MADISON COUNTY SHERIFF SUSPENDED

Madison County Sheriff Roger Thompson was suspended Tuesday by the Madison county commissioners. The commissioners voted 3-0 for the suspension, however, Thompson had volunteered to accept the suspension before the vote. The suspension is for three months with pay after criminal charges of tampering with evidence, perjury and official misconduct where filed against him stemming from a controlled drug buy.

Undersheriff Phil Fortner will take over the sheriff's job until the criminal case is resolved. Thompson's county issued firearms, vehicle, and equipment must be returned to the county until this issue has come to an end.

Thompson was elected sheriff in 2014 after being undersheriff for a few years.

Do You Hate Shaving?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

"Stubble" is my middle name.

No, not really. But I do find myself occupying that No Man's Land...er, LOTS of Men's Land... of not wanting a beard but not enjoying the whisker-removal process, either.

Yes, I'm venting about the drudgery known as "shaving."

Shaving is mind-numbingly boring, and you can't even employ the coping mechanisms you use elsewhere in life. You can't exactly tell your chin, "Yes, dear. No, dear. Is that right? Only seven more shades of mauve to try on?"

Most men can make only rough estimates of how many thousands of hours they waste in front of the bathroom sink. I have the calculations down to a science, because my whole life flashes in front of my eyes every time that sharp piece of metal comes at me.

Even on a good day and armed with my time-tested Barbasol shaving cream, razor burn is a problem. I know how Helen of Troy felt; my face feels like it launched a thousand ships.

Yes, my skin is sensitive. Don't blame the victim. ("Your honor, that pouty 'come hither' face was just begging me to scrape it.")

Gillette Venus razors for women used the slogan "Reveal the goddess in you." My razors typically cajole, "Reveal the Type A-Positive in you."

At least I don't have to worry about the SPF of my sunscreen, as long as there are enough plies to the squares of toilet paper on my face.

After all the fuss, the benefits of shaving are so fleeting. You'd think you could enjoy going out in public for a prolonged time if you just kept five o'clock shadow in the back of your mind. But beards are big Alan Jackson and Jimmy Buffett fans. ("It's five o'clock somewhere!")

Women regularly shave more total area of their bodies (412 square inches) than men; and they don't like facial hair: 48% are anti-beard; 52% anti-side-burn and 65% don't like goatees.

You know that one-tenth of one percent of germs that disinfectants don't kill? Hair follicles try to be just as macho. Even if you use more blades than the Seventh Cavalry, even if you go over your entire face six times, from every angle...once you get out in public, that little Hitler 'stache suddenly becomes obvious. You go from expecting flirtatious winks to receiving neo-Nazi salutes.

I hope you realize this column is an invitation to a pity party and not a plea for some elitist know-it-all to ride to the rescue with a jovial exhortation of "I guarantee you'd come to love the shaving experience If you'd just invest in the proper instrument and...". These are the bozos who promise you, "If you'd just listen to TOP-OF-THE-LINE bagpipes while devouring your premium sheep's intestines..."

Sorry, but newfangled razors are not a viable part of my budget. Ocean cruises are in the same category. But at least while I'm shaving, I can dream about little chunks of me getting to go down to the river and eventually out to sea.

Not so long ago, I was a teenager wielding a styptic pencil. Now my 14-year-old son Gideon has started having to deal with "peach fuzz." He is not enamored of the hassle, which shows a rising level of maturity. Yes, naive little boys 10 years Gideon's junior can't wait to grow up and shave just like daddy. Just imagine their other childish notions.

("Daddy, if I'm really good, will the Easter Bunny bring me a colonoscopy? When I'm grown up, should I leave Santa Claus milk and cookies and an alimony check?")

Recalling 9/11: We're Not So Divided After All

By Tom Purcell

On Sept. 11, 2001, I was driving along the Beltway to a Falls Church, Va., office building when a radio announcer said a plane had flown into the North Tower of the World Trade Center in New York City.

"What a horrible accident," I remember thinking.

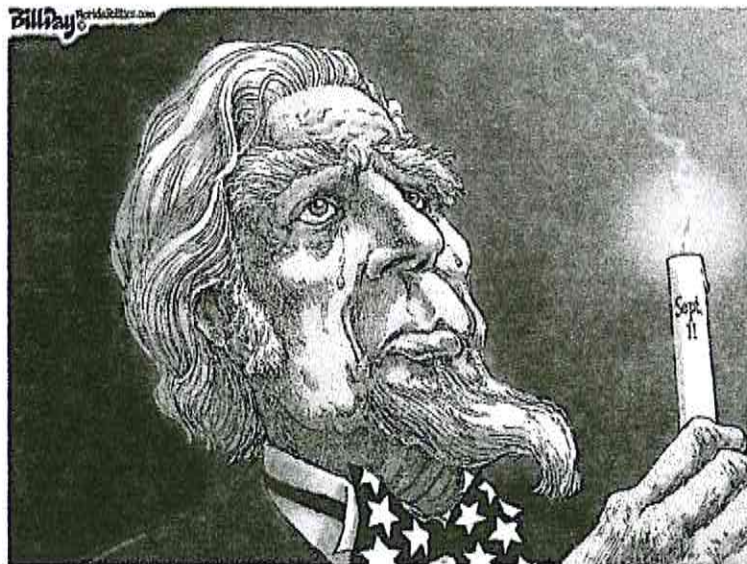

I was doing communications work for a big technology company. I parked my car and just as I was getting situated in my cubicle inside the office building, I heard the television blaring in my client's office.

He told me a second plane had flown into the South Tower of the World Trade Center. Soon, we learned that a third plane had flown into the Pentagon.

We took the elevator to the top floor with several others. Only 9 miles from the Pentagon, we could see smoke billowing into the sky.

Radios and TVs were turned up. Local announcers were relaying reports of additional attacks, many of which would turn out to be untrue.

Dulles International Airport was under attack? Reagan National Airport? The White House? The Capitol? How many more hijacked planes were out there? Where would they strike next?

It was total chaos. Here I was in an impersonal office building as people cried, called loved ones, even prayed aloud.

We all experienced the horrific events of 9/11 in different ways and there was nothing special about my experience - except that I was living in the Washington, D.C., region when it happened.

Lucky for me, I had been regularly attending St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Alexandria, Va.

A small church in a rapidly gentrifying area, its mostly black congregation can be described in one word: cheerful.

The first and third Sundays of every month, a 30-person choir belts out gospel music that would fill even the most cynical among us with hope and joy.

Father McBready, an Irishman of the Josephite order, was the pastor there in 2001. His Irish lilt and wit produced many uplifting sermons - none more uplifting than on the first Sunday after the attack.

The church was packed that morning, all of us feeling the same inability to comprehend the violence inflicted on so many innocents.

Father McBready began his sermon by telling us about a wonderful woman whose marriage he had presided over a few years before. She and her husband recently had been blessed with a son - and both she and her son were aboard one of the planes that struck the World Trade Center.

He said that in the midst of such sadness, however, there is hope: Tragedy reduces us to our most basic selves, helping us renew our efforts to lead virtuous lives. It helps us escape the narrowness of ourselves to join together with others to help those in need.

After the choir sang joyously, 200 people held hands and prayed as one. Filled with a renewed sense of hope, we were eager to do something, anything, to help our neighbors in need - donate funds, make sandwiches for first responders at the Pentagon, volunteer our time, etc.

It's been 17 years since the 9/11 tragedy. We appear to be a divided, cynical people, but I don't buy it.

God forbid such an alarming event ever happens in America again. But if it does, millions of Americans from every walk of life will come together as one to help our neighbors in need.

Just as we did after 9/11.
