues when a police detective is struggling to establish the veracity of a murder witness or when the board of directors must choose the absolute best candidate for CEO; but so much of the body language expert business nowadays is keyed toward titillation of couch potatoes who, ironically, display no, well, BODY MOVEMENT.

Too many body language experts prostitute themselves by embarrassing movie stars who are on a goodwill tour to salvage their marriage, or by fueling some partisan political agenda. ("See? While he's 'absent-mindedly' drumming his fingertips, the index finger is definitely giving a Nazi salute and the other fingers are goose-stepping right along!")

We used to aspire to the maxim "Don't judge a man until you've walked a mile in his moccasins." Now it's "Don't reveal your estimation of a man's character to millions of Americans until you've glanced at his 8x10 glossies as you hop a plane to appear on 'Ellen.'"

Can anyone explain to me how you go about hiring a body language expert? How can an employer negotiate with a person who can (allegedly) tell when he's bluffing about how much he can afford to pay and how many other candidates are clamoring for the job? ("Take my office! And my chauffeur! I'll tell Jeremy in Payroll to let you name your own salary. Just stop looking at me!")

Don't even get me started on what body language expert CONVENTIONS must be like. So no one inadvertently divulges any secret fears or jealousies to their peers, the attendees are probably pushed around on gurneys while straitjacketed and wearing Hannibal Lecter masks.

How do you test the EFFECTIVENESS of these Sherlock Holmes wannabes in assessing rolled eyes, folded arms and the other cues? ("My highly paid consultant said you look so tense you could rip the arm off the first person who - ARRGGGHHH!")

I resent the weasel words that experts get to hide behind: "usually," "typically," "most likely." Then there are the "or" situations. ("That pat on the back means the governor is being affectionate OR manipulative.") Great: the president's furrowed brow means he's definitely either thinking about golf OR planning to blow Luxembourg off the map.

Unless a body language expert acknowledges all the factors that could cloud his judgment, he could make disastrous recommendations. For instance, I defy anyone to get through all the allergy-induced tics and mannerisms that my son displays.

"You're blinking that the Vietcong are torturing you with manure-caked boots? We'll strafe the building and send in Special Forces for a rescue!"

Wearing Out Longevity's Welcome

By Tom Purcell

Boy, are Americans getting old.

According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the median age - the age at which half of the population is older and half is younger - hit an all-time high of 38.0 in 2017.

Why is it rising? Because our massive baby-boom generation continues to go geezer, while young moms and dads are having way fewer kids than American parents used to.

What's more interesting is that the number of Americans who were 100 years or older also hit a record in 2017 - a number that is poised to explode.

According to the World Future Society, we are in the early phases of a superlongevity revolution. Thanks to advances in nanotechnology and cell and gene manipulation, scientists may eventually learn how to keep humans alive for 120 to 500 years.

Though it's great that Americans are living longer, I'm not sure I'd ever want to live THAT long.

Look, I'm 56, a tail-end baby boomer. If I was confident I'd be vibrant and healthy for another 44 years, I might finally get around to marrying and starting a family!

My parents are of the silent generation. They're in in their 80s. I'd love for them to live well beyond 100, so that I can enjoy their company at Sunday dinners for another 20 years or more.

But there are downsides to living so long.

Health-care costs are already out of control and the majority of that spending goes to the elderly. Such costs may become unmanageable as our median age keeps climbing.

If we live 100 years or more, how are we going to pay for it? Living is expensive. Are we going to work 50 years, retire, burn through our nest eggs, then spend 20 or 30 years greeting customers at Walmart?

And what of our younger generations, kids who are notorious slackers? Mother to son in year 2075:

"You're 100 years old! When are you going to move out and get a job?"

Four years shy of 60, I'm already showing signs of fatigue. I don't know when it started, but, like my elderly father, I groan every time I slowly pull myself out of a chair.

Sure, the "primitive male" part of me thinks I could still handle myself if a bar brawl were to break out - but I'd have to do 30 minutes of jumping jacks before I could even think about participating.

Besides, in my experience, life is largely made up of colds, bills, speeding tickets and people who let you down. These experiences are connected together by a series of mundane tasks. The drudgeries are occasionally interrupted by a wonderful meal, a really good laugh or a romantic evening with a lovely lady.

Then the mundane stuff starts all over again.

I don't think I want 500 years of that.

At 56, you see, it seems to me that the key to human happiness is not an abundance of a thing, but a lack of it.

Doesn't pie taste better when we know it's the last slice? Doesn't a football game capture our attention more when it's the last of the season - the one that determines who goes out the winner and who goes out the loser? Isn't a comedian funnier when he exits the stage BEFORE we want him to go?

Besides, if I were to live to 500, I'd have to endure 111 more presidential elections - a punishment I wouldn't wish on my worst enemy!

Forest Service Clarifies Highland Lookout Road Closure

The Forest Service would like to clarify to visitors who wish to travel the Highland Lookout Road (Forest Road 8514) south of Butte. While the road has been closed since 1989 to motorized use to provide resource protection, it is still accessible to other types of non-motorized travel.

"We are concerned for the safety of people accessing this area with motorized vehicles, said District Ranger Dave Sabo, "However, people may still access the area by foot, bicycle, or horseback."

This steep, narrow and multiple switchback road is closed by a gate that was vandalized last fall leaving the road open. Forest crews are in the process of repairing the gate and in the interim reflective barriers have been placed at the gate closure. The Forest Service is asking visitors to respect the closure and not remove the barriers.

For more information contact the Butte Ranger District at (406) 494-2147.

Slow Down and be Cautious

The building of the playground and the splash pad at Jaycee Park is officially underway. A big thank you to all who have contributed in any way to make this happen

There will be plenty of construction going on in this area for the next month and the City of Dillon would like to remind everyone to slow down and be cautious when driving or walking in this area.

If you have any questions please contact Todd Hazelbaker, Director of Operations, at 683-4245.

Buck & Cheryl Decker "Fun" Raiser

There will be a "Fun" Raiser for the Decker's (who lost their home to a fire), on Tuesday, August 14th. The event will take place at the Elks Lodge. If you would like to be involved, donate items for raffles / auction, or money please contact Laurie Blinn (406) 491-2704, Kate Allder (406) 684-5139, Karen Ward (814) 769-6994, or Sara Decker (406) 596-7658.
