EVERY LIBRARY NEEDS A FRIEND
As 2018 ends and we look forward to the New Year The Dillon Friends of the Library have many people to thank. We started out with the help of a few generous people that believed the Dillon Public Library would benefit from a friends organization. With their financial contributions we were able to get established as a 5013C which opened the door to other grant opportunities. United Way helped pave the way so that the Dolly Parton Imagination Library could be established in Beaverhead County. Greg Barth at Coffee works had a day in our honor with the monies raised also going to the Imagination Library. Great Harvest hosted a bake day for the Friends of the Library and with those funds lights were updated. They are now energy efficient and safe. We rounded out the year as recipients of money from the Festival of Trees and there will be heat in the basement of the library. Our membership has grown by leaps and bounds (you can become a member for $5.00 per year) Many others have contributed by supporting the businesses and organizations that chose us for funding or by donating direct to the Friends. Dillon is filled with amazing people that work hard, volunteer and have a vision for a better tomorrow. Those people donate money, time and energy to see that others benefit. Often these folks do so quietly and we want to shout it loudly that we know you are there and you make a difference. Every library needs a friend and we want to thank each and every one of you for being our friend. Happy New Year.

Senior and Adult Giving Tree

We would like to thank everyone in Dillon who filled tags request for our Senior & Adult Giving Tree. 40 request were filled both in the community and at Bicentennial Apartments this year. This is the fifth year we have had the Giving Tree and each year all of the request are filled. Thank you for bringing some Christmas cheer to our seniors!

Celebrities We'll Lose In 2019

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

Okay, maybe it's a little misleading for me to headline a column "Celebrities We'll Lose In 2019."

I'm not in possession of a crystal ball to tell me which SPECIFIC 70s sitcom stars, retired politicians, faded athletes, backup singers, daredevilish adrenaline-junkies or award-winning authors are going to kick the bucket in the new year.

I've simply observed human nature and the media long enough to know the sort of trends to watch for as notable people pass away.

For instance, absolutely no later than Valentine's Day, we'll be seeing the first inescapable "Celebrities We've Tragically Already Lost This Year" clickbait. ("Keep your roses and candy, you beast! How can I feel romantic when I'm constantly reminded that the Duke of Fahrvergnugen fell off his yacht the second week of January?")

Workplace productivity will suffer as each obituary brings water cooler reactions of "I thought he was already dead," "I had such a crush on him" and "Hey, isn't this the brand of water that KILLED the (expletive deleted)?"

Invariably, someone will have "created a genre," "revolutionized a process," "raised the bar," "inspired billions," "left an unmatched legacy" and then æ' after her SECOND cup of coffee...

Some of the celebrities we say goodbye to in 2019 will have been on the "National Enquirer" death watch for years, while other passages will be a surprise, both to the adoring public and to those who knew the deceased best. ("Honestly, we thought we could leech off of him...er, enjoy the benefits of his mentorship ... for decades to come.")

I cringe at the way we take once-hot creative personnel for granted until the Grim Reaper arrives on the scene. Then the internet nearly crashes when all the "fair weather fans" suddenly start streaming their music, movies or books like there's no tomorrow. Because, you know, nothing makes a love song more soul-stirringly romantic than knowing that the crooner was blown to smithereens when a terrorist planted a bomb at the STD clinic he was frequenting.

As always, we'll see the unequal treatment of the famous and the behind-the-scenes "fame-adjacent." Newspapers will still print blurbs such as "Although most knew Johnson only as the third husband of the famous industrialist, he was an accomplished composer and worked tirelessly for charities such as...Whoa! Gotta save room for the horoscope and Sudoku!"

Will most of the celebrity deaths in 2019 be short-attention-span news items, or will there be more prolonged mourning periods, as with Aretha Franklin and John McCain? TV programmers and publishers of commemorative magazines are certainly hoping for the latter.

"Are there are any necrophiliacs in the royal family? We could really clean up with a royal marriage to a dead president. Darn that heterosexual Duke of Fahrvergnugen!"

The average news consumer is amazed at how rapidly a comprehensive obituary can be put together. But major news operations are proactive about composing life histories for certain prominent public figures years in advance, needing merely to insert the details of the actual demise.
