SEMI-ANNUAL PASTY BAKE

How often do you have the opportunity to not only enjoy a culinary masterpiece but also indulge in a bit of cultural and historical nostalgia? Well you now have that opportunity. Grace United Methodist Church having just completed its semi-annual pasty bake has a few pasties ready for your dining table. During this busy time of the year what better way to feed a nutritious meal to that hungry hunter or that holiday guest than a delicious Methodist Church pasty.

The really fun part of having a pasty in your larder is that you can tell everyone about the historical significance of the pasty.....the pastry that fed the copper miners of Butte. Be a part of history and at the same time give you taste buds a treat of the old world.

You may order your succulent piece of history by calling Lillian Hegstad at 683-2937

Attorney General Fox Reminds Montanans of Trick-or-Treating Safety Tips

Check Montana's Online Sexual or Violent Offender Registry Before Leaving Home

Attorney General Tim Fox today urged parents to review basic safety precautions with their children before they go trick-or-treating and to check Montana's Sexual or Violent Offender Registry (SVOR) online to ensure their children avoid potentially dangerous situations.

"As families across Montana get ready for Halloween tomorrow, this is the time for parents and guardians to go on-line and visit Montana's Sexual or Violent Offender Registry. Make sure you accompany your children while they trick-or-treat, and don't visit the homes of registered offenders," Attorney General Tim Fox said. "It's important to talk to your children not only about how to trick-or-treat safely, but also about where they can go safely."

In addition to recommending adults always accompany young children trick-or-treating, Attorney General Fox recommended taking children only to familiar neighborhoods on Halloween night. Children should also choose costumes with light or bright colors whenever possible, or their parents should trim darker costumes with reflective tape. Children should be encouraged to wait to eat treats until an adult can inspect them. Parents should throw away any goodies that appear to be tampered with or are not commercially wrapped. For more safety tips, see the Consumer Product Safety Commission's alert on the Montana Department of Justice's website.

Montana's SVOR, which tracks an average of 2,700 active sexual offenders and 3,800 active violent offenders at any given time, is viewable online here. Online visitors may also register for free e-mail notifications to be automatically notified whenever a sexual or violent offender moves into a zip code of interest to subscribers. The registry's mapping feature allows the public to enter a specific address and city, and then search to generate a map showing the location of offenders within a certain radius. The registry can also search for an offender by address, name, city, county, zip code, or offender type. Last year, Montana's SVOR website had over 229,000 visits and 1.4 million page views.
